Lagging Faculty Salary Increases Pose Problems

This is the first in a series analyzing the issue of faculty salaries and what reforms could be made.

By BOB RENNER

You asked us to run a series of articles on faculty salaries and what can or should be done to improve the situation. Several members of the administration, including Associate Provost Paul Miller, have already agreed to participate in interviews and discussions. In the future, the Daily Pennsylvanian will feature articles and stories on faculty salaries.

The third male in the car was black, six feet three inches tall and weighed 180 pounds. He had a close-cropped afro haircut and a round face. He was last seen wearing blue denim jeans and jacket, ankle-high dark brown boots and a gold digital watch.

The fourth assailant was a white male, 35 years old, about five feet eight inches tall and weighing 180 pounds. He wore a dark brown sports jacket, a brown open neck shirt and brown slacks. He had brown hair which was styled.

Anyone spotting the car or the men should contact University Detectives at 243-4485 or University Police at 243-7297. All information will be kept confidential.

University Police are currently designing a safety magazine geared towards joggers, Sergeant Steve Heath said.

An informal group of joggers, called the Penn Roadrunners, has been formed by about 20 students to promote safer running, FAS Sophomore Jeff Merron said yesterday.

"One of the main purposes of the group is that runners should get to know other runners so that they don't have to run alone if they don't feel safe," Merron said.

The group, which is composed of both men and women, starts jogging at the Quad on Wednesdays at 5:00 p.m. and on Sundays at 11:00 a.m. Runners go at their own pace and anyone is invited to join, Merron said.
It's Hard to Accept

By Randy Malanud

In his book "The Media Event," Eric A. Berenbaum, a journalism professor at Penn, sets forth a method of defining the media event - he says, a "big thing that is not a big thing at all." He calls it a "media event" when the click of TV cameras or the ding of a sound bite triggers a sympathetic reaction in the media, but the audience is not prepared for it. He says that this is often the case when the media is covering a story, not the event itself.

The media event is not a new phenomenon, but it has become more prevalent in recent years. The rise of social media has made it easier for anyone to create their own media events, even if they are not as well-known as the more traditional ones. However, the media event is still a powerful tool for shaping public opinion and influencing political outcomes.

Adequacy in the 1980s

By Dave Wolfe

The 1980s were a time of economic recession, high unemployment, and political unrest. Many of the events that took place during this time were not adequately addressed by the media, which often failed to provide a comprehensive view of the issues.

For example, the media focused on the rising cost of living and the growing income gap, but failed to cover the widespread poverty that was occurring in many areas. The media also failed to cover the political corruption and governmental ineffectiveness that were evident in many states.

Despite these shortcomings, the media in the 1980s was still a significant part of the political landscape. It played a role in shaping public opinion and influencing political outcomes. However, it is important to remember that the media is not always accurate or complete in its coverage of political events. It is up to citizens to think critically and evaluate the information that they are presented with.

The best Hungarian Goulash Soup in the Free World.

Hidden in a tiny side-street in Pest, Hungary, across the river from Buda, is a quiet little café where a man named Stosh Bzaadnlk makes Hungarian Soup so good people break into tears after finishing their first bowl.

Commemorative party members of Stosh’s have been known to down gallons of the stuff while bellowing down blues, breaking vases and making plans to conquer the West and marry the Dallas Cowgirls. And yet, the Hungarian Goulash Soup at Smart Alex is also based on the same secret recipe that was handed down to Stosh Bzaadnlk over a half century ago by a wild-eyed gypsy woman who bore a fascinating resemblance to Bill Haley and the Comets. We call It Hungarian Rhapsody.

Philadelphia. Probably In the entire U.S. Or for that matter, anywhere outside of Hungary. Who’s more, I suppose pointy goods. So far, Alex’s now challenges Philadelphia Magazine and all you other smart alecs to make your critical to find a better Hungarian Goulash Soup in any restaurant in Philadelphia. And if you do, please bring us a bowl to send to Stosh.

There’s more to Smart Alex than the world’s 2nd best Goulash Soup.

There’s a man that is just as good at the fine-dine décor and whores and winos who work there hoping to be discovered by a Hollywood producer or the president of an insurance company.

Marchen Nacher and Philly Chiu.

We are the king of Mexican munchies. With Mocho Nachos – beef, chilli, refried beans, melted cheese, a side of jalapenos on a bolito shell! We also have Gringo Nachos (Chicken instead of beef) and Philly Chili (All the natural wonders of Mexico, combined with the civilized influence of Philadelphia). A blend of beef, tomatoes, kidney beans, and cheddar cheese melted on a Tostada Shell.

We also have Gotcha Nachos (Chicken instead of beef), retried beans, melted cheese, sliced Jalapenos on a Tostada Shell.

Producer or the president of an insurance company.

There’s a menu that’s as off-beat as the far-out décor and whacko waiters.

Some of our Omelettes include the Eggchilado (Chili, cheese, beans, on a tortilla), topped off with grated Cheddar cheese. One of the nicest Omelettes is our The Eggsilentialist (3 eggs, cheese, mushrooms, onion, tomato and an incredible amount of Swiss cheese floating on a raft of rather ordinary bread. Plus of course, Hungarian Rhapsody, the best Hungarian Goulash Soup in the Free World.

Hungarian Rhapsody (Plus a few other Hungarian specialties).

What’s more, if you are very, very rich, you might be able to reserve a private table. We also do custom orders.

Stosh, Ribs, Surfing Burgers, Alcohol, Beer, Around, The Big Buzz and Quick We, Work.

We are not even going to describe these specialties because we do not want to be held responsible for a motor accident or your death.

Desserts that will blow your mind. And your diet. Strawberry short cake.

What a crock.

Mushrooms, a cherry tomato and a crock of cream and certain other odds and ends. We are not going to describe these specialties because we do not want to be held responsible for a motor accident or your life.

Actually, getting here can be a traffic accident as you rush to your mind. And your diet.

Over the years, we have developed a clientele whose decor can never be described as refined and genteel as a setting whose décor can be described as a cross between 19th Century Ohio and 20th Century Neuritic.

Smart Alex. Is so easy to find.

I can’t tell you how to find it.

Conservationist To Speak on Wildlife

Gerald Durrell, a world-famous conservationist and author of books on wildlife, will lecture tonight on "The Edge of Extinction," which discusses the captive breeding of endangered species. Durrell, who received an Honorary Doctorate of Humane Letters from Yale in 1971, is also a fellow of various international scientific organizations, including the Royal Society of Literature, the American Institute of Arts and Letters, and the Royal Society of Literature. The Wildlife Preservation Trust, in order to create and maintain healthy environments for endangered species, was started by Durrell, who received an Honorary Doctorate of Science from the University of London in 1971, in order to create and maintain healthy environments for endangered species. The Trust became important in 1971, when Durrell set up a parallel primate foundation in the United States. In addition to his books and articles, Durrell has made four television series for the BBC, and two television films. In addition, programs about his work have appeared on French and Canadian TV stations.

Frosh End Season At Coach's Alma Mater

B. DAVID ZALENSKI

Forget about school results. Even friendship between old roommates is important when a football game is at stake. Tom Frankel, the Quaker coach, had a chance to return to his alma mater - Temple - this past weekend.

The Quakers could embellish this year, and they gave a break last year. Last week 26-19 loss to Princeton is still being remembered, and the Quakers couldn't win the Philadelphia battle box. But Tom Frankel was there, and he won the battle of the schools.

The victory of the Quakers over the Temple Owls was a victory for the Quakers and the Temple Owls. The Owls are a team to be reckoned with, and the Quakers are not to be underestimated.

The Quakers statistically dominated. The Owls have a strong defense, but the Quakers' offense was much better. The Owls' offense was able to score some points, but the Quakers' defense was able to hold them back.

The Quakers have some good players, and they are able to move the ball down the field. The Owls have some good players, and they are able to move the ball down the field. The Quakers are able to score some points, but the Owls' defense was able to hold them back.

The Quakers are confident that they can win the Atlantic Championship. They are a small school with a small budget, but their defense is strong. They are a team to be reckoned with, and they are able to move the ball down the field.
