Candiates Meet For Final Battle

By the Associated Press

CLARK, N.Y. — Ronald Reagan and Jimmy Carter squared off again and again today in two Orderly and calm political campaigns last night, the president accusing his Democratic opponent of being soft on communism, and the challenger reminding the audience that the use of force should be "the last option." The final confrontation presaged a number of the themes of the campaign against the Soviet Union. "The force-feeding of empire, the use of force to enrich whomever is the beneficiary...the use of force being imposed on arms limitation..." Carter responded. "I have no intention of starting a war or a cold war that would be no less costly than the last one."

At one point, Reagan discussed qualifications, and declared "There's just no debate," and the challenger, "I don't think so." The candidates squared off over their disagreements. Reagan was especially critical of Carter's record on NATO. Carter scoffed at the notion that Reagan wanted to disband the military, and the two leaders had an exchange. Carter's reply: "He's not quite so open about arms limitations...

"This attitude is extremely dangerous and frightening to the world."

The president said Reagan's vow to work "bigger than bigger" was the only school I ever wanted to attend."

"I may not be taking of creeping socialism, but we're seeing it in the behavior of the Soviet Union."

"It is being handed over to a military...it is force and being imposed on arms limitation..."

"Governor Reagan is making some very serious mistakes in his thinking when he said that American troops have never been so important than at the present time."

"I have to be on American radio frequencies, but I can't tell you those redactions: 'the point that the country can't..." (Continued on page 2)

POTENTIAL SATIRE REVIVED

By BRIAN LASK

Along with the presidential election this week comes a new wave of political satire. The student political group, the PENN PLAYERS, will be presenting a new musical called "Reagan For Shah," to compete with the recent Broadway hit "The Three Penny Opera," which was written during the time of the Shah of Persia. "Reagan for Shah" will be performed at the University Theatre on Monday, November 3, as part of the fall season.

The production will be directed by LORI ALPER, who is also the director of the Thespian Players, a theatrical group that has presented numerous productions on campus. Alper credited the success of "Reagan for Shah" to the current political climate and the desire for political satire in the current political atmosphere.

"The current political climate provides an ideal setting for political satire," Alper said. "The group is interested in exploring the political landscape and using theater as a medium to express their views."

The play will feature original music and lyrics written by the group's musical director, MARK WIG, who also serves as the group's music director. The production will be produced by the group's managing director, JAMES MICHENER, who is also a member of the University's political science department.

"Reagan for Shah" is expected to draw a large audience, as the group has presented numerous productions on campus and has been well received by the student body.

Spector for Senator

A United States Senator, more than any other politician, must be able to communicate the realities and potential of a region. It is this unique role which the past has honored Senator Arlen Specter. Whether as Urban Commissioner or as Senator, Specter's legislative history portrays him as a man of high moral standing and integrity.

Senator Specter's record of public service is marked by a diverse range of accomplishments. He has served on key committees in Congress, including the Senate Appropriations Committee and the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence. These positions have allowed him to work on important issues such as foreign policy, national security, and budgetary matters.

Senator Specter has been a leader on several key legislative issues, including cancer research, education reform, and environmental protection. His work on the Senate Appropriations Committee has been instrumental in securing funding for important programs and initiatives.

Senator Specter's dedication to public service has earned him the respect and admiration of his colleagues and the public. He has been a voice for the voiceless and a champion of the underdog.

Senator Specter's record of service and commitment to the people of Pennsylvania makes him the ideal candidate for the United States Senate. His experience, integrity, and vision for the future make him the most qualified leader to represent the people of Pennsylvania in Congress.

The UA's Numbing Effect

By Matt Cohen

I sit down at my computer and try to write. The grind of the day weighs heavy on my head. I feel the pressure of deadlines and assignments. But I can't seem to put it all together. It's as if I'm in a state of paralysis.

I take a deep breath and try again. But it's no use. The words just won't come. I feel like I'm standing at the top of a mountain, looking down into the darkness. I'm lost.

I know I should be writing. But I can't. It's too hard. I feel like I'm drowning in a sea of words. And I don't know how to get out.

I try to force myself to write. But it's no use. The words just won't come. I feel like I'm in a state of paralysis.

Carter Claims ‘Unparalleled’ Education Stand

By ROBERT F. SHEPPARD

President Jimmy Carter, who last week signed into law his first major education bill, said he has "two goals" in mind for the future of education and that he will lay them before the American people in his annual State of the Union message this month.

"One goal is to overcome the educational deficit of the past, which has left an estimated four million school-age children without a high school education," Carter said. "The second goal is to establish a national educational standard that will ensure that every American has the opportunity to participate in higher education." Carter added that the new law is "the first step" toward achieving those goals.

In addition, Carter said, "We will have a national educational standard that will ensure that every American has the opportunity to participate in higher education."

Reagan Takes Republican Stand

By JONATHAN SILVERS

In establishing his stand on education and academic assistance, Ronald Reagan appears to be the Republican platform in his policy statement, adding little of his own to the uniform standards adopted as the convention last week.

One of the few issues that are not key to the election, Reagan defends the party's platform and promises to give his support in most areas of relevance, including education and the environment.

A Republican administration in 1980 promises to upgrade major research libraries, to expand federal aid to higher education, and to give academic deregulation of colleges and universities. Reagan promises that this will significantly alter the landscape of postsecondary education and that it will significantly alter the landscape of postsecondary education.

A bill currently under consideration in Congress would give the president power to sign executive orders with respect to the postsecondary education establishment. Reagan said before a teachers federation meeting in New York last month that such a change would give a college more time for academic requirements, rather than signing it time taken with government reports.

"Our colleges are burdened with the flow of administrative reports to the United States Department of Education," Reagan said before a teachers federation meeting in New York last month. "Such a change would give a college more time for academic requirements, rather than signing it time taken with government reports."

In this election, many candidates are running on their ability to provide health care and education to the people of our community. While some candidates are discussing these issues, others are not. The Socialist Party is calling for action on these important issues.

We believe that the government should be more involved in providing for the needs of the people. The Socialist Party is calling for a redistribution of wealth, so that everyone can have access to health care and education. We also believe that the government should be more involved in protecting the environment.

We believe that the government should be more involved in protecting the environment. We are calling for the government to take action on climate change and to invest in clean energy. We also believe that the government should be more involved in protecting the natural resources of the country.

Carter, Reagan Debate

"We thought there was no reason not to share," said Carter, and then Reagan interrupted. "But it's time to..."

Carter went on to say that he had been trained by his administration not to let the other candidate's defense commitments. He said that he had said "no" to the press. "The idea of Governor Reagan has revolutionized the injection of military forces into troubled areas..."

We're not aware of groups that are too strong. We can get into a strength," Reagan said. "America has presidential balloting. So did Reagan."

The Penn women's field hockey team did everything right in a game against seventh-ranked Temple but just couldn't put the last goal in the net.

"We dominated the game," said coach Anne Sage. "It's a shame, but we lost. "We just didn't make some plays we normally would make but we're pretty happy with the result." Sage felt the game was to be played on Friday, but when it instead was rescheduled for Saturday, the Quakers lost the opportunity to score against McWilliams and the team's offense.

But against Temple, the Quakers dominated the game, and seemed to have good opportunities. To make things worse, Temple was outplayed by Duke's hands-on and good control of the ball. Sage pointed out that Temple had a good defense and was able to deny McWilliams and the Quakers opportunities.

"We made the most of our opportunities," said Sage. "I think we're the better team," said McWilliams.

The arrival of the Irish International team for the Temple-Oakland game was the opportunity to outplay Temple's defense and put away a clear victory for the Quakers.

The Quakers started off slowly, getting only a 2-0 lead over the Owls, and then continued to put away Temple's offense, finally winning 6-1.
