Wharton Centennial
To Be Marked in 1981

JONATHAN SELVES

Beginning in the fall of 1980, and continuing through the 1981th anniversary of the founding of the university's first business school and as an integral component of the centennial year, a number of special programs will be scheduled for the centenary. From spring semester in 1980 through the spring semester in 1981, the University will celebrate the 100th birthday of the Wharton School.

During this period, hundreds of students, faculty, and visitors will gather on campus to hear lectures, participate in panel discussions, and watch films and television programs about Wharton.

The University will conduct a number of special programs during the centennial year for the students, faculty, and alumni of the Wharton School and as an integral component of the Wharton School's centennial.

Iran To Debate Hostage Issue

The Iranian Parliament seemed to open debate today on the fate of the last 83 Americans held by the Islamic government after the United States refused to recognize the new Cabinet yesterday.

The Iranian Parliament voted to open debate tomorrow on the fate of the last 83 Americans held by the Islamic government after the United States refused to recognize the new Cabinet yesterday.

Some U.S. officials said today they expected the House to vote this week on legislation establishing "Superfund" to clean up hazardous chemical dumps such as those at Love Canal in New York.

The superfund proposal follows a senator's report last week describing the problem of toxic chemicals as "a major public health threat." The bill's sponsors, Sen. Robert Capricorn Trout, D Colo., and Sen. George W. Smathers, D Fla., reported the bill to the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee this week.

The major superfund bill to come before the Senate this week would set up a $1.2 billion, four-year program to clean up hazardous chemical dumps such as that at Love Canal in New York.

The surgeon general, in his report, said more and more environmental problems are "like Love Canal," where had it not been for the newspapers and television, "the problem would have been forgotten about.

Douglas Costle, administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, testified that "the legacy of many years of uncontrolled hazardous waste disposal may well be the most serious environmental problem facing the nation today."

The major superfund bill to come before the House this week would add $1.3 billion to its four-year program to clean up abandoned hazardous chemical dumps such as that at Love Canal. It would aid in cleaning up hazardous chemical dumps and oil spills totaling more than $300 million from the federal treasury.
CIA Has Long History Of Activity on Campus

The Daily Pennsylvania has filed a suit against the University to block its activities at the University City Science Center. This was a violation of the agency's charter, which forbids domestic surveillance. Between 1963 and 1965, the agency had a professor to help it with the MK-ULTRA mind control project.

A political science course called "Strategic Intelligence and National Policy" helped former CIA Director John McCone recruit students. The CIA has been active at the University. Its work ranged from supplying professors with unclassified documents relating to their courses to monitoring professor's involvement in the Vietnam war. The most controversial section of the CIA's intelligence guidelines involved training for the CIA. Recognizing some of the clauses represented an invasion of his right to free speech, President Reagan asked that a list of guidelines be drawn up to regulate them. The most vocal of those protests came from physicist Michael Cohen, who said the clause represented an invasion of his right to free speech. Still the guidelines were passed and the University became one of the universities in the country to have such a policy in place. The guidelines could have caused the University more problems when the Senate for the Study of Philanthropy was hearing testimony on government guidelines in major universities.

The CIA has long history of activity on campus. A story on the suit appears on Page 367. The Daily Pennsylvania is suing the CIA for its involvement.

Whatever a new season begins, in any sport, the athletes are always questioning the same important question: "Are we ready?"

With one year of practice, and eight games under their belt, the Quakers have a few refreshing days away from the Penn course ready for the 1980 campaign.

When asked if they were ready for the upcoming season, junior Mike Nolan stated, "Not yet, I would say we should be ready in a few weeks."

"I think the team is ready for their first game," said sophomore captain Tom Kachmer, the Ivy co-Leader in interceptions last season, and the Lion's starting quarterback.

"There will be a lot of chemistry this season," said Nolan. "We'll be off to a good start, for confidence."
