Bayh Condemns Moral Majority in Iran Talk

B. ROBIN FRIEDMAN

Former Indiana Senator Birch Bayh condemned what he termed the "Islamic fundamentalists" yesterday during a book tour stop here before an Iran Astronaut audience of 400 last night.

"I don't think they had any impact on the electorate in Indiana, but it is an area I am closely watching," Bayh, a Democrat who is running for re-election, told a noon news conference.

Birch, a Shofar who was denied his first run for the White House in 1980, expressed his views following a visit to the "Religious Right" during his three-hour speech.

"There are things we have to do to defend our present system of government and democracy and habeas corpus," he said.

"There is an area where we have to work, but it seems to me that the things the Moral Majority is doing, I don't think they had any impact on the electorate in Indiana," he said.

Bayh said, "We need people with a greater sense of democracy and democracy and the importance of liberty and habeas corpus to defend our present system of government and democracy and habeas corpus." (continued on page 5)

U. Officials Questioning Review of Affirmative Action Standards

B. PETER CANELLOS

As administrators prepared new employment data for submission to the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission last Friday, several members of the University's special task force on affirmative action announced yesterday that they had applied for a stay of the Department of Labor's investigation of the University's procedures under affirmative action programs.

Following yesterday's announcement by the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission Chairman Tracy C. Wilkins, the University's affirmative action standards will be reviewed by the Labor Department. The University has been asked to provide a stay of the investigation.

"They may not have the money to pay the lawyers," said a University administrator. "They just may not have the money to pay the lawyers." (continued on page 4)

Kite & Key Starts Telethon

B. ROBIN DAVIS

Project Manager Michael B. Buick has made two appointments temporarily filling the imaging research assistant position.

"I have made two appointments temporarily filling the imaging research assistant position. One is for a position that has been vacant since November, when Richard B. left. The other is for a position that was not filled for a long time," Buick said.

"I have made two appointments temporarily filling the imaging research assistant position. One is for a position that has been vacant since November, when Richard B. left. The other is for a position that was not filled for a long time," Buick said.

B. ROBERT WHITMORE

The University has begun to make plans to purchase the Computer Science Center building, allowing the Center to begin using the building before the end of the academic year.

"The University has begun to make plans to purchase the Computer Science Center building, allowing the Center to begin using the building before the end of the academic year." (continued on page 4)

Funds To Enable Houston Hall Renovation

B. ROBIN DAVIS

As administrators prepared new employment data for submission to the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission last Friday, several members of the University's special task force on affirmative action announced yesterday that they had applied for a stay of the Department of Labor's investigation of the University's procedures under affirmative action programs.

"They may not have the money to pay the lawyers," said a University administrator. "They just may not have the money to pay the lawyers." (continued on page 4)

Bayh Condemns Moral Majority in Iran Talk

B. ROBIN FRIEDMAN

Former Indiana Senator Birch Bayh condemned what he termed the "Islamic fundamentalists" yesterday during a book tour stop here before an Iran Astronaut audience of 400 last night.

"I don't think they had any impact on the electorate in Indiana, but it is an area I am closely watching," Bayh, a Democrat who is running for re-election, told a noon news conference.

Birch, a Shofar who was denied his first run for the White House in 1980, expressed his views following a visit to the "Religious Right" during his three-hour speech.

"There are things we have to do to defend our present system of government and democracy and habeas corpus," he said.

"There is an area where we have to work, but it seems to me that the things the Moral Majority is doing, I don't think they had any impact on the electorate in Indiana," he said.

Bayh said, "We need people with a greater sense of democracy and democracy and the importance of liberty and habeas corpus to defend our present system of government and democracy and habeas corpus." (continued on page 5)

U. Officials Questioning Review of Affirmative Action Standards

B. PETER CANELLOS

As administrators prepared new employment data for submission to the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission last Friday, several members of the University's special task force on affirmative action announced yesterday that they had applied for a stay of the Department of Labor's investigation of the University's procedures under affirmative action programs.

Following yesterday's announcement by the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission Chairman Tracy C. Wilkins, the University's affirmative action standards will be reviewed by the Labor Department. The University has been asked to provide a stay of the investigation.

"They may not have the money to pay the lawyers," said a University administrator. "They just may not have the money to pay the lawyers." (continued on page 4)

Kite & Key Starts Telethon

B. ROBIN DAVIS

Project Manager Michael B. Buick has made two appointments temporarily filling the imaging research assistant position.

"I have made two appointments temporarily filling the imaging research assistant position. One is for a position that has been vacant since November, when Richard B. left. The other is for a position that was not filled for a long time," Buick said.

"I have made two appointments temporarily filling the imaging research assistant position. One is for a position that has been vacant since November, when Richard B. left. The other is for a position that was not filled for a long time," Buick said.

B. ROBERT WHITMORE

The University has begun to make plans to purchase the Computer Science Center building, allowing the Center to begin using the building before the end of the academic year.

"The University has begun to make plans to purchase the Computer Science Center building, allowing the Center to begin using the building before the end of the academic year." (continued on page 4)

Funds To Enable Houston Hall Renovation

B. ROBIN DAVIS

As administrators prepared new employment data for submission to the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission last Friday, several members of the University's special task force on affirmative action announced yesterday that they had applied for a stay of the Department of Labor's investigation of the University's procedures under affirmative action programs.

"They may not have the money to pay the lawyers," said a University administrator. "They just may not have the money to pay the lawyers." (continued on page 4)
Trip Bash: Seniors Packing Bags Already

By C. LYNN BALEY

The Senior Class Board's next event is a party which promises an evening of high expectations, unbearable anticipation, and probably disappointments — all in fun.

The class is sponsoring a "Pack Your Bag Party" this Thursday night for the University's senior class, as a weekend of Valentine's Day activities.

As a multiple, ticket stubs will be handed out to seniors who will be in turn placed into a raffle, which will take place later that evening. The winners will be drawn to choose the winner. The couple will then be given a free ticket to the party.

The winners will then be given a free ticket to the party, and, if they are 21 in order to attend the party, the winners also receive a two-night stay in a hotel, the use of a rented car and $100 in spending money. The winners will return on Sunday evening.

The winners also receive a two-night stay in a hotel, the use of a rented car and $100 in spending money. The winners will return on Sunday evening.

"What the ticket price of $2.50 entitles to is both the party packing speed. According to the rules of the game, ticket-holders pack their bags for a three-day weekend in Orlando and go to bed in the party, held at the East Side Club at 12th and Chestnut Street.

As a multiple, ticket stubs will be handed out to seniors who will be in turn placed into a raffle, which will take place later that evening. The winners will be drawn to choose the winner. The couple will then be given a free ticket to the party.

The winners will then be given a free ticket to the party, and, if they are 21 in order to attend the party, the winners also receive a two-night stay in a hotel, the use of a rented car and $100 in spending money. The winners will return on Sunday evening.

The winners also receive a two-night stay in a hotel, the use of a rented car and $100 in spending money. The winners will return on Sunday evening.

"This is really an outgoing senior class secretary Sadie Milnick said.

Almost 300 tickets have already been sold, and senior class representatives will sell tickets tomorrow and Wednesday on Locust Walk between 12 and 2 p.m.

"The whole issue depends on what the Reagan administration does," Madden said. "If they continue to pursue the present policy, however, from what I've heard from people at the Labor Department, we could be in real trouble," Madden said.
The Daily Pennsylvania Newspaper of the University of Pennsylvania

Letter to the Editor

Is There Hope For Intellectual Liberalism?

To the Editor:

I was especially impressed by some of the comments expressed by Louis Crean in his letter of September 27. The plans for the Dietrich Hall renovation were made during a period when the University, under the leadership of President Donald R. Smith, was beset by innumerable problems. Despite this, President Smith and the Board of Trustees have demonstrated a remarkable capacity for leadership and vision. They have given the University a strong foundation upon which to build for the future.

Today, I would like to address the question of intellectual liberalism. The notion of intellectual liberalism is often misunderstood. It is often associated with a lack of morality, a commitment to relativism, and a rejection of all traditional values. However, intellectual liberalism is not about rejecting tradition but about maintaining and building upon it.

In an age where political trends tend to be too technical and vocative, intellectual liberalism offers a way to connect with the heart of the campus and its international students. It encourages critical thinking and intellectual curiosity. It is an important force in American society and has been for centuries.

I believe that intellectual liberalism is a valuable approach to education and that the University should continue to support it. It is important to maintain a balance between traditional and modern values, and intellectual liberalism can help us achieve this balance.

I encourage other students to reflect on the role of intellectual liberalism in their own lives and to support it in any way they can.

Sincerely,

[Your Name]
Calming Dentist—

"When I was 12 years old I had a dentist who proved me with a needle about a dozen times until he got it in the right spot. From that day on I really started to fear needles," a suburban female patient told Dr. Garber. Everything she said about him was true.

When Foglietta first came to the dentist's office, Garber suggested that she turn on the radio. "I explained to her that it was her choice to listen to a&quot;Gimme Shelter" by the Rolling Stones," Garber later explained. "She turned it up and said, "I'm going to listen to this,&quot; and she was all right."

Actually, according to Garber himself, that is not always the case. "It's not a state of mind," he said. "It's a state of mind." When a patient is crying, he said, "I'm going to listen to this," and she was all right.

"The thing I like about him most is that he experiments with new techniques," Garber continued. "He has really developed a fear, an actual phobia, in me of the right spot. From that day on I am really scared," Garber continued. "It was a state of mind," he said. "It's not a state of mind." When a patient is crying, he said, "I'm going to listen to this," and she was all right.

"I use now," Garber explained. "It's nothing. Dentistry is the same way. It's a state of mind." When a patient is crying, he said, "I'm going to listen to this," and she was all right.

"I just use simple things," Garber answered. "I explained to her that it was her choice to listen to "Gimme Shelter" by the Rolling Stones," Garber later explained. "She turned it up and said, "I'm going to listen to this," and she was all right.

"When I was 12-years-old I had a dentist who proved me with a needle about a dozen times until he got it in the right spot. From that day on I really started to fear needles," a suburban female patient told Dr. Garber. Everything she said about him was true.
"How To Get A Job In Congress"
Thursday, February 12
Bishop White Room
2nd fl. Houston Hall
8 p.m.
Mr. Michael Gessel '78
Press Secretary

Flowers For Valentines Day
Houston Hall Candy Shop
Houston Hall Basement
Open daily 8:30-6:00 Valentines day 9-5

OFFICIAL NOTICE
FACULTY OF ARTS AND SCIENCES
110 LOGAN HALL
MAY 1981 GRADUATES
LAST CALL TO SIGN UP FOR DIPLOMA.

DEADLINES ARE THE LAST ACCEPTABLE DATES FOR COMPLETION OF OBLIGATIONS AND RECEIPT OF MATERIALS.

Pi Sigma Alpha
Political Science Honor Society
will be holding a forum on Public Policy
With
Professor Berrier
Thursday, Feb. 12th at 7 PM
Stitler Hall B-30
SAC Funded

Midterms have a way of turning everything upside down. Schoolwork, socializing, and even Superblock are now taken into account during this hectic time. Before long, though, things will be on their feet again.

Ramones presents:

FRI. FEB. 13, 8 PM
IRVINE AUD, 3401 Spruce St
Tix $7.50-$5.50 w/Penn ID at H.H. tix
Call 243-4444 for more Concert Information

Tickets Available
SATURDAY'S THE DAY!

Houston Hall Candy Shop.
Houston Hall Basement
Open M-F 8:00 Sat. Feb. 14th 9-5
Albright No Match For Birdies
5-0 Quaker Win Raises Mark to 7-1

BY PAUL ZALENZ

When the cowboys of the old west rode into town, they would roll up with a night to rob and pillage. The members of the Harvard men's club hockey team on Friday night would have already whittled away their targets.

Albright College became the latest casualty, falling to the Quakers behind two goals in the first period. Then, in the second and third periods, the Peacocks scored once and held on to secure their second straight victory over the training wheels.

Blechman was especially happy with the overall performance of the team. The Quakers were in control from the beginning and clearly outclassed on the ice.

"It's not just about winning," he said. "It's about the overall performance. The team is playing well together and we're getting better every game.

"The forwards are controlling the puck, the defense is making good decisions and the goaltending is solidifying his position as the back-up center.

"We're excited about the opportunities we have and we're using them to our advantage."