Rep. Gray Urges End To Racial Inequality

By B. DANIEL DORSEY

Pennsylvania Congressman William Gray has told protesters at a series of standing up and walking demonstrations that "this is a crucial fight for the future of America." He said that the recent events, such as the shooting of a Black man by a white police officer in Ferguson, Missouri, have made it clear that "we cannot afford to ignore the issue of racial inequality." Gray has called for a "national dialogue" to address the root causes of racism and to work towards a more just and equitable society.

BLACK GRADUATES URGE DIVESTMENT OF U. HOLDINGS

By B. STANL FADIS

The board of trustees of the Black Alumni Association passed a resolution on Wednesday urging the University to divest its investments in companies doing business in South Africa. The resolution was passed by a vote of 12 to 4, with two abstentions. The board cited "the ethical and moral implications of investing in companies that profit from racial oppression" as the primary reason for their decision.

Keep said he felt "deeply troubled" by the lawsuit, which seeks more than $400,000 in damages for "misrepresentation and fraudulent inducement." Keep denied all allegations made in the suit, and said he was "confident" of victory.

BANK MACHINE'S MURDER

By L. ENDALE

A burglar at Girard Bank and Trust robbed a customer of $3,200 on Friday afternoon. The customer was using the bank's new drive-through service, which allows customers to make deposits and withdrawals without leaving their cars. The robber, who fled the scene on foot, was described as a white male, around 5'10" tall, with short black hair. The bank has increased security measures in response to the incident.

News In Brief

Senator Calls for End to Polish Aid

WASHINGTON — Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Jesse Helms, R-N.C., called for an end to U.S. aid to Poland and for the imposition of economic sanctions until Poland begins to respect human rights.

Helms said in a letter to Secretary of State George Shultz that the U.S. should impose “the most appropriate sanctions” against Poland until the country begins to heed the demands of its citizens for a greater measure of freedom.

The letter, dated Jan. 20, was sent to Shultz as part of a bipartisan effort among members of Congress to increase pressure on Poland to implement economic reforms and respect human rights.

The letter comes as Poland faces economic difficulties and political pressure from Western countries to make progress on its road to economic stability and democracy.

Helms said that the U.S. should consider imposing economic sanctions, such as restrictions on trade and investment, until Poland begins to implement economic reforms and respect human rights.

Helms noted that Poland is one of the few Eastern European countries that the U.S. has provided significant economic aid to, and that the country has made limited progress in economic reforms.

He added that the U.S. should consider imposing economic sanctions until Poland begins to implement economic reforms and respect human rights.

Students Work Out, Work Off Tension

By ROBERT KARNE

Old sneakers are coming out of the closet, and forgotten sports equipment is once again being put to use. People of all ages are exercising, and the University intramural program has been overwhelmed with hundreds of increasingly popular fitness programs.

The program is a well-oiled oll-hool ol the intramural sports program is by far the largest at the University. The near constant involvement of students participating in athletics has increased exponentially over the past ten years. The reasons for this phenomenon are manifold. Students more than ever before are choosing to get involved in organized sports and fitness activities through a variety of sources. The majority of the students at Penn do something -- at least I like 10 think that they do," he said.

On Losing Somerville

Along with the rest of the University community, we applaud Joan Somerville's decision to leave the University next semester. Somerville has trained conscientious perceptions into professional action during her tenure as Vice President for University Life, and her departure will be a grace note for the University administration and the University as a whole.

During the past year's administrative transition, Somerville was an initiator and a problem-solver. As many of us who've had the opportunity to work with Somerville's past and present leadership, and the causal about students. Lastly, Somerville's departure isn't due but because she had the right combination of composed manner, detail and superb, and who are the people's education, which led to any part of the city other than an involved with the community of Philadelphia.

The rights of the mentally retarded, the children of drug abuse and tolerance should tell us that to individual students. It applies to all of us. The change of the guard has deprived the University of its visionary leaders and rising stars. Somerville's resignation means the University has allowed yet another talented and unique leader to fade into the shadows.

To the University and to the University community, we applaud Somerville's resignation. The University must be a magnet for leaders who believe in education, who respect the rights of all students, and who are committed to ensuring that the University does not avoid difficult issues. Jane Somerville embodied those beliefs in her recognition of a priority above all others.

University leaders must welcome them and honor an atmosphere which allows them to flourish. To this end, the University must avoid the temptation to settle for those who are only effective administratively.

Vital leaders have propelled the University to greatness in the past, and the future will be bright only if the campus is prepared to welcome them and foster an atmosphere which recognizes that our focus lies with the students. It is not time to ignore our leaders and then rely on the students. The University is not in a crisis; it is not time to ignore Somerville's resignation.

The change of the guard has deprived the University of its visionary leaders and rising stars. Somerville's resignation means the University has allowed yet another talented and unique leader to fade into the shadows.
Search Panel for Dental Dean Begins Work

Dr. Bick Darabchi

The search committee for the position of Dental School dean has begun working, meeting last week with outgoing Dean Walter Cohen on the rate of the school. President Thomas Eich, who gave the faculty and medical committee its approval last week, noted that the dental professor Mosler Amendments are part of the committee, and last week "The charge of the Dental School was a look both within the county and internationally to find the best possible candidate."

Search Committee Chairman Lee Amsterdam, who serves as a member of the committee, which consists of top voting and non-voting committee members, on Friday. The dean "presented the committee with an update on the present state of the school, the long-range plans of the school, the rate of the faculty, and the school's budget," Amsterdam said. Cohen, who has been dean since 1972, announced his retirement last fall, and has agreed to stay on until a replacement is found. After retiring, Amsterdam said he doesn't know how long the search will take, adding that once someone has been chosen "It's a question of when will be the best time to bring the dean to his institution." He added that he hopes the dean will be chosen by the end of the semester.

Amsterdam has announced the opening will be placed in major newspapers and journals. Amsterdam said the committee "had expected that many applications as possible from within the University community," be added.

Amsterdam added. The organization has no formal list of names. At the meeting, the board

Dear Daddy

Conventional Play is Emotionally Gripping

By DAVID'S WEB

Once in a while a play comes along that uses conventional dramatic form to treat an unusual subject. Denise Concert's "Dear Daddy," which dealt with American penned, was such a production. Written in 1972, it was published last year by Dramatists Play Publishing Company. The play opens with Bernard and his second wife, Mary, preparing for the arrival of his three grown children at their home in London. Gillian, his only daughter, is an adopted son of women's liberation. Billy, the son, and charge of his father, is an overachiever, an Adonis, a master of understanding how you're taken for granted, and how not to get hurt. He inhibits his emotions towards his family, yet he is always hurt by these attacks. With the unexpected arrival of Bernard's first wife, Mary, things take a turn for the worse. The play explores the inner world of a family, a family separating themselves from the emotional world of a small area. It is a family that is trying to control the emotional world of the characters. It is a family that is trying to control the emotional world of the characters. It is a family that is trying to control the emotional world of the characters.

The drama is an extremely powerful one. It shows how the ideal or the family that has lost its direction in the individual members of this family. It is a family that is trying to control the emotional world of the characters. It is a family that is trying to control the emotional world of the characters. It is a family that is trying to control the emotional world of the characters. It is a family that is trying to control the emotional world of the characters.

Get out of the classroom and into the real world. Join the DP.

Your college education will begin in a classroom. You will sit, listen, and take notes. At test time, you will regurgitate the scads of information you've memorized. It's that simple.

To really learn, though, you've got to take what you've absorbed out of the classroom, put it to work, and make things happen. That's what The Daily Pennsylvanian is all about.

We're the University's daily newspaper, one of the finest in the nation. And for 97 years this student-run organization has been a firm believer in the idea that the only way you really learn is through hands-on experience.

From the written word to the printed page, we've got endless ways for you to get involved. And have a good time at it, too.

WRITING: There is no journalism school at the University of Pennsylvania. No journalism department. And very few journalism courses. We can provide you with the journalism training you just can't find in a classroom.

Altogether, we give you six different departments to write for. Our beat reporters and general assignment writers on the news, features and city staffs cover the campus, the city and the nation.

Our sportswriters are there on the sidelines, following the action — wherever it is. Editorial columnists add their commentary on local and national issues. And with the DP's Thursday magazine, 34th Street, our writers provide complete information on Philadelphia arts and entertainment alongside the most thorough coverage of any Ivy League newspaper.

Unlike other college papers, we don't believe in special training programs for new writers. As a writer — for news, city, feature, sports, editorial or 34th Street, we'll show you all you need to know, right on the job.

SHOOTING: Where the action goes, so go our photographers. Across campus, across town, and across the country. We'll show inexperienced photographers how to make things click.

SELLING: Our advertising department can teach you things about sales and marketing you'll never learn in a textbook. Our staff of sales representatives is constantly in touch with regular advertisers and always on the lookout for new prospects. And their efforts are well rewarded with commissions. If you have sales experience, come join us. And if you don't we'll be more than happy to show you what it takes to become a successful member of the sales team.

MANAGING: Our financial and credit offices can provide you with the opportunity to learn accounting and financial management. These two offices manage the DP's growing $450,000 budget. Introduce yourself to our microcomputer and get hands-on computing experience. As an independent organization, the newspaper's student staff makes all its decisions without outside control.

DESIGNING: Our production department can provide an outlet for your creative skills and imagination. Staff members are responsible for the layout and design of all the ads in each issue of the paper. And if you don't know the difference between a pica and a point, don't fret. We'll teach you all you need to know. On the job. We're also looking for qualified artists who can provide material for our advertisements and for our editorial pages.

Try one, try all. None requires prior experience. You can work as much or as little as you want — from a few hours when you have the time up to 40 hours a week or more. And our computerized newsroom and business office make the training you'll receive here a valuable commodity.

Your college education will begin in a classroom. Don't let it end there. Get out and into the real world. Join The Daily Pennsylvanian.

A WINE AND CHEESE RECEPTION WILL FOLLOW
Big Green Dunk Mermen; Penn Record Links To 1-4

BRIEFLY.

Usually, a decisive loss is a great disappointment to the disappointed team. After almost a month of home meet competition, the undefeated men's gymnastics team finally suffered its first setback. On Thursday, Penn's squad took second place to Florida State University in their meet at the Palestra.

Penn's record now stands at a perfect 5-0, while the Seminole's is 1-1. Florida State's 186-174 victory was not as convincing as one would expect from such a talented team. However, the meet was still a memorable one for both teams.

"It was a good meet. It's a good team. We have some solid guys and some great work ethic," said George Breen, the coach of the Penn men's gymnastics team.

Despite the loss, Breen was pleased with his team's performance. "We had some great matches and some good individual performances," he said.

The meet began with the vaulting competition, where Penn's Matt Andover led the way with a score of 11.4. Florida State's David Velasquez followed with a score of 11.2. In the second event, the parallel bars, Penn's Ryan Hoagland earned a score of 11.1, ahead of Florida State's Luke Sides with a score of 11.0. The Vault, an exciting event, saw Penn's Matt Andover lead the way with a score of 11.3, followed by Florida State's Alex Weis with 11.2. In the horizontal bar event, Penn's Matt Andover outperformed Florida State's Ryan Hoagland with a score of 11.2. On the floor exercise, Penn's Alex Weis won with a score of 11.1, followed by Florida State's Luke Sides with 11.0. The meet concluded with the team competition, where Penn's Matt Andover led the way with a score of 11.4, followed by Florida State's David Velasquez with 11.2. Overall, Penn's Matt Andover won the all-around competition with a score of 46.0, followed by Florida State's David Velasquez with 45.8.

The meet was held in the Palestra, home of the Penn men's gymnastics team. It was a great opportunity for the team to showcase their talents and work ethic.

"We had some great matches and some good individual performances," said George Breen, the coach of the Penn men's gymnastics team. "I'm very happy with how we did, and I'm looking forward to the next meet."
W. Cagers Surprise Hoyas, 63-57

The women’s basketball team continued its run of impressive victories by stunning George Washington University, 63-57, at the Palestra. This victory marked the third time in four games that the Quakers have defeated a team from the George Mason conference, and it solidified their position as one of the top teams in the region.

The Quakers were led by a strong performance from their senior captain, Sharon Gross, who scored 20 points and grabbed 12 rebounds. Additionally, junior forward Marsha McCready contributed 14 points and eight rebounds, and freshman guard Stacie McGhee scored 12 points.

Despite the Hoyas’ experience and talent, the Quakers were able to control the tempo of the game and force turnovers, leading to easy baskets. The Hoyas made 21 turnovers, while the Quakers made just nine. This was a key factor in the game’s outcome.

George Washington had a balanced scoring attack, with four players scoring in double figures. However, they were unable to overcome the Quakers’ defensive pressure and rebounding efforts.

The win extended the Quakers’ winning streak to five games, and they are now 8-1 in conference play. They are currently tied for first place in the Ivy League standings.

Next up for the Quakers is a home game against Harvard on January 10th. The Crimson is currently 7-2 in the Ivy League and is seeking revenge after losing to the Quakers earlier in the season.

Fencers Slice Way to Year’s First Victories

In a match that was decided by one point, the men’s fencing team defeated Lehigh University, 14-13, to claim their first victory of the season. The match was a thriller, with both teams势均力敌 throughout.

The Quakers started strong, winning the opening bout and taking an early lead. However, Lehigh fought back and took the lead back in the second session. The match was decided in the final bout, where the Quakers won 3-2 to secure the victory.

The men’s fencing team is now 1-2 on the season and will look to build on this win as they prepare for their next match against the University of Pennsylvania. The Quakers are looking to improve their team chemistry and continue to build on their success.

Women Gymnasts Split Tri-Meet With Rutgers And UMass On An ‘Off Day’

The women’s gymnastics team competed in a tri-meet against Rutgers and the University of Massachusetts on Sunday. The meet was held at an off day for the team, and the results were mixed.

The Quakers won the meet with a score of 196.5, beating Rutgers (194.2) and UMass (191.2). The team was led by a strong performance from freshman star Aria Samich. Samich scored a perfect 10 on the balance beam, and the team’s overall performance was impressive.

The Quakers will look to build on this success as they prepare for their next meet against Princeton University. They will be hoping to continue their strong performance and extend their winning streak.
