City Unlikely To Give U. Control Over PGH Site

Vol. XCVIII. No. 2

By GWENDOLYN IKMli

The University is unlikely to resume control of the Philadelphia Federal Hospital site, a currently unoccupied piece of land southwest of the campus, a city official said last week.

City Planning Commission member Carroll Pankay said last week that the city, which owns the site, has the ultimate authority, but plans to wait until the project is funded by outside investors.

The PGH site has been mentioned frequently by University administrators as a possible site for several proposed buildings, including the new Dental School complex.

Pankay said the city would not consider negotiating with the University for control of the PGH site until other parcels of land to the north of the University campus were sold, one acre per floor, to the University.

He added that Children's Hospital of Pennsylvania administrators are now negotiating for just over four of the total 21 acres in the PGH site.

"The city does not want to talk with Penn until the other lots are developed," he said, referring to several parcels of land to the north of the University campus which were not sold for the University by the Philadelphia Redevelopment Authority.

Pankay said the city has held the lots in reserve for University expansion for the past 17 years. "Having that time, they have been other parties interested in the property, but they felt none offered because Penn expressed an interest in them," he said.

"At the moment, the University does not have the financial capacity to build," Pankay said. He added that the lots, which are currently parking lots, could be developed if the University had the financial backing of other developers.

The lot has recently been cleared and vacant a long time," Pankey said. He added that the city wants to make sure the projects are "beneficial to the University and the community." The University has discussed the PGH site with the city and the health affairs administration since 1979, he said.

The Dental School plans are still in the preliminary stages, Pankey said. "It is still too early to know whether the city will be interested, but [the plans] could well have the potential to make them interested." He added that the land they are requiring, Hospital Public Relations Director Margaret Hirsch said yesterday, "is of great value to us. We're hoping to get part of the land, but we've not been investigating what will be built there," she said, adding that "It will not be for patient care.

The University has selected three sites which it considers "a first choice" for a dental school.

He added that the University is "moving along" in its search for a site. (Continued on page 4)

$500,000 Grant Establishes New SPUP Program

By ERIC J. SAVAGE

The School of Public and Urban Policy has received a $500,000 grant to establish a master's degree program in the school.

The Samuel Fend Foundation, of Philadelphia, will provide the funds over the next five years.

"We've had support from the Fend Foundation for a number of years," APUP Director Andrea Ford said. "Over the last year, they have been giving in $100,000 a year for various projects. This year, they're offering $200,000 for the government administration program.

The school offers a graduate program for state government officials that includes 177 hours of study, but Ford said the grant will allow the school to give those who are currently working in government administration a new degree currently offered in the Fend program.

"Until the last year, a master's program existed at the Fend Institute of Public Administration at Temple University. The institute received $150,000 a year in state and federal money and the entire institute disappeared in 1980," Ford said, "so SPUP has had to establish a new program to meet the needs of city officials and the entire professional world is concerned about the future of SPUP. We will make as distinct as the emphasis on local and state problems, and the connection with the old Fend program, "Ford said, "It's a master's program in government administration.

The school will establish a fellowship program, and they've increased it to $10,000 a year. "They have helped found the SPUP program," Ford said. "This will allow the school to produce more candidates for public administration.

U. Delays Cable TV For High Rise Dorms

By MARK Pochapm

Residents of cable television in the high rise dorms have been asked because of a search for the "best possible deal at the best possible price," Residential Living Associate Director Donald K. Nagle said yesterday. "They have recommended that the school do it on its own." He added that students of the University were "the long best running students," Nagle said, "for the program at the school since 1934.

Ehrlich said he will announce his recommendations in several weeks, "I am making them now," he said. The student fee fund will be used to assure the school can operate the system.

Nagle said, "The administration program," Nagle said, "has increased from $6 to $10 a year. "They have run the program and have received $86,000 so far, and the entire rest of the account is spent on cable...." Nagle said, "That's the kind of thing that is best suited and an outside source. It is in a political action, and I'm sorry to say that the cable is not available for another six to nine months, because the technology hasn't been available..."

"If we do what is, it will be a two-part program," Nagle said. "I think when there is, but when the fee will be raised."

The University was "the longest running students," Nagle said, "for the program at the school since 1934. The system has continued to win contracts of the Undergraduate Assembly Residence Services..." Nagle said. "I think that the kind of thing that is best suited at an outside source. Nuclear Plant Stable After Pipe Leak

ONTARIO, N.Y. — A tube ruptured in a cooling system in the swimming pool for the nuclear reactor at the Three Mile Island Power Station caused a 24-hour power outage, but reactor operations were not affected and no radiation escaped.

NRC officials said they had no reason to believe the leak was hazardous or that there would be any nuclear release.

The reactor, which is a pressurized
water reactor, is the nation's worst commercial nuclear power plant.

The NRC said that the tube was part of a cooling system for the reactor's primary coolant. The water leaked into the pool and caused the power to shut down. The NRC said there were no readings of radiation level.

Senior Class Board Postpones Decision on Ivy Day Speaker

By MICHAEL ADAMS

The Student Class Board said it will wait until a meeting next week to decide whether to invite its rival in the television-mad teenager war, the Black Student League, to an official gathering at the annual Ivy Day. Boceman, Jr., the new director of the all-white Student Class Board, said that trying to reach Wallace before deciding whether to invite the board to the event will be the responsibility of the next director.

"We're just hoping that there will be some room for us to discuss the matter," he said. "I have no prior knowledge of the ballot."}

Asian Refugee School

Although the school now maintains a list of potential candidates, the original policy was to limit the number of refugees to one per country per class. This policy was in place to ensure a fair representation of different cultures and to avoid overcrowding.

The only exception to this policy was for students who had been accepted to attend secondary schools. The policy was revised to allow for multiple refugees to attend the same school, provided that the school could accommodate them.

Some children discovered the school by word of mouth. "Students really are very curious," said Mary. "They want to find out more about the school and the community.

Cat People, Dog People

By Mark Bratman

If you lived in the recent past of the University of Pennsylvania, you would be familiar with the student who would casually direct students to dog people, and the student who would voluntarily make a ridiculous request from people who would casually direct students to dog people.

The University of Pennsylvania is many things, but it is not an area typified by honest, hard-working, beer drinking clods. People are proud of their work, and of the Italian Market area, I I in, I l about I heir fellow man; a place where people know they had better prove themselves to the University, a university that is dominated by dog people, which is especially telling in light of the angering events of the past two weeks.

When you live in a city for such a long time, you begin to appreciate the cat's attitude to its world, and learn to deal with its predictability. When you are a dog person, the cat is a puzzle. The dog will defend itself and how hard it matters who other matters - is dog, not human. As long as you put it into a box and then, move it to bond.

The cat knows it is owned or not a fact, and that if it doesn't look out for itself, it might not be around. The cat will take nothing as fact unless it has evidence. Dog people are used to being ac-

On Being Polish

By Mark Bratman

To the Editor:

I am moved to write this story after reading an article by F. Kenneth Perrot in the January 15 issue of The Daily Pennsylvanian.

In the Autumn of 1948, Jan Kwiatkowski was a Polish refugee in Germany. He was an orphan, his parents and those of his brothers and sisters were murdered by the Nazis. Jan was rescued from Theresienstadt by a middle man who helped him to live on his own. He, however, always knew that they did nothing for him. But he did nothing for him. His father's farm was now part of the Soviet Union. A sympathetic official allowed him to come to the U.S. to rein his brothers on the last day such men and women were given any rights or freedom. They then considered the fact that it is a good investment.

The burden placed on American Pennsylvanian, which has undoubtedly con-

Standing on the steps of the Frank Fine Library on Monday afternoon, I am reminded that I am not the only one who feels that something is wrong with our society. I am reminded that there is more about the human condition, and that that deeper, and for the sake of our country, that true is important in helping those who feel isolated and have no one to listen to them.

Thank you for your time and for anything that you can do, and for your patience in helping to make this community a better place to live.

Malik Bachouchi, an Algerian who is working on his master's degree in mathematics from Penn and another degree in computer science from the University of South Carolina, is a student at St. Joseph's University.

Bachouchi received a Bachelor of Arts degree in mathematics from the University in 1985 and says he could not have attended college without the Philadelphia Board of Education scholarship. "I could have only gone to a couple of schools with long programs. This program enabling me to teach at the university..."

Bachouchi said he hopes those who receive scholarships will not feel they have to hide their origins. "The fund is not for people that would receive the funds. It is a shame, but we are not students don't have to hide here."

"There is no way I could have found the environment in Algeria that I found here. I thought life here was better. I come here for the education and courses."

Bachouchi continued, "I was one of the few people that received the scholarship. He was the kind of person no one could hate."

The Penn Marching Band has been selected as the recipient of the 1982 Regency Award for its outstanding performance in the 1981-1982 academic year. The band, under the direction of Professor Ralph Smith, has received numerous awards for its excellence in performance and has been invited to participate in a number of prestigious events across the country.

SA C Votes Funds to Minority Newspaper

The Student Assembly has voted to allocate funds for the establishment of a minority newspaper. The newspaper, entitled The Daily Pennsylvanian, will be published bi-weekly and will focus on issues of interest to minority students. The newspaper will be staffed by students from diverse backgrounds and will aim to provide a platform for their voices.

SAC Site Acquisition

The Student Assembly has approved the purchase of a site for the establishment of a new student center. The site, located on the corner of 36th and Chestnut Streets, is currently owned by the city and has been vacant for several years. The purchase was made possible through the sale of the university-owned property at 38th and Walnut Streets.

Calling for Teaching Excellence

Prof. Smith was selected for the award by his students, who submitted nominations based on his ability to engage and inspire them in the classroom. He is known for his dynamic teaching style and his ability to make complex legal concepts accessible to students.

Finalizing the Plan

The university has finalized plans for the new student center, which will include a dining hall, study rooms, and a multipurpose room. The center is scheduled to open in the fall of 1983.

Cagers Get Ready For Princeton

By DAVE ZALENSE

There isn't a time you can't use that, whether you're playing Defense Setting Service or being fish. Having a good system in practice is really important. At the end of our season, we didn't want to be out of shape and if we could get our kids to play, it would be really important.

It seems like for some final Frida, playing in the Spectrum, the whole game is over. When they become too early to get a real basketball game, it's never too early to get in the front. That's the key.

One reason for strong Princeton's readiness in the two-mile relay, a time which would be considered non-event in American basketball, is that the game is a big deal for them. The Quakers were especially excited about this relay, as they had run a good time in the first team meet of the season. The relay was won by setting the time with only one starter taller than 5-10, and the Quakers' bench really contributed offensively.

Both the bench and the starters were looking forward to this race. The bench, which had been lackluster in recent meets, was hoping to show that they could contribute. The starters, on the other hand, were looking to improve their time. The team's overall goal for this relay was to win, and they believed that they had the talent and teamwork to achieve this.

The Quakers' mile relay team, which includes four sprinters, is currently ranked second in the Ivy League. They are looking to continue their strong performance in future meets.

St. Joseph's Next for W. Cagers

By BOB RIBKIN

Above all, St. Joseph's is a tough weekend ahead for Princeton. Their next game against American, which was scheduled for Saturday night, has been postponed due to inclement weather. The Quakers, who were applying full-court pressure and were on the verge of winning against Penn, will now have to prepare for a rescheduled game.

Penn has been playing consistently this season, and the Quakers are looking for a way to contain their offense. The Quakers' bench is eager to contribute, and the starters are looking to build on their recent success.

The 38-year-old Drummond has been out of shape for a while, but he was able to show his speed.

"I had to break the record," Drummond said.

Drummond, who won the event in 11.08 seconds, said he was pleased with his performance.
