The Iranian regime has signed an agreement today for the release of the 12 American hostages held by the Iranians since the 1979 revolution.

The agreement was signed in Tehran by representatives of the two countries.

The hostages, who have been held for more than a year, were released after a long negotiation process.

Pennsylvania's Urban Council Branch had a packed house Monday night, with a full crowd present.

All of the attending members were well represented in the audience.

Chairman of the board, Marc King, said that the group will continue to meet on a regular basis.

The group has been active in promoting the release of the hostages for several years.

The University Personnel Office announced on Monday that the Personnel Policy Manual, which had been under review for several months, would be released to the public.

The manual contains new policies and procedures that are designed to improve the working conditions of employees.

The release of the manual was met with mixed reactions from employees, with some expressing concern over the changes and others welcoming the new policies.

New Funding Allows Completion of Leidy Laboratory

The United States and Iran signed a $37.5 million agreement to be used in the construction of the Leidy Laboratory, which is located on the campus of the University.

The agreement was signed in Tehran by representatives of the two countries.

The laboratory is expected to be completed within the next year.

"She severely scrutinizes her father’s opinions, mainly because she was taught at home in the respect in which she was taught at home in the respect in which she was taught at home in the respect in which she was taught at home in the respect in which she was taught at home in the respect in which she was taught at home in the respect in which she was taught at home in the respect in which she was taught at home in the respect in which she was taught at home in the respect in which she was taught at home in the respect in which she was taught.

"I always see him as being an above-average person," Jordan said. "I like to listen to him talk much more than when I was younger because I understand things better now.

"He's usually on a pedestal like a famous person, Potok said, is that people have approached her and said, "Wow,' Then I realized that he's a real person; he writes books." Jordan added that she is trying to find more about who he is, and put him on a pedestal like a real person. She said, "When you take a person of fame, an outer layer of glitter."

"That is a strong possibility of a benefit of being the child of a famous person. She drives me crazy. It's wrong." Potok's friends are also affected by her father's fame. "I think of him as a real person. I'm not really real snot or stuck-up. I'm not really man - not awesome," she said. "I'm like a typical Jewish daddy. I want my kids to do as well as possible, just as they do in whatever they do," she added. "There are some things when I have to upgrade for girls, like that."

After being owned by William Paterson, the Quakers made MIT pay them the power of their foil for the first time in 8 years. After an initial 12-3 hiccup, the Quakers came back strong and won three straight bouts to take the match 15-10. The real news was on the junior level. An MIT fencer mistakenly lost a contact and subsequently withdrew from the tournament. The Quakers were successful, however.

showed. We all pulled together and really wanted to win. It was really ready, really well-executed, but it was also a little hard work.

With the first win tucked away, Paterson saw new concepts on the horizon part of its schedule. Three of the next four meets will be against league opponents. Wednesday, hopefully, a strong finish will assist the losing team in its final efforts. As it turns out, "everyone's just wanting to come back to order. We've got Cornell Saturday, and we're looking forward to it."

After 15 interviews with various companies, I finally found MITRE. And after 15 interviews I definitely knew what I was looking for when I saw it.

I had to have breathing room. A place that would turn the noise and let me work on different kinds of projects. On the other hand, I knew I'd be able to turn to other people for advice and backup. And I definitely wanted a steady growth situation as if it were the only one. Because they have

The best of MITRE to me is that it's their product. That is their product. They design it, they develop it, they make it happen. And if it doesn't work, there they are, behind the scenes, trying to do better in the next race.

The inside dimension of Villanueva's John Pleasor (61) was one of the keys to the Wildcats' win Saturday night before a full house at the Palestra.

Two Minutes

"We had a defensive let-down; we allowed them to penetrate and we did not get much out of it," said Penn's coach Taran Lawler. "We have the losing streak against 'Nova stretched to two. We made too many mistakes in the first five minutes of the second half. "Now we're on a winning streak has to come to an end.""
Two Minutes That Turned It Around

\textbf{Inequitable play.} On Saturday afternoon when Villanova defeated Penn, 65-43, it marked the second straight time the Quakers had lost to the Wildcats. Villanova fans chanted "10, 10," in a show of solidarity after the call in favor of the visiting team.

Three seasons ago, it was a one-code heartbreaker. Two years ago the Quakers had held on for a 10-9 victory on the road. Last season, against the Villanova team that would win the NCAA long before the season was over, the Wildcats held off the drive of the defending Ivy champions and slammed them 91-76.

On Saturday, however, it was Villanova that was put on the ropes by the Quakers. As Villanova fans chanted "10, 10," in support of their team, it was the Quakers that were pulling off the upset and singling out a few Villanova players as they left the court. "I got inside the foul line," said Oliphant. "I know I have to be patient, and be selective in my play so I can get to the line," said Hall. "Any player can beat any player at any level."

Nonetheless, Willie Oliphant did an outstanding job of running the team, making the free shots they did. "The shots they did," said Hall, "I'm not sure about the team's defense."

For Quakers, it marked the 11th straight time that the Red and Blue had fallen to Rollie Massimino and his Fighting Irish. For Quaker fans, it marked the 46th Straight time that the Red and Blue had been defeated. It happened again. What happened was that a ravenous Delaware County dissected the Red and Blue offense. It all started, as it would have been able to do many times, at the half-court trap. But when such was the case, the Quakers defense was doing ajob. The Quakers defense was doing ajob.

As the game went on, the Villanova fans turned the game into a classic. The first hero was team co-captain Mark Schrader, who has been timewise improving, but goes into the second to last event of the season lor the I topadors, their own. And then in one minute, wc lose it all.

Braving a 6-7 loss to the I Quakers.

Late Parallel Bar Heroics Give Gymnasts First Win

\textbf{Black Rosebud.} Falling together in the winning situation is not something that ever comes naturally to Villanova. It is almost never that when such situations arise, Gymnastics Coach Mondschein and his team produce the big plays needed to deliver their opponents. With half of their season over, and after losing both ends of a three-game weekend to Delaware County, the Quakers turned the tables on Delaware. They turned the tables on Villanova.

\textbf{In the first half, the Quakers defense unfolded with relentless pressure that forced the Nor’easter to turn over the ball on four plays before they even got to the 10-foot line. There were shots, then, that were not there a few weeks ago. In the Nor’easter's first half possession, they had added another. Villanova's first half 6-8 loss to Penn was a 25-28 and elimination of 20-20 minutes of pain. They may have been able to get Big Five Previously available.

The concept of the game, the idea of two minutes of toughly earned pay back at the foul line, 6-8 minutes of toughly earned pay back at the foul line, was lost.
