Tuition May Rise By 15 Percent

By ANDREW KRITZMAN

University administrators are preparing to announce a 15 percent increase in undergraduate and graduate tuition for next year, which will be the largest raise in the University's history.

The increase, which will affect all undergraduate and graduate programs, is expected to generate an estimated $900,000 increase in revenue.

President Martin's announcement comes as the University faces a budget deficit of $3.5 million, due to a decrease in state funding and an increase in energy costs.

In addition, the University has been dealing with a decline in enrollment, which has resulted in a decrease in tuition revenue.

The increase in tuition will be used to offset these losses and to fund the University's operating budget.

Fees are expected to rise by 15 percent as well, with a 10 percent increase in energy costs and a 5 percent increase in other expenses.

The University has also announced a one-time increase in its endowment fund, which will provide emergency funds for the current fiscal year.

Problems Seen in Hostage Release Plan

Iran took legal steps yesterday to open the way to releasing the hostages in Iran, but U.S. officials acknowledged today that "meaningful talks are giving way to a paper exercise." An American negotiator said that the Chinese are "putting pressure on us to make a serious promise" and that if Iran released the hostages and promised that it would not take them back, "we would be able to make a serious promise." Trustee Regan Named to Cabinet

By ROBERT E. SHEPARD

President-elect Ronald Reagan has chosen University Trustee Donald F. Regan to serve as secretary of the treasury.

Following the December 11 announcement, Regan resigned the chairmanship of Merrill Lynch & Company, the New York-based investment firm. Regan’s resignation, which was effective immediately, was met with a wave of surprise and frustration on Wall Street, where Regan was considered one of the most experienced corporate executives.

Regan, a life trustee of the University, also served as trustee chairman of Stanford University, the first president of the Stanford Board of Trustees.

Regan’s term as secretary of the treasury will begin in March, and he will replace William Simon, who has served in the position since 1969.

The Cost of Poor Planning

For all practical purposes, A.P. Benston Benjamin would have just as easily announced a 25 percent increase in student tuition this year as a 15 percent increase. By making the latter decision, the administration has offered a disingenuous rationale for its action. They claim that it is only fair that the students must bear the brunt of all financial restraints. But the students, faculty, and the University continue to be faced with a host of financial restraints that are not their doing. To tell students that they must carry the brunt of all financial restraints is disingenuous at best.

The university administration has not only failed to provide an adequate explanation, but has also failed to provide a reasonable explanation. If the students are asked to pay the price of the nation's financial distress, then the administration should also be asked to pay the price of their own financial distress. The administration should not be allowed to profit from the nation's financial distress.

The administration's rationale is that the students are asked to pay the price while the administration is allowed to profit. This is a clear example of the administration's failure to provide an adequate explanation. The administration should be held accountable for its actions.

The administration's failure to provide an adequate explanation is not the only reason why the students should not be asked to pay the price. The administration has also failed to provide a reasonable explanation. The administration's rationale is that the students are asked to pay the price while the administration is allowed to profit. This is a clear example of the administration's failure to provide a reasonable explanation. The administration should be held accountable for its actions.

CHEMICAL, MECHANICAL, CIVIL & ELECTRICAL ENGINEERS

Our Most Important Product Is You

When process industry companies select C-E Lummus to design a process or build an entire facility for them, they are guided in their decision by the excellent reputation of C-E Lummus' engineering staff and our record of technical accomplishments over the past seventy-five years.

Our product is our reputation, and our professionals are the source. That's why we seek, hire, train, and promote the best qualified candidates. If you're one of them, we have a great deal to offer you.

At C-E Lummus, you will be on the leading edge of energy and process technology. You will be involved in project assignments that will test your ingenuity and reward your achievements in ways very few companies and industries can match.

You can also expect plenty of diversity at C-E Lummus. We've got experience in just about every industry that needs a process—from the petrochemical, chemical, and agricultural to pulp and paper, food and plastics.

Your areas of involvement could range from helping design a facility, to developing a new process concept, to applying—and even pioneering—an advance in environmental engineering.

Consider joining the team industry looks to for leadership.

For the second consecutive year, The Daily Pennsylvanian has received the prestigious Medalist Award from the Scholastic Press Association. This award, the Association's highest honor, is given to a select few college newspapers considered to be "truly outstanding" by its Board of Judges.

In 1980, the DP's 34th Street Magazine also received high honors from the Columbia judges: the weekly arts and entertainment magazine received a First Place award from the Association in only its first year of competition. The Daily Pennsylvanian wants you to become part of its tradition of excellence. The DP has been proud of the quality of its student staff and the dedication of its staff members. This year's Staff will be the best yet!

For more information about the DP, call Alice at 243-6815 or stop by the Third Floor. The Staff is looking forward to meeting you. If you have any questions, please call Alice at 243-6815.

"Jerry Who? Unknown Takes Over Top Spot

By JOHN MACKENZIE

Jerry Norcross. That may be the reaction of many sports fans to seeing Jerry as the new head coach for Penn. The school of Philadelphia has hired Dave Seidel as its basketball coach, replacing Norcross, to the shock of many.

The hiring of Seidel as coach of Penn's basketball team will be a big boost for the Quaker program. Seidel has a deep understanding of the game and has guided his team to some success in the past.

"We will make a definite commitment to the coming years as we gear up for this campus tour," said Seidel, "especially in the 1980s. For 18 percent of you that's the last chance to prove you are a part of the team and a part of the Penn basketball tradition. We want to earn their respect." Seidel praised his former employer, Dartmouth, for providing great support.

Immediately, Beilman plans on returning to Grinnell to try his hand at a more successful program. Seidel was quick to point out that he realized the University of Iowa was a much better place to develop his career.

"When he left to go to Grinnell, it was a shock to me in Philadelphia, the possibility of a bit of pressure. But it was to be expected," said Seidel, "I don't think anyone would notice the difference." Seidel was excited about the possibility of a new coach in the Grinnell basketball program.

"He's a much improved basketball coach," said Seidel, "I'm looking forward to the opportunity to work with a young man of today." Seidel said he was looking forward to the opportunity of working with a young man of today.

The move was a difficult decision for Seidel, but he felt it was the right choice. Seidel said he was looking forward to the opportunity of working with a young man of today.

Berndt Named New Head Coach

Six Week Search Ends With 'Best Candidate'

By JIM MCCracken

DePaula Coach Carries Ivy League Ties to Job

Two weeks after figuring out who his next head coach at Penn would be as a replacement for Rick Laylor, Athletic Director Harry Gamble named Berndt the interim coach for the Quakers next season.

"It's a thrill for (Rick) to hit that final note," Gamble said. "And it's a thrill for the rest of us."

"I'm happy for the Quakers, who have been so good to me over the years," Laylor said. "It's been a real honor to coach with you."

Gamble also said that the decision to hire Berndt was made after a six-week search that included contact with more than 25 candidates.

"I'm pleased with the result," Gamble said. "I'm not surprised."

"I'm not a miracle worker," Berndt said. "But I'm optimistic about the future."

"It's a great opportunity to take on the challenge of coaching at one of the top Ivy League programs."

"I'm excited to be able to give back to the university that gave me so much."

"I'm looking forward to working with the players and the staff, and helping to turn the program around."
