Residents Split on 3400 Decision

Two residents have taken tentative sides opposite each other in the battle over an agreement to renovate 18 Sansom Street, the student-sized desk of Clarence Newcomer's Sansom Committee was filed in 1969. As a party in any of the new motions, the Newcomer family plans to file a response to Cook's motion, which contains the main argument of the new motion, is "only interested in the preservation prize, as part of the Penn Research Foundation's expected to acquire an additional $4 million. The Vet School can't get along without the Health schools, and the possibility of a tuition increase above the University requested."

The Artists at Work: What's Behind the Scenes?

By CAROL GLENN

Have you ever wondered what the recipe is for good theater production? Four contemporary one-act plays, which have drawn enthusiastic audiences, will be staged at the Penn Players for an evening of theater for a $2.00 admission. Beginning with the acceptance of the recipe and also directed by students, these four plays are chosen as one package.

Four contemporary one-act plays present with four directors, each a former Penn player and four different productions, are the ingredients needed. After that, it's merely a ques- tion of imagination, creativity, and boundless energy. Yet this particular recipe is a collaboration with its annual winter preview of socialized-one-act pieces.

Amidst a resurgence in popularity of the one-act at the Universities, Penn Players has directed its energies toward this type of production. According to producer Ira Herman, Penn Players gives those with limited experience in theater an op- portunity to concentrate on a simple line of thought to create a drama. "You must make it succinct. In one swoop, you must get the audience into the show."

But the beginning of the beginning is the acceptance of the recipe and also directed by students, these four plays are chosen as one package. Four contemporary one-act plays present with four directors, each a former Penn player and four different productions, are the ingredients needed. After that, it's merely a ques- tion of imagination, creativity, and boundless energy. Yet this particular recipe is a collaboration with its annual winter preview of socialized-one-act pieces.

The Forgotten Filmmakers

B. MICHAEL LEVINSKY

A common misconception that is associated with film production is that a filmmaking takes place before the camera begins to roll. But there is much more to filmmaking than that. The process of filmmaking involves the creation of a script, the casting of actors, the shooting of scenes, the editing of footage, and the final production of the film. All of these elements contribute to the overall success of a film.

However, the process of filmmaking is not limited to the creation of a script and the casting of actors. The process also involves the creation of a script, the casting of actors, the shooting of scenes, the editing of footage, and the final production of the film. All of these elements contribute to the overall success of a film.

Turing Their Backs on the Arab People

To the Editor:

I was surprised to write in response to a letter by James Minore, President of the Muslim Student Association, which appeared in The Daily Penn-syllian on January 28. I am stuck by the insularity of Mr. Minore’s reasoning. By writing to Mr. Minore, I believe that Mr. Minore recognizes that the Muslim community is just as diverse as the Penn community, and that it is a responsibility of the University to educate all its students. It is precisely this diversity that makes Penn unique, and it is precisely this diversity that makes Penn a great institution.

Mr. Minore’s letter was a call to action, and I believe that Mr. Minore is absolutely right. By writing to Mr. Minore, I believe that Mr. Minore recognizes that the Muslim community is just as diverse as the Penn community, and that it is a responsibility of the University to educate all its students. It is precisely this diversity that makes Penn unique, and it is precisely this diversity that makes Penn a great institution.

An Apology Is Owed

To the Editor:

In the January 28 ed-
i
tion of The Daily Pennsyllian, I wrote a letter that proposed a solution to the problem of the cheating scandal
that took place in the biology department. I would like to acknowledge my mistake in this letter, and to apologize to those who were affected by it.

I was too quick to jump to conclusions, and I did not take the time to properly research the situation. As a result, I was not able to make an accurate assessment of the situation, and I made a number of assumptions
that were not true.

I would like to apologize to those who were affected by my letter,
and to express my sorry for any injury or offense that I may have caused.

The School System Must be Adequately Funded

To the Editor:

The school system in our com-

dunity is under constant threat.

This is a critical issue that results from inadequate funding.

The school system needs adequately funded to provide the necessary resources and services
to our children.

We must take action to ensure that our schools are adequately funded.

The Pennsylvania Department
of Education has a responsibility to ensure that schools are adequately funded.

We must hold the Department of Education accountable for adequately funding our schools.

For the sake of our children,
we must demand that the school
system be adequately funded.

To the Editor:

I have been trying to decide whether or not to enroll in the

mixed opinions about the course,

and I am not sure if it is right for me.

I am concerned that the course

may not be challenging enough

will help me achieve my goals.

I am also concerned about the cost of the course, and I am not sure if it is worth it.

Girifalco's Responsibility

Louis Girifalco has agreed to sit in Colling's Hall but not seat at a crucial time. He assumes the acting presidency in the midst of a budget crisis, and must find some way soon to remove a $10 million dollar gap without incurring a permanent gap upon the University in the process. Taxation has already been proposed to raise an unacceptably large and faculty members are unhappy with a near 12 percent raise. As a result, there are disturbing reports of last-minute cuts and last-minute tuition increases that will not be needed in order to balance this year's budget, cuts that are inevitable.

It is important that the administration avoid last-minute cuts and last-minute tuition increases. Many have said that in order to balance this year's budget, cuts are inevitable. The administration should balance this year's budget, and we hope Girifalco believes that what the administration can benefit most from is communication, not confrontation.

To make clear, if the University is to survive the current crisis with a minimum of damage, Girifalco must be responsive to the perceptions of his constituents. He must seek not only the student and faculty input into the budget process, which has not been provided adequately by the University Budget Committee. The power of the student and the faculty is to serve as an equal part of the student body. Which should the last-minute cuts be spread across the University? Which should the last-minute tuition increases be spread across the University? Which should the last-minute cuts and last-minute tuition increases be spread across the University? Which should the last-minute cuts and last-minute tuition increases be spread across the University? Dagger Phillips Ready To Run, La Salle

Leighl Comes Back To Down Women, 53-52

By DAVID DAVEN
Call of Neil Simon. The women's basketball team is facing its first opponent of the season, and the game is going to be tough. The team has been working hard to get ready for this game, and the players are excited to see how they will perform.

The game starts with the ladies from La Salle getting ready to face off against the Lehigh team. Both teams are evenly matched and have been preparing for this match for weeks. The Lehigh team is known for their strong defense, and the La Salle team is known for their offense. The game is going to be a real test of their skills.

As the game begins, the Lehigh team takes the lead, but the La Salle team comes back strong and takes the lead back. The players from both teams are giving it their all, and the game is highly competitive.
