UMC Given Office Space, Still Pushing for Center

By FLAINE SONGE

The University, which has given the new on the first floor of Houston Hall to the United Student Life Director Jerry Condon. "The gathering places for the student center will be on the first floor of Houston Hall to the United Methodist Center (UMC)," Condon said.

The UMC, along with several other organizations, has been pushing for the creation of a Third World Center on the campus. According to Condon, the center would be designed to provide a space for students to gather and discuss cultural and social issues. The proposal, however, received substantial opposition from the students and the community.

Faculty Probe Set For Oct. 14

By BICK STEVENSON

The university is in the process of interviewing several candidates for the position of Manual, a position that has been vacant since the retirement of Paul Oorenberg.

Other groups meeting earlier this month at the College of Philadelphia to discuss the future of the university included the faculty senate, the student government, and the community. The groups shared concerns about the direction of the university and the need for more student involvement in decision-making.

U. Study to Explore Facets of Philadelphia

By PETER CANNELLO

The study, which is expected to begin in the fall, will be led by an expert from the University of Pennsylvania and will involve interviews with city officials and community leaders.

A case study of the UMC’s efforts to provide a space for students to gather and discuss cultural and social issues was presented by Condon. The center, which is scheduled to open in the fall, will provide a space for students to meet, socialize, and engage in cultural activities.

Smokey Joe’s owner Paul Ryan explained, "We have a rye and Linger Rogers. . ." He accepted the commission, he said, "because he thought it would be a challenge for him to design a mural that would be familiar 50 years from now. "The murals of F.D.R. and Richard Nixon are so realistic that they even communicate to you," he said. "Some people have even noticed them on the streets."

Professor Decaryl Lack of Employee Rights

Professor Decaryl lacked employee rights in his dealings with the university. He was under pressure to sign a contract that would have allowed him to leave his position.

Smokey Joe’s mural isn’t just another brick in the wall

By TONI LEE

Smokey Joe’s mural is not just another brick in the wall. It is something more, a symbol of the power of art to transform a space.

The mural, which is located on the wall between the bar and the kitchen, is a tribute to the life and work of Paul Oorenberg, who was known for his public service in Philadelphia. NEWS IN BRIEF

Iraq Settles Key Railway

Baghdad and Teheran have agreed to settle their differences over the Iranian-Iraqi railway dispute, the first major step in resolving a long-standing conflict. The two countries have agreed to the construction of a new railway line that will link Abadan and Khorramshahr with Tehran. The agreement is expected to boost economic ties and promote regional stability.

Reagan Slipping In West

Ronald Reagan, campaigning in Texas, continues to slip in the polls, according to recent surveys. The former president's support has fallen in the state, raising concerns about his ability to win in key battleground states. Reagan is facing stiff competition from his Democratic rival, who has gained ground in recent months.

Iranian-Iraqi Conflict

The latest foreign crisis, the Iranian-Iraqi conflict, has escalated significantly in recent weeks. Both countries have accused each other of violating international law and have engaged in a series of military actions. The conflict has raised concerns about regional stability and the possibility of a wider war.

Seminar In Touch With Sexuality

A University group concerned with human sexual awareness last night held what they hope will be the first in a series of seminars on sexual freedom.

Participants in the seminar, sponsored by the University ad-hoc Reproductive Freedom Group, took part in several discussions and situational-response activities designed to get closer to the touch of their own sexuality.

The group also discussed legislation which they say is aimed at erasing of individual's freedom of choice in sexual matters such as birth control and abortion.

Rachel MacLeod, a Brandeis student working for the University Supreme Abortion doch Action League, encouraged the participants to register with her group to receive information and work for legislation and candidates advocating "freedom of choice.

MacLeod said she was especially concerned about the legislation which would restrict state funding of abortion's to women in medical danger or victims of rape or incest. The bill, she said, would limit the availability of abortion to poor women.

"It would be the first time sponsored by the group, which was organized in January. According to Dorothy Martin, committee member and co-master of Ware College House, her group will attempt to "promote opportunities for students to have input into their own bodies" and to "start a movement to change the laws.

"Last year we held several seminars before, we had seminars in human sexuality limited to Ware, but this is the first seminar of this kind for the University as a whole," said Summers, who is a member of the Supreme Abortion Action Group.

The seminar was the first this term sponsored by the group, which was organized in January. The Teacher's Task

The complaint is almost universal among students at large public and private universities. Like Peter Karpeles, students say, don't know how to lecture or even how to grade and that the complaint is justified. Poor teaching comes in many forms. Some professors are courtesious, refusing to interact with students in any way. Some are imperious for class and disorganized. Some don't know how to lecture or promote group discussion. A few can't do any of those things. Most disturbing are the few whose class seems not in the least about their teaching or their students. The professor who regards teaching as a chore is probably not among the majority here. Most faculty who don't care in the least about their teaching or scholarship, however, are not the majority. Made up of students and faculty, the Cartel, although in over his head, was basically a decent man with good intentions. Crises left him with no time to campaign. Of course, the turkey down the row, who are Trotskyites, was a person of interest until his attentions were turned elsewhere by the Iranian hostage issue to political ambitions. He hid exploited the Iranian hostage issue to political ambitions. He hid exploited the Iranian hostage issue to political ambitions. He hid."
The space is good and it is good to have all five organizations there. It promotes interaction among all students, and also makes the University more aware of minority-oriented activities if they take place in one central location. Gregorian's resignation is slowing negotiations for the creation of the Center.

"With Gregorian resigning, we will probably have to initiate further negotiations with someone who will probably have to initiate further negotiations with someone who will be totally new and who won't want to make any commitments yet," Brooks said.

"The Third World Center will be a place to call our own," Orendain said. Orendain, president of MEChA.

Armed Robber Suspected In Two Campus Holdups

A parking lot attendant was robbed of property last night at 6th and Spruce Streets, by a man believed to be responsible for another armed robbery of a student last Wednesday night.

A 6'2" male with a six foot tall body weight of 146 pounds, 20 to 25 years old, approached the attendant and pulled out a small pistol. University police and Phillies law enforcement officers arrived on the scene and ran north on 33rd Street. No arrests were made.

Police believe the same man involved in the robbery of a student in front of the Law School dormitory on the 5400 block of Sansom Street Wednesday night.

There were no injuries in the inci-

Robberies on campus have increased dramatically compared to the same period last year, University Police Captain John Hart said yesterday. Hart said there have been 25 robberies since August 28 as compared with one in all of September last year.

Several robberies have involved gold chains ripped from the necks of students. Hart said that Friday's has brought up to 24 in September of last year. Property theft and stolen purses and wallets were the only crimes which had gone down slightly.

Hope Seen for Transit Improvements

By LAURIE JUBELIRF.R

According to a recent study conducted by two University professors, many mass transit commuters would be willing to pay up to $1.50 for "acceptable" mass transit services. Studies have suggested possibilities for improving transit systems. Besides, their findings on what people would be willing to pay, that transit systems do not have to run at a deficit all the time.

Looking at Philadelphia's SEPTA system, which recently increased its bus fare from 50 to 65 cents, the professors studied possibilities for its improvement by examining other self-sustaining systems. In their research on self-sustaining public transportation services, Morlok and Viton examined the Chicago and New York subway and the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey Transit Corporation and the Linscheid-Ri-

Speed Line. These services are privately run and charge three times the normal city-stay fare, but are a better de-designed system, according to Viton.

In order to improve SEPTA, higher prices and better quality service can be in-reduced in selected areas where passengers are willing to pay the price, Viton said. People would be happy to see a price increase if it included better quality service and maintenance.

"SEPTA could probably run a decent service if they tried so," Viton said.

on specific problems and a series of general conclusions and policy recommendations.

The study will conclude with a public conference on the future of Philadelphia, tentatively scheduled for late May, 1982, during the city's 300th birthday celebration.

According to Hochberg, the study will not date from 30 years of philosophicalizing and graduate students involved in the Philadelphia Social History Project, which began in 1969 and which served as the prototype for the Center.

"Much of Philadelphia's population is poorly equipped to take advant of the job opportunities of today," Hochberg said. "This is a formula for potential disaster.

"We're trying to get together as many people as possible to try to do something about it."

Lehigh's Aerial Attack Greets Gridders

By SCOTT LEIBOWITZ

With the College of New Jersey's third-ranked aerial attack having been neutralized last week, the Engineers' offense will be under attack this weekend. The Quakers have been on the defensive all season and have allowed 386 yards per game.

The Engineers' offense is designed like a F-14, using the same precision and accuracy. Junior quarterback Larry Gamble with any illusions about this offense. "They've looked good this week, but they've not defended against us." said Gamble. "The Red and Blue will be hungry for an upset victory."

However, this does not mean coach Bob Sapiore decides to settle for anything less than perfection. "We're looking at their defense. We're looking at their all around this defense."
