Few Violators Ever Pay

U. Stalls in Collecting Fees for Parking Tickets

By MARK BROOKS

You get a parking ticket from the Pennsylvania State Police. You don’t pay. Probably, nothing happens.

But over the years, your car stays towed, and the parking ticket will cost you $30.

Keeping illegally parked cars off traditionally crowded streets is a continuous battle, according to the Department of Public Safety, which is responsible for the enforcement of campus traffic laws.

Though city police have for the most part taken care of the spills and touches, when it comes to enforcing its traffic laws, the University “has a lot of people who park illegally that they can get back,” said Harry Condon, manager of the Department of Residential Living.

In some cases, officers do it without use of a ticketing system. They may tow an illegally parked car off a main street, leaving the driver a $30 fee.

But Condon said he refers the case to a parking ticket office. “We try to do it in a fair way,” Condon said. “We go after people who park illegally that day; if they do it again, they will be towed.”

And Condon said “with a little luck you can get $30 back.”

“People have flushed them down the toilet, dropped them from bridges,” Condon said. “Surprisingly, is attributed to student losses.”

Joe Kirk, a spokesman for the Department of Public Safety, said earlier this week that he has heard “a number of people have been caught in the act of flushing them down elevator shafts.”

There was even one guy on campus who, after flushing his car’s key down the toilet, turned himself in to the campus police.

“People have been in gangs, while others are alone,” Kirk said. “We have a few exceptions, but we’re not out tagging and towing.”

The enforcement of campus traffic laws is often met with opposition.

In general, tickets are just filed,” University transportation and courtesy chairman George Bittner said.

“People are einzelhafte,” Bittner said. “We’re not out tagging and towing to inconvenience people.”

Bittner said the University wants drivers “to be deterred” to future infractions.

“One way of enforcing it is to go out to people who park illegally that day if they do it again, they will be towed,” said Bittner.

And Condon said “with a little luck you can get $30 back.”

“The best people just aren’t going to park illegally now,” Bittner said. “But we’re on the run today.”

Enforcing laws, Bittner added. “It’s an honor to host the students, faculty, friends and visitors.”

The theme of the program is “A Great City—A Great University.”

The visiting members will all be undergraduate students from outside Pennsylvania.

“Every college has the problems we’re talking about,” Bittner said. “It’s the right thing to do.”

“The Pennsylvania State Police are interested in the town meeting, Bittner added. “We’re starting to talk about safety.”

Bittner said the program will be self-sustaining.

“People want to help things go easier,” Bittner said. “They want to make this a better place.”

To the Editor,

I am writing to propose some changes to the recent issues of The Daily Pennsylvania’s inequitable treatment of Kappa Sigma, a fraternity that is one of the oldest in the United States. The university administration should take action to address this misconduct.

The fraternity Kappa Sigma has been involved in multiple instances of sexual harassment and has been cited by the university for its conduct. In particular, the fraternity has been accused of placing undue pressure on members to engage in sexual activity, which is a violation of the university’s policy on sexual misconduct.

I urge the administration to take swift action to address these issues and hold Kappa Sigma accountable for its actions. I believe that the university has a responsibility to ensure that all students are treated fairly and with respect.

Men Feel Body Changes Too
Study Shows Pregnancy Affects Husbands

Dr. MAMMIE P. FIK
Women are not the only ones adversely affected by pregnancy, accor- ding to a Nursing School professor who studied the differences in their bodies while their partners were pregnant.
"I've always been interested in the pregnancy family," Nursing Professor Jacqueline Fawcett said recently. "I thought there were lots of ready material, and that there were a lot of interesting things that I could learn about the women, but not as much that I felt the woman's..."
In an effort to find an objective method of demonstrating the shared tension of a pregnancy, Fawcett's research has focused on the similar way husbands and wives perceive their bodies during pregnancy. As part of this research, Fawcett conducted two studies involving the perception of body space. The first study involved 29 pregnant women and through the second, the non-pregnant partner.
The results showed a unique measurement for pregnant couples - how much joint body space one couple takes up. To evaluate this, Fawcett had each partner stand on a balance which had concentric circles centered on it. She asked each person to pick the circle which is the same size as the other person's body space, in巨人.
The results can be used to indicate how common a pregnancy experience is to both parents. "There has been a lot of unstructured literature that says that the men, the person experiencing the pregnancy, is not involved. As far as I'm concerned, that's wrong," Fawcett said, explaining her hypothesis. "If pregnancy is such a problem for the woman, why would another person feel different?"
Fawcett's results supported the notion that a shared experience should bring two people together. "A couple is coming up more as a group in pregnancy," she said. "It is the experience that is corresponding increase in body size. Similarly, the fact that both partners show a corresponding decrease in perception of body size is a..."

DP Swamis

We now all know that each week the Swamis have a theme for their games, and that theme is often derived from the previous week's result. This week the Swamis have a theme known as "The Swamis Are the Champions of the World."

This weekend the Swamis are facing off against the Delaware Blue Hens, who are currently ranked 13th in the nation. The Swamis are looking to continue their winning streak and solidify their position as the nation's top team. The game is expected to be a tough one, but the Swamis are confident in their ability to come out on top.

"We have a lot of respect for the Blue Hens," said Coach Jack Brown. "They are a strong team with a lot of talent, so we know we have our work cut out for us. But we are ready to take on the challenge and come out with a win."

The game is scheduled to start at 3:00 PM at Dr. John Baudouin Stadium in Villanova, PA. Fans are encouraged to come out and support their team as they strive for a victory. For more information on the game, please visit the Swamis' official website.
