Shuttle Astronauts Prepare Cape Canaveral, Fla. — The two astronauts and Richard Truly arrived at the Cape yesterday, and said they are more than ready for the launch of the space shuttle Columbia. The flight, which has been delayed two days, was postponed as a result of the weather.

If the countdown continues well and the weather cooperates, the shuttle will lift off from its runway and become the first ship to return to space since the space shuttle Columbia. The launch of the space shuttle Columbia is scheduled for tomorrow.

"Columbia's flight and I see it as a more than normal," Truly said. "We've got to go out and make it happen." Truly said that he and the crew are eager to get into the sky.

The astronauts were smiling, relaxed and obvious.

After hotly disputed remarks, Truly and Truly were taking F-16 fighter planes back to the same airfields.

The skies were clear, with the wind at about 15 mph and visibility of about 10 miles. Rainfall and high crosswinds were expected.

Court To Rule on the Def

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court is a court that could make a ruling in the coming days that sets a precedent for future cases.

The case involves a challenge to the federal court system's ability to make decisions in the case.

The justices will decide whether certain defendants may be held in federal prison due to their inability to pay a fine.

The court ruled yesterday that the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals had jurisdiction to hear the case.

On Renewed CIA Interference

To the Editor:

Recently, the Central Intelligence Agency, the most powerful organization for recruitment in the United States, has been allowed to operate on the Penn campus. The CIA is responsible for many of the illegal activities of the CIA, the most criminal organization on the planet. The CIA operates under the guise of the Penn Political Union, the student government of the University of Pennsylvania.

Warning Students of Future Concerts

To the Editor:

I am writing this letter after reading Robert W. Thompson's "Theatrical Terrors in the October 25 Penn Daily". While my friends and I were enjoying the show, we noticed that the audience was not very enthusiastic. It was clear that the audience was not appreciating the performance. We were concerned that the show was not living up to the expectations.

More on Action

To the Editor:

I enjoyed reading the article in the Daily Pennsylvanian about the recent protest against the renewed CIA interference on the Penn campus. I agree with the author's perspective and believe that it is important to continue fighting against this interference.

A Clarification

To the Editor:

The letter written in reference to the article "Keep Fly!" about Broadway in the October 25 Penn Daily was not accurate. The letter did not mention that the show was "monotonous" or that the audience was not interested. The letter did say that the audience was not engaged and that the performance was not "fun".

A University Cover-up

To the Editor:

In the letter of October 25th, the author states that "the Penn administration is covering up the truth about the renewed CIA interference on the Penn campus." I would like to clarify that the letter does not provide evidence to support this claim.

Dealing With Issues, Comfortably

Godzilla, it's been a while. Where the hell have you been today, and don't give me any crap about the library. I know you were at that concert last night, and your friends said you had a good time. I'm almost certain you did. Thanks. Just looking out for you.

The Hippies. You know, the first time I saw them was in Swarthmore, and they were the first to tell me about free love. I think it was some sort of a bonding experience, we painted our faces the same day. Anyway, it's good to see you out. What have you been doing since then? Going to concerts and seeing the latest movies?

Not really. So what? You're not out there seeing that you're a part of the scene. That was three years ago. We're not living in Berkeley anymore, remember? What a drag. What was his name, Brahm? or something? They made me leave because I was gay. I think I'm going stir crazy.

What a trip. Who ever thought that paint was near you. I see you're the first victim of Saturday night's attack. I was attacked on the campus. I was attacked in the quad, and I was attacked on the street all night—at least that's what I heard on the radio. I heard that someone was injured.

I was attacked. Such weapons may have been used. I was attacked with a pipe in my hand when I was walking home from Schorr. I had the slightest idea that such an attack was going to happen. I was walking home from Schorr when I was attacked. I was attacked while walking home from Schorr. It was a cold night, but I was still walking home from Schorr.

The usual. He's still fighting with his parents, this time about omelet's. Things change. What a joke. I was running, and he was chasing me. I don't know what happened.

To the Bigoted Few

Dear Sir,

You write, "Do whatever you can to be known that you are one of those who believe in the Brotherhood of all men who, in a word, stand and red our beliefs." I do not claim to be a perfect person. Like everyone I have my own prejudices. I think it is important to be aware of one's prejudices, and I think it is also important to try to overcome them. I do not believe that anyone should be forced to do something that they do not want to do. I believe that people should be able to live their lives as they choose, and that they should be able to make their own decisions about what is right and wrong. I believe that everyone should be treated with respect, and that everyone should be allowed to express their own views and beliefs.

Sincerely,

Controller Elections

Rosen said he was appalled that the governor had "bought off" some voters during the June 24 election with a $1 million campaign fund. "The bill should have been killed in its infancy," he said. "It's not in the best interest of these people. It's a kickback to those who contributed to the campaign fund."

A special election will be held in November to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of the retiring Republican controller.
