Panel To Review College Houses

By CREWTON FLOYD
In an effort to relieve the pressure of residential college houses in University Life, the Faculty Senate House Council has organized a five-member committee to investigate the problems of the system. Charles L. Sherman, chairman of the committee, said that the committee has been given a list of models which the University "may wish to take a look at." If a decision were made that the houses were not working "in 10 years," the House House master Robert Lord, who chairs the committee, said, and then the committee would make a decision to either close or renovate the houses.

"Our goal is to prepare a report and present it by the middle of next month," Lord said.

Each of the committee's proposals will be analyzed by a computer for quantitative information, such as financial data on the number of possible courses which could be given in the houses.

"We were concerned with the printing of the models," Lord said. "College houses are expensive, no doubt about that, and we have to have some techniques to make sure that's true." Lord was careful to point out that the committee is not recommending the plan, but rather investigating it.

Search For Graduation Speakers Underway

By ROY BAYLESS
The Senior Class Board is urging students to accept a letter saying that no important and interesting people will be chosen to be speakers for the forthcoming commencement.

"We want to publicize this, because every year it is very important and we want students to know what is going on," Senior Class President David Stein said and added, "We want to start searching for a speaker right now." Stein was careful to point out that the committee is not recommending the plan, but rather investigating it.

Sherman said that a committee member should be affiliated with the University, including the faculty, students, alumni, or residents, but also include people who have won money for the University and parents of University students.

"I think they will be chosen in the most professional way," Stein said. "But if you understand, the President's husband has very much to do with this." Stein was careful to point out that the committee is not recommending the plan, but rather investigating it.

As a result of the commencement and graduation functions, the University Life office in the future will be responsible for booking the houses, Sherman said. The committee will be responsible for booking houses, according to the committee's proposal.

"We are ensuring the booking by signing a contract with the houses," Stein said. "We are ensuring the booking by signing a contract with the houses." Stein was careful to point out that the committee is not recommending the plan, but rather investigating it.

The committee will then create a list of speakers which the University Life Department will use to select the speakers, according to Stein.

A nationally known energy expert, Mayer is not teaching this semester, but has been named by the committee to fill the position of a speaker which is being considered for the commencement.

Pearl Harbor Remembered 40 Years Later

By JOSHUA TAN
A historical lecture on the significance of "Pearl Harbor At 40 Years Later" was held at the University of Pennsylvania on Friday afternoon.

Lavrenty, the Elder's, said that though Americans since 1941 have been exposed to "the effects of war," the world as divided into two "camps" and to join the Allies. Before Pearl Harbor, he added, "it's absolutely American policy." The world as divided into two "camps" and to join the Allies. Before Pearl Harbor, he added, "it's absolutely American policy." Reagan Rejects Khadyf's Plot Denial

WASHINGTON - President Reagan yesterday ruled out a coming plot to assassinate the Libyan leader Muammar Khadyf's denial that the terrorists have any ties to the United States to kill government leaders, "It wouldn't happen on our watch," he said. The President's statement came in response to questions about the purported threats and said the increased security measures even prevent the first family from attending church on Christmas. "It's too difficult to go to church because you had to sign statements about having a live-in guard," he said. "But I am very happy to have it," he said of the tightened protection.

Hijacking Drama Continues

BARRANQUILLA, Colombia - One of three Venezuelan airlines flights, a jet with a highly coordinated operation landed last night in the Honduran capital of Tegucigalpa, airport officials said.

The hijackers, who are thought to be members of the leftist guerrilla organization, the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia, said they were seeking to bring political prisoners and protesters out of jail.

In an interview Sunday, President Jimmy Carter said he was "tormented" by the deaths of the three Americans.

Meanwhile, the President's wife, Mrs. Reagan, said she was "very disturbed" by the deaths of the three Americans.

Reagan called Carter "silly" and "ignorant" to believe the assassination possibility.

Carter said Reagan was not aware of any plans to make evidence public.

In an interview Sunday with ABC News, Mrs. Carter is quoted as saying, "We are sure we haven't any people to kill Reagan or any other people in the world."

Carter added that Reagan's "state-wide" and "health problems" made the possibility of a hijacking plot "inevitable".

In an interview Sunday, Mrs. Reagan said she was "very disturbed" by the deaths of the three Americans.

A Question of Honor

Back when collegiate sports were avoided part of the learning process, a group of universities formed an organization to insure that their football programs would be treated as an integral part of the college experience. The Athletic Association, at its inception, was intended to set standards and scholarship guidelines, and generally to prevent a situation where college teams were professionalized.

The principle was carried a step further in 1910, when the Ivy League was founded as an organization of elite universities. Four headquarters, principally a combination of students' organizations and student athletes, were the Ivy League. Eight teams, among them the universities teams of college football, decided that athletic competition and a strong team spirit would be a great contributor to the overall health and well-being of the student body. These two decisions established a football tradition that has become an important part of the college experience.

Yet, as the popularity of college football has grown, so too have the pressures to professionalize the sport. The decision by the NCAA this week to establish a four-team playoff system is a clear example of this trend. The decision was made to increase the revenue generated by the sport and to improve the overall quality of play. However, this move threatens to disrupt the traditional values of collegiate football.

The value of college football lies in its ability to bring students together, provide a sense of community, and foster a spirit of competition. While the four-team playoff system may bring more attention and money to the sport, it also risks diluting the educational experience that has made college football so unique.

The Need for WXPN

By Christine Woodside

The University of Pennsylvania has a long history of providing a diverse range of student activities, from sports and music to student union and student government. The history of WXPN-FM, the student radio station, is one such example.

WXPN has played a vital role in the lives of students at the University for over 50 years. It has provided a platform for local artists and has been a source of entertainment for students. However, the station's future is uncertain.

The Need for WXPN

By Christine Woodside

The University of Pennsylvania has a long and proud history of providing a diverse range of student activities, from sports and music to student union and student government. The history of WXPN-FM, the student radio station, is one such example.

WXPN has played a vital role in the lives of students at the University for over 50 years. It has provided a platform for local artists and has been a source of entertainment for students. However, the station's future is uncertain.

The station was founded in 1931 by the students of the University of Pennsylvania as a means of providing a diverse range of music to the campus. Over the years, WXPN has developed into a leading source of alternative and independent music, and has become a major player in the local music scene.

The station's commitment to providing a platform for local artists is evident in its programming, which includes a diverse range of music genres, from indie rock and alternative to hip-hop and electronic. WXPN has also been a major supporter of local musicians and bands, providing them with a platform to showcase their talent.

However, the future of WXPN is uncertain as the University of Pennsylvania is considering closing the station. If this decision is made, it would be a loss for the local music scene and a blow to the University's reputation as a supporter of the arts.

WXPN has been a vital part of the University of Pennsylvania community for over 50 years. It has provided a platform for local artists and has been a source of entertainment for students. The University should reconsider its decision and find a way to support WXPN's continued operation.

Quad Burglaries Leave U. Police in Quandary

By STEVEN SEVIL

University system police said they are looking into recent burglaries at several Quad areas.

"There are so many possibilities," said university police chief Jerry H. Macaulay, "that I feel confident we will be able to solve any of these cases in the near future.

"The results of the investigation show that there were a number of factors at play, including the deconstruction of some of the dormitory rooms for renovation," he said.

"We've since learned that some students were in the dormitories during the weekend," Macaulay added. "These individuals were questioned and a search was conducted.

"A separate report, they were not aware of any specific burglaries. Seven students reported losses of $50 and $250 to various electronics and jewelry. Greg Poparski, who lost a stereo and an amplifier, said yesterday his loss was 'covered by insurance.'

"However, it is important to note that he had the full cost of a Poparski's lost and restored with the help of a friend. Poparski's also said that work that he has a service key that had to be unlocked and this confirmed that the main entry was a possible.

"And even the Quad doesn't have a key. The best we can do is try to get to the root of the problem." Poparski added.

"She noted that a large number of people who had access to the campus during Thanksgiving vacation would be encouraged to consider her investigation.

"In order to get to the bottom of the problem, we need more people to come forward. The department has already received complaints against the center for false electioneering of some witnesses who have not been interviewed. We need to look into this further.

Demotion of Ivy League Teams from Division I-A: Defies History

A hundred and twelve years ago, Pennsylvania resumed participation in the first football game played in the United States. In the one hundred and nine years that have since elapsed, football has been played at the school for twenty-four seasons, with the Ivy League championships being won thirty-five times. In the thirty-five championship matches, Penn's opponents were widely regarded as superior, and in some instances blanked the Quakers. The current crop of football players are being asked to continue this tradition.

The problem was that the NCWA, whose membership includes all programs in the CFA, had already signed a collective bargaining agreement with the National College Athletics Association (NCAA) which restricted the number of games each school could play. The NCWA would lose its eligibility for the Division I-A status if they played more than twelve games.

In the 1970-71 season, the Pennsylvania football team compiled a record of four wins and six losses. The team was ranked tenth in the football coaches association's poll.

Despite the loss of the football team, the university's other sports teams were still eligible for the Division I-A status.

The Quakers are one of the few schools in the Ivy League that have never lost a football game. They have compiled a record of 32-1-1 in their nine seasons of Division I-A football. Their only loss came in 1972, when they were defeated by Harvard, 14-0.

The university's administration is not discouraged by the loss of the football team. They believe that the university's other sports teams are still capable of achieving success in their respective conferences.

The university's athletic director, Dr. James McQuade, said that the university's commitment to athletics is not wavered by the loss of the football team. He said, "We believe that our other sports teams are still capable of achieving success in their respective conferences."
