Students Stump for Candidate

By NANCY L. JUNK

While some on campus choose only to complain about the outcomes facing Philadelphia, a group of University students believe they are making an effort to improve the situation facing Philadelphia. The group, which is called the "Young Republicans," is holding its first campaign to bring about the change they want to see in the city.

"We are a group of students who are concerned about the problems facing Philadelphia," said Patrick Colaccio, a student at the University and a member of the group. "We believe that we can make a difference and we are willing to work hard to bring about the change we want to see." Colaccio is an economics major and is one of the more active members of the group. He has been involved in several of the group's activities, including the recent "tax day" protest.

The "Young Republicans" are holding a campaign to raise awareness about the problems facing the city. They are planning to hold a series of events and activities to bring attention to the issues. They are also planning to reach out to the community and encourage people to get involved in the campaign.

"We believe that the people of Philadelphia need to be aware of the issues facing the city," said Colaccio. "We want to bring attention to the problems and encourage people to get involved in finding solutions." The group is planning to hold a series of events and activities to bring attention to the issues. They are also planning to reach out to the community and encourage people to get involved in the campaign.

Who's Next?

After Somerville

When Janis Somerville announced her resignation last week, a crush of bright lights caught the otherwise mellow atmosphere among student leaders.

"It was the first sensation, after the obligatory gossip about who the popular vice president should have been, that Janis was actually stepping down," said University Life reporter Mark Ratner, whose Mac's column was the first to report the news.

"We had a little bit of a rush, I suppose," said Ratner. "But the student government was in kind of a panic about who to choose for the replacement."

The search for a new Somerville is underway. The student government is expected to meet this week to decide on a successor. Meanwhile, the faculty is fielding suggestions from student leaders.

So, what's next for the student government? "It's going to be interesting," said Ratner. "The student government is going to have to find a new leader who can carry on where Janis left off."

The search for a new Somerville is expected to be a contentious one. The student government is divided on the issue of whether to choose an insider or an outsider. Some members of the student government believe that an outsider would be the best choice. Others believe that an insider would be the best choice.

But the student government is not the only one involved in the search for a new Somerville. The faculty is also involved. The faculty is expected to play a role in the selection process.

The search for a new Somerville is expected to be a long and drawn out process. The student government is expected to meet several times before a replacement is selected. The faculty is expected to meet several times before a recommendation is made to the student government.

Get out of the classroom and into the real world.

Join the DP.

Your college education will begin in a classroom. You will sit, listen, and take notes. At first time, you will regurgitate the scads of information you've memorized. It's that simple.

To really learn, though, you've got to take what you've absorbed out of the classroom, put it to work, and make things happen.

That's what The Daily Pennsylvanian is all about. We're the University's daily newspaper, one of the finest in the nation. And for 97 years this student-run organization has been a firm believer in the idea that the only way you really learn is through hands-on experience.

From the written word to the printed page, we've got endless ways for you to get involved. And have a good time at it, too.

WRITING: There is no journalism school at the University of Pennsylvania. No journalism department. And very few journalism courses. We can provide you with the journalism training you just can't find in a classroom.

Altogether, we give you six different departments to write for. Our beat reporters and general assignment writers on the news, features and city staffs cover the campus, the city and the nation.

Our sportswriters are there on the sidelines, following the action - wherever it is. Editorial columnists add their commentary on local and national issues. And with the DP's Thursday magazine, 34th Street, our writers provide complete information on Philadelphia arts and entertainment alongside the most thorough coverage of any Ivy League newspaper.

Unlike other college papers, we don't believe in special training programs for new writers. As a writer - for news, city, feature, sports, editorial or 34th Street, we'll show you all you need to know, right on the job.

SELLING: Our advertising department can teach you things about sales and marketing you'll never learn in a textbook. Our staff of sales representatives is constantly in touch with regular advertisers and always on the lookout for new prospects. And their efforts are well-rewarded with commissions. If you have sales experience, come join us. And if you don't we'll be more than happy to show you what it takes to become a successful member of the sales team.

MANAGING: Our financial and credit offices can provide you with the opportunity to learn accounting and financial management. These two offices manage the DP's growing $450,000 budget. Introduce yourself to our microcomputer and get hands-on computing experience. As an independent organization, the newspaper's student staff makes all its decisions without outside control.

DESIGNING: Our production department can provide an outlet for your creative skills and imagination. Staff members are responsible for the layout and design of all the ads in each issue of the paper. And if you don't know the difference between a pica and a point, don't fret. We'll teach you all you need to know. On the job. We're also looking for qualified artists who can provide material for our advertisements and for our editorial pages.

Try one, try all. None requires prior experience. You can work as much or as little as you want - from a few hours when you have the time up to 40 hours a week or more. And our computerized newsroom and business office make the training you'll receive here a valuable commodity.

Your college education will begin in a classroom. Don't let it end there. Get out and into the real world. Join The Daily Pennsylvanian.

"The Texas Instruments new TI-40 and TI-55-II calculators have angled displays for easy-to-see-answers."

The slanted display makes these calculators easier to use at arm's length and that's just the beginning. The economical TI-40, with built-in scientific and statistical operations, comes with the Calculator Decision-Making Sourcebook. The TI-55-II features 56-step programmability, multiple memories, scientific and statistical operation, and acceptability and includes a total of 112 functions. It's a very powerful calculator, at an excellent price. TI40 and TI-55-II calculators. Two new slants on math from Texas Instruments. Look for them wherever calculators are sold.

Asbestos Debate Lingers

The spread-on material, containing from 5 to 15 percent asbestos, was used in the ceiling along with other insulation and fills in a room old, however, physical plant will oversee the situation. "Asbestos is something to be concerned about," he said. "But at the same time, by identifying areas of heavy concentrations in particular buildings, our engineers can work with the builders and with an expert group to remove the remaining asbestos." Cooper called Physical Plant's procedure "backward kind of logic," he said. "You're facing the ceiling to be removed, you say, 'Here's an area where a lot of asbestos has already been exposed to the element,'" he declared. Although several firms have declared asbestos to be present in "safe concentrations," some students, faculty, and staff have begun to express concerns over the hazardous exposure to the calculators.

Both samples from the ceiling of eight University buildings were analyzed in December. 1980 by Environmental Technologies, a consulting firm. The results were announced in the January 23, 1981, issue of the Student.

Quakers Get To State Their Case

By ROBERT HAYES

The Quakers must get to the state of Pennsylvania if they are going to make a run at the NCAA tournament. The team will play Penn State tomorrow at the home of the Penn State men's team opened the defense of their national championship. The Quakers, who are 19-8, are full of confidence and expect to win.

Three factors will determine the outcome of the match. First, the Quakers have the advantage of playing at home. Second, the team has opened the defense of their national championship. Third, the team has the advantage of playing in front of their own fans.

The team is led by senior captain Jared Levine, who is expected to score at least 20 points. The team also has the benefit of having a strong defense, which is expected to hold Penn State to less than 50 points.

The team will need to play well in all aspects of the game to have a chance of winning. They must have strong performances on both offense and defense to have a chance of winning.

The team has the advantage of playing in front of their own fans, which is expected to give them the edge.

The team is expected to win by at least 10 points.
