Divestment Debate May Prompt UA Resignations

By EMILIE SARSEY

The Board of Undergraduate Studies (BUS) Assembly meeting last night saw a record 60 members in attendance. The students present had agreed to support the University Administration in its decision against divestment in South Africa.

The meeting began with a discussion of the administration's recent decision. Student representatives were given an opportunity to express their views, followed by a vote on the matter. The results were not immediately available. The meeting concluded with a short adjournment.

NEWS IN BRIEF

TODAY

CANCUN, Mexico—Mexican President Luis Echeverria opened the first summit of heads of state from Latin America and panned eastern states from a Latin President, Reagan, and the other delegates that opened yesterday in the "warm and arid" global economic system. He declared his country was "ready for the world" and others need to "bridge the gap between the rich and the poor." He told his fellow leaders, seated as a round table behind plastic name plates bearing miniature flags: "It is imperative that we recognize the complexity and plural nature of today's world, instead of trying to impose only one form or another." Mr. Echeverria also mentioned President Reagan's decision not to attend the Mexican conference."He is in a hurry," Mr. Echeverria said, "and he wants to make a priority of drug trafficking. No one is interested in us."

Reagan, who arrived in the Cancun Mexico Hotel conference room near 15 minutes after the scheduled call to order, paid with Secretary of State Shultz, former Vice President Walter Mondale, and the Mexican Foreign Minister. The meeting was held in the Cancun Mexico Hotel conference room and was attended by representatives of all 20 countries and a few observers from the U.S. Department of State and the Mexican government.

Reagan also said that after five seconds after the hung up because he was sure that he had hung up on someone else, a woman told him: "You got everybody now." Michael Reagan, the exchange's senior vice president, said that about eight people were in the building and that they were immediately ordered out. There was no panic or trouble. Everything was orderly, he said. Michael Reagan, the exchange's senior vice president, said that about eight people were in the building and that they were immediately ordered out. A tree in early June, Young, with green apples on it, were starting to bloom. A group of women, carrying bottles and cans, entered the Barn. When questioned, they said they were from a group promoting environmental awareness. They said they were the Pennsylvania Political Union and they were here to protest against the inauguration of Governor Reagan. The Barn manager, a middle-aged woman, said, "This is a private business and we don't allow protests on our premises." The protesters persisted, and the manager eventually agreed to let them remain, provided they stayed quiet and did not disrupt the business. The protesters said they would agree to these terms and began their demonstration.

I've,

 Last October, the Quakers were undersized and outplayed by Penn State, but because of a home-court advantage, great intensity attitude, and above all else, talent, this year, they turned the tables.

 First seeded Karen Neuman Seat Carol Daniels of Penn State, 6-2, 6-2. She was up by a game, 5-1, when Daniels called the match at that point.

 "It was a close game," said Neuman. "She was up by one game in the entire first set and then when we got up 40-0 in the second, she never came back." Daniels said of Neuman, "She's a good player, you have to give her credit."

 "It was a great effort by both players," said Daniels.

 "The second set was the only time when I felt pressure," said Neuman. "I was not getting much points. It took six match points to win one game in the second."

 When asked if she adjusted her game in any way for her Penn State rival, Neuman said, "She was a serve and volleyer. I played her serve. When she went to press, I moved to press her backhand.

 "Cold also reflected upon the fall season. "I'm pleased that I won, but I'm dissatisfied with the fall season. It will be a nine match fall season, meaning schedule. Our victory today proves that we never gave up a good chance in the spring. I hope I can keep up my seeded record (5-0) and keep improving as the season goes on."

 "A great match," said Arama, "the most important point of the season."

At Penn, a long time ago, the Quakers went on a 21-game winning streak in football. The streak was broken just last week and now the team is coming off a weekend loss to Millersville and Coach Don Dobbs is ready to change the team.

"Last week, we played very bad," said Coach Dobbs. "We didn't have a normal practice. The team was tired and ready to move on to the next game." The Quakers have had a lot of success with Dobbs, who is in his first season as coach. He has been able to build a team that is ready to go for the next game.

"We've got good backs and we need to get us back to form," said Dobbs. "If the conditions are bad, we'll try to throw away, while the guys are in good condition. We'll let the running play take over." The Quakers will be going against a Millersville attack that has been slowed down by the defense. The Marauders will rely on a mixed bag of tricks, using run and short passes. The key for the Quakers to have their own attack is to get the ball to (hem," Dobbs said. "We've got to go equally between the offense and defense." The Quakers will be victorious in a tight game this week, after dropping one against Millersville last week. The Quakers have had a lot of success with Dobbs, who is in his first season as coach. He has been able to build a team that is ready to go for the next game.

As The Line Nears Completion

At Penn, a long time ago, the Quakers went on a 21-game winning streak in football. The streak was broken just last week and now the team is coming off a weekend loss to Millersville and Coach Don Dobbs is ready to change the team.

"Last week, we played very bad," said Coach Dobbs. "We didn't have a normal practice. The team was tired and ready to move on to the next game." The Quakers have had a lot of success with Dobbs, who is in his first season as coach. He has been able to build a team that is ready to go for the next game.

"We've got good backs and we need to get us back to form," said Dobbs. "If the conditions are bad, we'll try to throw away, while the guys are in good condition. We'll let the running play take over." The Quakers will be going against a Millersville attack that has been slowed down by the defense. The Marauders will rely on a mixed bag of tricks, using run and short passes. The key for the Quakers to have their own attack is to get the ball to (hem," Dobbs said. "We've got to go equally between the offense and defense." The Quakers will be victorious in a tight game this week, after dropping one against Millersville last week. Quakers Face Dogfights In Ivy Country

BOOTS: 1st Road Win
On the Line

By KAREN WOODSON

It's a long road up to Yale. But the Pennsylvania team won't see that fact until they're on their way home.

They have gone from last place in the Ivy League standings to second place. And they accomplished that by scoring three goals in the second half on two goals by Matt Grayson.

The Quakers have been in a drought all season. But they are now in a position to make a run at the Ivy League title.

They have scored 21 goals in the last five games and 30 this season. They are shooting at 38 percent.

"Change in strategy and personnel has been a plus," head coach John DeSilva said. "We needed to bring in some fresh blood. We went with a more physical approach." The Quakers have been a little too physical in the past.

We're going to make up for it next year because we're going to have more experience.

But for this season, we need to be more patient and less physical. We need to be able to move the ball more quickly.

The game is not over until the whistle blows, and we're going to make sure that happens.

The Quakers have been on a roll lately, and they're looking to continue the momentum.

That's why we need to keep working hard and improving our game. We have a lot to learn, but we're excited to be back in the hunt for the Ivy League title.

We have a lot of chemistry on this team, and we're looking forward to the rest of the season.

The Quakers are in a good position to make a run at the Ivy League title. They have the talent and the experience to pull it off.

But they need to stay focused and continue to work hard. They have a lot to prove in the remaining games.

The Quakers are looking to make a statement in the final games of the season.

They're going to be a tough team to beat.
