The Aftermath
Low Rise Rebounds From Phone Threats

BY CLYDE WALTERS

While phone continue to intrude on college life, the main factor is the rise of threats.

The past few years have seen
a rise in phone threats.

The trend continues to rise
with each passing year.

In fact, the number of phone threats has doubled in the last decade.

The latest number of
phone threats in the last year was 1,200.

The rise in phone threats
is due to a number of factors, including:

- A rise in crime and
violence
- A rise in economic
problems
- A rise in political
and social tensions

The rise in phone threats
has caused a great deal of counter-measures to be implemented.

The University has
increased its security
measures and has
installed more
security cameras.

Students and Faculty
are encouraged to report
any phone threats they receive.

Many phone threats
are traced to external
sources.

For example, the University has had to investigate a number of
false threats.

The rise in phone threats
is a disturbing trend that must be addressed.

We must work together to find solutions to this problem.

We must find a way to reduce the frequency and
intensity of phone threats.

We must find a way to
make our campuses safer.

We must find a way to
protect our students and faculty from these threats.

We must find a way to
protect our community from these threats.

Politics on Campus: A Turn to the Right

"I think many students are annoyed by the behavior of some radicals on campus and this annoyance should be less associated with the left. We believe that any proceedings in the UA should occur with our shoes on."

"I've been seeing a conservative trend on campuses," said Professor Dean and Professor Peter Clarke, the Monday Feature contributor. Clarke said the trend is evident in the way conservative students have joined the university newspaper, the Daily Trojan.

"There are more conservative students joining the Daily Trojan," Clarke said. "I've noticed a lot of students who used to be leftists are now joining the Daily Trojan." Clarke said this is evidence of a trend towards conservatism on campuses.

Recalling an Infamous Event

The letter-writers then pointed out that students were involved in the original protest, but they explained that students were not paid. The protest was later turned into a "sky-drop exhibition." They also explained that the protest was carried out "through a simple umbrella," re-creating considerable soul throughout the college.

The next day, they were praised and associated with the jump because of scientific planning. "Though the day was in fact composed of two large trash bags, it was very carefully

Students at the University of Pennsylvania are interested in creating a new student-run program that would allow them to tutor prisoners at the Holmesburg Correctional Facility. The program, called "Student Tutoring for Students," would involve students working with prisoners who are interested in learning about the activities that put them in prison. The program would provide a unique opportunity for students to gain valuable experiences and potentially make a difference in the lives of those they are tutoring. The program is being developed by a group of students who are passionate about social justice and educational opportunities. The program would be run by a committee of students, faculty, and professionals, and would involve a partnership with the Pennsylvania Department of Corrections. The program is expected to be well-received by the students and the prisoners, and could have a positive impact on both groups. The program is currently in the planning stages, and the organizers are looking for support and feedback from the Penn community. For more information, visit the Student Tutoring for Students website or contact the organizers directly.

An attempt to stop the offensive line of the University of Pennsylvania...
Quakers knew they had to turn said Moore. "The chances were that diving attempt to head the ball into the league, and Soccer Seven player Ol Viltanova goal, and drilled a shot very well, followed Gensib across the ninth-place effort.

I'm really glad the whole team will learn from that. I don't know if I'll measure up with the seniors' best." Castings a more serious view of the team's outlook toward the Nationals, "We're not giving up," she said. "Not now, not after we've come this far. We're not just going to let them walk in and take the silver."

"We're a strong team, and this could be a very valuable learning experience. We're a surprise team, we've been spoiling people all year and we'll continue to do so. If we keep on playing like we have been, we can finish where we can be."

"I'm really glad the whole team will learn from that. I don't know if I'll measure up with the seniors' best."

In the second half, Mowes could have delivered a coffin to the wind.

For 38 of the next 44 minutes, Penn stayed at the tournament to make the final score 21-14.

Put off balance by Hofstra's style of play, Princeton again made it that much easier for Hofstra. "Our kids showed great character," said Bauman, even though a few breaks would have given Penn about six goals. "We dominated there, but not completely."

Which was probably the best estimation of the game.

It may not be good news for Penne's basketball team, but the Quakers are on the move. Last week, the team played like a squad with a winning attitude and that's all that matters.

In a 77-65 win over Villanova, the Quakers came from behind to take control of the game in the second half. In the second half, the team scored 35 points, compared to Villanova's 19 points.

With five minutes remaining in the game, the Quakers were ahead by 12 points, 52-34, and kept the lead throughout the remainder of the game.
