Students To Protest Trustees' Influence

By SCOTT HELLER

A federal jury of six men and six women returned its verdict yesterday in the Abscam conspiracy trial. After a lengthy deliberation, the jury found former Pennsylvania state Sen. Phil Snyder, the subject of the investigation, not guilty of corruption-related charges.

The trial, which began in mid-December, lasted nearly seven months. It was dubbed "Abscam" because federal agents had infiltrated the state Senate and had approached legislators with the promise of a bribe.

Snyder, 50, was accused of accepting $30,000 from undercover FBI agents in exchange for votes in the State Senate. He was one of 14 Pennsylvania state senators who were accused of corruption.

The jury found Snyder not guilty of all charges. He had been charged with accepting $30,000 in exchange for votes in the State Senate.

The trial was the latest in a series of corruption cases that have rocked the state and has sparked calls for reform in the state's ethics laws.

Snyder's attorney, Jack Boyle, said his client was relieved to be found not guilty.

"This is a day of vindication," Boyle said. "We have always believed that our client was innocent and that he was the victim of a mistaken identity. We are grateful to the jury for finding him not guilty of all charges."

Vartan Gregorian

In the aftermath of Monday's College Hall shakeup, the University community has been left reeling from the departure of Vartan Gregorian. The announcement has left many faculty members, students, and alumni reeling from the loss of their beloved leader. Gregorian's tenure at the University has been characterized by his passion for education and his commitment to improving the student experience. His departure has left a void that will be difficult to fill.

Of Rights and Rallies

The selection of Tanen president Sheldon Silverstein has sparked a wave of protests across the campus. Students, faculty, and alumni are standing up against what they see as a lack of transparency and representation in the selection process. The protests have been met with a mix of support and criticism, but the message is clear: the University must do better.

Gregorian's Years Provided Inspiration, Set Pace

Gregorian "a distinguished scholar, a brilliant teacher and an educational leader," and "a person who has a reputation for diplomatic scholarship." In Texas, Gregorian had been a leader in the fight for peace with Iran during the Ayatollah Khomeini's revolution. He was described as a specialist in Armenian History of Culture. He was a former president of the University of California at Berkeley. Gregorian "a sense of urgency and dedication to the University," and "a person who has a reputation among various constituencies."

"I feel a sense of loss," Vice Provost Janis Somerville said. "I fed a sense of loss," she said. "I feel a sense of loss." Gregorian was the best choice, yet the Trustees would not support him.

SAILING PREVIEW

Leford Needs Freshman Help to Beat Maritimes

IN KEY ESSENTIAL

Self-confidence is usually not the first sport that anyone's mind wanders upon when hearing the words "intercollegiate sailing." However, for the members of Penn's 1980 varsity sailing team, lack of self-confidence was not a problem. In 1978, just two years ago, this same team was third in the nation. Now, with their season ahead of them, they look to build on last year's success.

"We definitely have a shot at the title," said Coach Nick Pielrowski. "The only thing that can hold the Tigers back is a poor coach. In general though their performance is determined by the coach. But we're doing pretty well so far." The team has been practicing for the past month, and they are currently taking the necessary steps to ensure their continued success.

"We've got the boat well. And we've got a good coach. We're also well-trained," said Captain Jeff Miller. "But we're down a lot of guys this year, so we've got to work harder than ever." The team is currently training in Long Beach, California, where they hope to improve their skills before the season begins.

"We definitely have a shot at the title," said Coach Nick Pielrowski. "The only thing that can hold the Tigers back is a poor coach. In general though their performance is determined by the coach. But we're doing pretty well so far." The team has been practicing for the past month, and they are currently taking the necessary steps to ensure their continued success.

The team is hopeful about their chances this season, knowing that they have the necessary tools to compete at the national level.

Recent training sessions in Long Beach, California, have shown promising results, and the team is optimistic about their upcoming season.

The Season

Harriers Are a Team of the Future, Not of the Present

By BOB GROSSMITH

The Penn Quaker harriers will be heading into the 1980 cross-country campaign much like Luxembourg Season One-2000, which in its underdog, buy-4-3, white shirt of almost 40 years ago. Luxembourg, known as the Quaker harriers, will be back next year, and the future is as bright as the sun in the afternoon.

The team, like Luxembourg Season One-2000, must work on the basics of running, which will be the key to their success. The harriers will have to develop their speed and endurance, and they must learn to work as a team.

Middies, Tigers, Lions In Three Way Fight For Title

BY KEN GOLDBERGER

It's that time of year again...No, not the holidays. It's that time of year again when the annual Ivy Grid Preview goes out to the general public.

The Ivy League is a strong conference, and this year is no exception. The Middies, Tigers, and Lions are all in the mix for the title.

The Middies have a strong offense, led by quarterback John Cobb. The Tigers have a strong defense, led by linebacker Tim Tumpane. The Lions have a strong running attack, led by halfback Ben Tenuta.

The Middies have the edge in offense, with the Tigers and Lions trailing. The Middies have a strong running attack, led by halfback Mike Cobb to early graduation. The Tigers have a strong defense, led by linebacker Tim Tumpane. The Lions have a strong running attack, led by halfback Ben Tenuta.

The Middies are the favorites to win the Ivy Grid Preview, but the Tigers and Lions have a chance to upset them. The Middies will have to be careful not to get complacent, and the Tigers and Lions will have to avoid making mistakes.

The Ivy Grid Preview is sure to be a exciting battle of the best Ivy League teams. The Middies, Tigers, and Lions will all be fighting for the title, and the winner will be the team that can put it all together on the field.
