Performers Triumph In "Eminent Domain"

By DAVID'S WEBB

Perry Granger's "Eminent Domain," a 1907 Edward Burne-Jones-Cooper Company, makes for a thoroughly enjoyable night. Since its opening at the University last night, the play has received mixed reviews. But what the audience has failed to notice is that the role of the professor in society is not only a metaphor for the play's characters but also a critique of the current political climate.

Ten University Students Receive Thouron Awards

Ten University students will have the opportunity to study in England, France, and Italy, as recipients of the Thouron Awards. The Thouron awards were established in 1960 by Sir John and Betty Thouron, who left home at 16. Williams had also become a police officer, which is how he was able to set up the company's headquarters.

Quality and Philosophy Highlight One-Acts

Professional -- that would be the key word to describe "Eminent Domain," the University's one-act play directed by Ken Holzer. The play's three "dishes" -- "Dinner for Five," "The Last Supper," and "The Great British Bake Off" -- are all part of a student exchange program. The play was produced by a group of students who have earned a master's degree in English at the University, and their purpose is to give students the opportunity to learn about the life and culture of the place they are studying.

Panel Suggests Minority Advisers

By ROBIN DAVIS

An FAS committee has arrived at the only conclusion reasonable for the FAS advisories' current role: to begin advising minority students. FAS advisor Committee Chair John R. Miller said that the committee was formed to provide students with a forum to discuss their experiences and to find ways to improve the system. The committee has recommended that minority students be advised by at least two additional advisers -- one black and one Hispanic -- and that these students be given a chance to read the letter recently received by the University's Office of Minority Recruitment.

An armed robbery resulted in an armed robbery at Hardee's restaurant in University Hall last night. A suspect walked into the restaurant and demanded money. The suspect was "not a student type." He was described as a tall black male, about 6 feet tall with short hair and a long black coat with a slit in the back.

“Why doesn’t anyone eat at Troy’s?”

Students rate lunch and dinner at Troy’s a low 4 out of 10, however. "Troy’s has the two-burger lunch combo, but it isn’t a very nice place," said sophomore Howard Blumenstein.

"You couldn’t take a date there." agreed FAS freshman Lisa Carabelli, "Troy’s is O.K. for breakfast, but I like someplace with a little more atmosphere.

Troy’s atmosphere is definitely unattractive. Troy’s has basically a cafeteria atmosphere. They serve all their food on porcelain plates, no two of which are alike. The food comes on porcelain plates, none of which are alike. The service is slow and uninformative.

"Troy’s isn’t really the 11 Club. The owners of Troy’s, who are aware of the atmosphere problem, are now considering possible renovations. "We want it to give the place a facelift," said part-owner Pete Kollias. "We’re still arguing out the specifics of what we’re going to do," said part-owner Pete Kollias.

Or, as Vorcheimer said, "Troy’s isn’t exactly the 21 Club. You couldn’t take a date there."
A letter from the U.S. Department of Labor ordering additional affirmative action information has left the University profoundly unsure as to an administrative body which could endanger the University’s $90 million in federal funding.

The letter ordered clarification of certain points on the University’s affirmative action program and also raised the question of the way the University has arranged its employment records “a crucial part” of any affirmative action program.

Universities, the letter noted, beyond the University, had not yet addressed matters of “substance.”

The Show

The show consisted of three sections, the last being a half-hour of Andre’s illusions, called the concluding demonstration of the process in which the workshop culminated.

But just then reality took a dive for the right and a sight went through the door and the dock like Rick back to the end of a second. A woman dressed in red sat her face to the bar, her face looking like a face of a bodily intelligence that made by blood run cold like no other. Her eyes were closed. With a single glance I finally understood all the world and the human and any other. I recognized from the campus daily —

Meanwhile, in the next room, a hose was up, excused himself to the corner, looking for all the world like a besotted, enchanted friend. Their eyes met. Rick stood up, "Now this might seem a bit strange to you, but...

The university admitted that "the people who were in charge of the program must be technically ordered," though they refused to address any of the reasons behind the declines, or the fact that many students have chosen not to apply to the University because of the declining black and Hispanic enrollment.

Kelsey also criticized the University’s approach towards affirmative action, saying that "the University is not going to change in the right direction, and that’s bad news for us.”

The admissions office has pledged to continue to accelerate minority recruitment efforts in the hope that applications from blacks and Hispanics will match their previous years’ applications. "I know it’s not going to be easy," she said, "but we’re going to make it happen."

Clearing Up Misconceptions About the Andre Kole Performance

Dear Mr. Chairman,

I would like to express my gratitude for the recent performance by Andre Kole. I understand that there has been some confusion regarding the performance and I hope to address some of these misconceptions.

Firstly, the performance was not just a magic show. It was also a commentary on societal issues and the importance of unity and diversity.

Secondly, Andre Kole is not just a magician. He has a strong background in psychology and has used his skills to create a powerful message.

I hope this clears up any misunderstandings and I look forward to seeing more performances like this in the future.

Sincerely,

Over $2000 Robbed at Wharton

By TUNE LEE

Two burglaries were reported in Coronelli Hall yesterday, but University officials are unsure of when the thefts occurred.

The Community - Wharton Education Program office on the building's 1st floor reported the theft of $125 in cash and checks from a locked desk.
Program Director Carrie Spain told
University Police that the office - not Penn Police - is the only office to accept funds.

According to University Police

Sergeant Steve Heath, the theft occurred sometime between Feb. 5 and yesterday. "We have no way of determining when the theft occurred," Heath said.

Heath and police could find no sign of forced entry, but Spain said the desk and the office door had been locked securely.

Approximately $28 in cash and a pair of boots valued at $25 were recently stolen from a 4th floor of-case. Gail Lloyd-Lyde, who reported the theft, said the desk and office door had been locked, and Heath said

The Best Hungarian Goulash Soup in the Free World.

Hidaz is in a cozy side-diner in Pest, Hungary, across the river from Buda, in a quieter little cafe when a man named Stefan证监会 makes Goulash Soup so good people break into tears before finishing their bowls. The regulars at Hidaz have been known to down gallons of the stuff while hollering down the street, breaking and eating bowls against the wall and marrying the Hungarian Cook. And yet, the Hungarian Goulash Soup of Stefan证监会 is also known as the world's healthiest soup recipe by its fans and advocates. Stefan证监会's famous recipe is typically served with a side of paprika, sour cream, and a handful of cherry tomatoes. The soup is typically made with beef, chicken, or pork, and is often garnished with a dollop of sour cream and a sprinkle of paprika. The Daily Pennsylvania
Friends sometimes question your taste in movies.
But they'll see them with you anyway.

It sounded fantastic in the newspaper. But try to see it, will you, and with a little arm-twisting your friends agreed to see it, too.

You've already heard a barrage of jokes about your taste in movies since the curtain came down. And, knowing your friends, they'll go for the laughs. So, to make up for them, and show them your taste isn't bad in everything, here's something a little special. Tonight, let it be Löwenbräu. Here's to good friends.
Minority Effort Faulty

"We get spoiled," he said. "We have to realize that we are dealing with a diminishing number of students. There are also new nationwide only about 300 black, 2000 Latinos, and fewer than 4000 that are considered minority students, and even other race and ethnic groups."

Kieran noted the admission office "traditionally known for closing the book to new applications." "It wouldn't surprise me if we are in such a situation at the end of the academic year," he said, adding that the University's highest admissions currently had "very noisy committee candidates from the bottom of the pool" and to stop.

Marc Rodriguez said a lack of minority candidates "just shows that they're not doing their job and we'll do the best that we can and try to improve the situation for the University."

He added, "We have to trust the admissions office and the University. They've got to do their work on improving student life for the University."

Another outstanding performance was given by Beth Good as the actress who related the origins of her role. She was a real actress, and she made the audience feel as if it were taking part in the play. The plays themselves proved to be the major obstacles to racial awareness. The play, which was so powerful, was a tremendous responsibility on the audience. If the play succeeds, the play and the people of the play should do a little better. They are doing a good job. But we have to improve on their natural talents and the quality of their delivery.

Ceil Carr, was the idea. The plays were meant to be an educational experience — that's why educational experience - that's why the plays are considered educational experience.

Next time you call your sister in San Francisco, say goodbye to us.

Uncertain Gymnasts Host Yale

The men's swimming team travels to Army with a rare opportunity for a win Saturday at 2 p.m.

By TONY EDWARDS

The air in Haldeman Gym was filled with high tension yesterday as Princeton's gymnastics team prepared for their dual meet with Columbia. Much of the uncertainty centered around rumors in various key positions of both men...what else is new?

Both teams were well-advised to describe the men's season up to this point, he could do it at one word — injuries. This year's meet (it has since been renamed) was tailor-made for a first-year real student-athlete.

The last addition to coach Derick Hopen's squad was the return of senior Eric Fischman. Fischman was originally at eight doubles which he had separated earlier this season. Whether or not he will be able to compete against Yale will be determined at today's practice.

Another possible for an appearance against the Bulldogs will be senior Phil Geygan who had been suffering from an ailment, the senior all-around will be limited to two events (parallel bars and pommel horse).

THESIS WRITING

Because you start writing a thesis, you are faced with a dilemma. How do you do research and write at the same time? It is often recommended that you produce several abstracts, drafts, and revisions. This will help you organize your ideas and avoid procrastination. The difference is that word processing allows you to save your work without relying on your memory, and to review your work later. Word processing is a great tool for thesis writing.

"Just to remind you of the real test of how well the Crimson can compete with the Ivy league majors, the Quakers again showed that they are a real threat.

On that note just how worried are the Quakers about facing a 10-Harvard squad?" "We're going to use them as the way our opponents will use us," said Coach Keeny.

"They don't have the luxury of playing two games because they have two games in a row. We have the luxury of two games in a row. We'll have a shot at bettering our 35-4 record.

"We're very strong in all areas and we'll prove it. We'll be back for a third time in three years. We have a busy weekend ahead of them as we face our rivals in the Ivy League.

The track at Princeton is fairly even and the boys, including Harrison, have been consistent in the field events.

"Our field events have been strong," said Moore. "I'm really happy to hear that we've done okay."

"We must be consistant with a lot of seniors."
