Students' Role at WXPN

Discussed by Staff Members

By ROBERT E. SHEFFIELD

Staff members of campus-based radio station WXPN held a meeting in order to determine whether they should remove their station from the air, and to define the role of student involvement in the station.

Program Director Rich Hovey said that since the station is run by its students, the graduates of the station are not affiliated with the station in any way.

"Before I even joined the station, I thought that WXPN operated as a group of students," Hovey said. "I thought that WXPN was a real, live radio station that operated in a real environment."

Rich Hovey and Program Director Rich Hovey had always thought of WXPN as a professional, national station. "I never thought of it as a station that was run by students," Hovey said. "I thought that WXPN was a station that was run by professionals."

And the feeling isogenous

For many, the music of the blues is the voice of the blues, and the voice of the blues is the soul of the blues. Yet, for most blues artists, the blues is an art form that has evolved over time. The blues has been an integral part of American culture, and its influence can be heard in many different genres of music.

S. African Arms Deal

"I asked a Justice Department official if it was true that the grand jury was not looking into the government's role in the arms deal," Frank said. "He said that was correct. Now, they've already finished with the Space Research end of the deal. The bank seems to be the only aspect left to investigate." Case analysts, however, are skeptical that the Justice Department is pursuing First Pennsylvania any further. Some have termed the new grand jury a "whitewash" and an attempt to quiet the press and the U.S. Customs department, which was particularly upset with the results of the original grand jury investigation.

First Pennsylvania spokesman Hugh Stedman and Winston Churchill, spokesman for the bank's law firm, said they were unaware Monday that another grand jury had been convened. According to Churchill, "I haven't heard of another grand jury being convened." First Pennsylvania's legal department is seeking answers regarding the new investigation.

"I'm not sure what the new grand jury is up to," Churchill said Monday. "I can't say at this time what the investigation is all about."

Jacobson said that the term is used only in that situation to alert police and fire emergency squads not to bring people to HUP, but that anyone brought there would be seen.

"We are never closed. Everyone gets seen, period!" Jacobson said that "you can be sure we are trying to find the individual and when we do find them up! It was completely unconscionable and the person will be penalized severely.

Summer Work Study

Koval said that this decision does not consider the fact that awards are given in mid-May for the summer session, before a large amount of the summer employment is obtained. Furthermore, he said, it would be the best policy to ensure the availability of work-study positions during the weeks before a large amount of the work-study population is scheduled to arrive on campus.

Save Over $3500
This Weekend

SPRING FLING is an event for the entire university community to participate in and enjoy, but in recent years its existence has been jeopardized by vandalism and other needless destructive acts. Last year some Quad bathrooms were vandalized to the extent that they were unusable for weeks. Overall, the Quad suffered over $3500 worth of damage. This is money that eventually comes out of student activity funds, and could be much better utilized towards a band, or in providing more activities and entertainment during SPRING FLING. This year we're asking for your cooperation in maintaining the spirit of SPRING FLING as one of creativity and enjoyment, keeping unnecessary damage to a minimum. The 2-key policy will be in effect in the Quad so that only Quad residents and their guests will be allowed inside the dorms. Portable toilets will be available - use them - they're convenient and fun. If you are aware of any situation that may be a security or vandalism problem, call campus security.

Thanks you for your cooperation, confessed him on his walking tour, and said she would probably return to the city next week. Mrs. Kennedy added she had "been in a lot of states lately" but that she did not find the campaign tiring.

Green said that he would continue to campaign actively for Kennedy, though it was unclear why he had waited until a week before the Pennsylvania primary to announce his endorsement of Kennedy.

Kennedy ended his day by speaking at the annual Democratic Executive committee dinner at the Civic Center, where he thanked Green for his earlier endorsement.

"I believe that he (Green) loves this city and cares about his people," Kennedy told a crowd of 1,000 adding on recent proposed budget cuts by the Carter administration, "I could not remain silent and stand on the sidelines while this administration turns its back on the cities of this nation."

Green, who introduced Kennedy, and who may feel the backlash of his endorsement through loss of federal funds should Carter be re-elected, nonetheless said, "There's a time to stand up...and be counted."

"I'm not here to tell anyone what to do, I think they should do what is right," Green said. "I did what I thought was right."

Big Red Still Tough

By MURRAY ROBINSON

The Quakers were gone as it all ended for the full line-up minutes earlier, but it wasn’t enough against a determined Cornell squad that secured the 1-0 victory. The Quakers (1-5) just missed putting one more past the opposing goalie against the Big Red (4-1), instead, only scored just once in the team’s three most frustrating of the season.

The Red Hot Cornell came out and dominated the Quakers from the first minute and scored their first goal off the stick of Peter Rich before the first period ended. Ten minutes later, Pete Prager from the Cornell net, set a goal against the opposing goalie for the Big Red’s fourth total. The second period proved to be the same story for Cornell as they continued to pressure the Quakers from the start, regaining control of the game. With the ball in the opposing net, the Quakers watched as one of their shots made its way out, taking away one of their chances of getting a goal for themselves. The last period started the same as the first and second periods. Cornell dominated the Quakers completely, every time they touched the ball on the other side of the rink. The Big Red couldn’t handle the pressure of the Cornell players, who played a game that was too far beyond their skill level. The last second of the game was the only time Cornell didn’t dominate the game, as the Big Red threatened to turn the game into a drama by scoring a goal from a penalty shot, but the goalie from Cornell was able to save the ball and put the game out of reach for the Big Red. The Quakers were able to tie the game at 4-4 and even the game with 10 minutes left on the clock, but couldn’t take advantage of their momentum and opportunities, but it was still a great effort by the Quakers to hold Cornell to only 1-0. 'We got our season started here, it’s a struggle from there,' added coach Schaeffer.
