Reagan Survives Gunshot Wound

By The Associated Press

President Ronald Reagan was shot while speaking to a gathering in Washington, D.C., late Tuesday night. The bullet struck his left side and left him in serious but stable condition.

The shooting occurred at 10:38 p.m. at a hotel near the White House where the president was attending a political fund-raiser. A Secret Service agent shot and killed the alleged assassin.

It was the first assassination attempt on a sitting U.S. president since John F. Kennedy was shot in Dallas in 1963.

The incident began suddenly. President Ronald Reagan was standing in the midst of a crowd of about 400 people at a fund-raiser for the National Republican Congressional Committee at the Washington Hilton Hotel.

The gunman, identified by sources as an armed security guard, opened fire on Reagan with a .22-caliber pistol. The president was hit in the left cheek and left side of his chest.

Reagan fell to the ground, and the alleged gunman fled on foot.

The Secret Service agent, identified as Tim McCarthy, was shot in the arm and leg.

Reagan was rushed to the hospital, where he underwent surgery. The doctors said he would recover and that his condition was "serious but stable at this time."

River Field Foot Bridge To Be Completed in May

By NIKOLAI SKAIAH
The University announces that a $400,000 pedestrian bridge to River Field, originally scheduled for construction in December, will not be completed and opened until May.

In addition to dissatisfaction with the original price estimate, there were some delays in paperwork, and there was a misunderstanding about the design of the bridge. The University had expected to complete construction in December, but the bridge was not ready to be opened.

The bridge, to be called the "River Field Foot Bridge," will connect River Field with the Franklin Field parking lot. The bridge was designed by Hackney Associates, and the University has been working with them for over a year to make sure the design is finalized.

Dr. Hackney has not met with any of the student advocates and representatives of Hackney Associates. "(Undergraduates) will be all out for a lower price. This effort delayed the University's decision that the difference in price was minimal, so they decided to support my (original) proposal," said McCleary. He added that Hackney Associates had expected the second delay to come from the University themselves to rather clumsy details. "Very Appalled"

The bridge will be completed in May, and the University will work with Hackney Associates to finalize the design and construction process.
Student Loans: Avoiding Misuse

By Christina J. Jachec

President Reagan's proposed cuts in student loans are a pointed issue in the current national debate over the government's role in higher education. The programs in question include the Guaranteed Student Loan Program, Educational Opportunity Grant (EOG), and Work-Study Program.

The philosophy underlying both programs is that the government, as the largest single contributor to student aid, must ensure that these programs are efficient and effective. The government, it is argued, should not fund programs that are inefficient or that provide benefits to only a small group of people. Instead, the government should provide a system that enables students to obtain loans at reasonable interest rates. This system is designed to ensure that students have access to loans at competitive rates.

The government's role in higher education is critical, as it is often the greatest financial burden that many students face. The government programs are designed to assist students in paying for college and to make education more accessible to a wider range of students. However, the proposed cuts in student loans could have a significant impact on many students' ability to afford college.

In conclusion, the government's role in higher education is essential to ensure that students have access to affordable loans. While the proposed cuts in student loans may seem like a small step, they could have a significant impact on many students' ability to afford college. The government should continue to support programs that enable students to obtain loans at reasonable interest rates, as these programs are essential to ensure that students can afford to attend college.

Reagan Survives Shooting

Water was making a company appearance in the city. A man in a short suit jacket and tie had just left the building. He was headed for Austin, Texas. His plane turned back, landing outside Washington in a dead area only under very special circumstances. The pilot, who was also shot, had a permit to carry a gun. Belton told me he has an emotional reaction to the shooting. "I liked George Bush," Rossman said. "I think he'd make a very good president. If, considering his age, Reagan should not carry, Bush is the kind of man I'd rather see in the White House pending the return of the president. Cooper Resigns UA Post To Plan Campaign

Liz Cooper, Undergraduate Assembly Residence Committee chairwoman for the past 13 months, has resigned from that post in order to plan her campaign for UA chairman.

Museum officials said that the museum's need for cuts. "I argued that the museum was a very important place and that it had educational assets. We have created a good level of recognition of the museum as an educational asset," Cooper said last week. "I couldn't say for another full year, so I would like to use the time for campaigning." Cooper said the committee accomplished a great deal during her tenure as chairman. "We have created a good level of communication between residence halls and administrators, especially with Residence Dean Carol Koval and Dean of Students Vernon George Kono. "We did like we had accomplished a lot," Cooper said. "But a lot more still to be done." Specifically, she said the committee had made positive moves in room selection policy and the introduction of mutuality.

"I am glad that the committee's work on admissions in the University residence halls has been well received. The whole process has been very, very slow, and a little disappointing, but we have made good progress," she said, adding that a letter describing the selection policy and the introduction of mutuality gives the University a chance to make sure that other groups should have priority, but initial groups should have priority, but other groups should have a chance. Mitchell said he was pleased to be named the new chairman, and that he will be leaving to Mitchell the task of continuing the fundraising drive, he said yesterday. "The increased subvention simply gives the University a chance to move forward. We can get more things done."

"All groups should have a fair shot at common space," she said. "Residential groups should have priority, but other groups should have a chance." Mitchell said he was pleased to see the new chairman, and that he is looking forward to a new year. "I want to get involved in residence hall maintenance in residences, such as the High Rise residence," he said.

Specifically, she said the committee has made positive revisions in room selection policy and the introduction of mutuality. She appointed Has junior Phil Mit-...
