The student center has been a focal point for political activity on campus, but it may not remain so much longer. The administration is considering closing the center and integrating its services into other buildings. The proposal has caused concern among students, who fear it would centralize student services and dilute the political atmosphere.

The student center currently houses a variety of organizations, including student government, the Workers’ Union, and the Student Senate. It also serves as a meeting place for various student groups, such as the Environmental Club and the Muslim Student Association. The center’s architecture, with its open layout and large windows, encourages informal gatherings and discussions.

While some students see the center as a valuable resource, others are critical of its current state. Some believe it is too decentralized and fragmented, with each organization operating independently rather than working together towards a common goal. They argue that integrating services would improve efficiency and accessibility.

On the other hand, critics of the proposal argue that closing the center would be a retrograde step. It would limit access to resources and restrict the space for political engagement. The open and collaborative nature of the center is what makes it special, they say, and it should be preserved.

The administration has not yet announced a decision, and the proposal is likely to be debated extensively in the coming weeks. Students and faculty are encouraged to express their views and participate in the decision-making process.

SCLC President To Speak About Alabama March

By STEPHEN KENDALL

Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, will speak at the University next week about the civil rights protest march in Alabama, which has drawn widespread support from the nation.

"The march is not just a protest," King said in a recent interview. "It is a demonstration of the power of nonviolent resistance." He added that the march is "a statement of solidarity with the Alabama workers who are fighting for their rights." King emphasized the importance of unity and cooperation in achieving social justice.

His speech is expected to be a highlight of the University’s civil rights celebration that week. The event will feature a series of events, including a panel discussion and a film screening.

The University community is looking forward to King’s visit, as it provides an opportunity to reflect on the legacy of the civil rights movement and to discuss the ongoing struggle for justice.

"I started the bookstore to provide a platform for leftist literature," said the owner, who wishes to remain anonymous. "We believe in the power of books to challenge and inspire.

The bookstore offers a wide selection of leftist texts, including works on economics, politics, and social justice. Among the most popular titles are "Capital" by Karl Marx and "The New Jim Crow" by Michelle Alexander.

The bookstore also hosts events, such as readings and discussions, to promote the ideas of leftist authors. The owner proudly announced that a local author is scheduled to visit in the near future.

"We are committed to supporting local artists and thinkers," said the owner. "Our goal is to create a space where people can come together to share ideas and explore new perspectives.

U. Names Bilingual Expert As FAS Hispanic Advisor

By DARYL ZENGER

The University announced yesterday that it has appointed a new bilingual expert as the Hispanic Advisor for the College of Arts and Sciences. The advisor will work closely with students and faculty to support the needs of the Hispanic community.

"We are thrilled to have someone with these qualifications join our team," said the dean. "Hispanic students are an integral part of our community, and we are committed to ensuring they have the support they need to succeed.

The advisor will focus on issues such as academic success, college retention, and career development. He will also coordinate with other campus offices to provide comprehensive support.

Guerrillas Take Over El Salvador City

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — Liberation guerrillas seized control of the city of San Salvador early today in a surprise, well-organized overnight attack on the capital city of the Central American republic.

A military source reported that the guerrillas seized control of the city after breaking into the presidential palace and taking over the radio station. The source said the guerrillas have been in the process of preparing for this attack for the past six months.

A military spokesman said the attack involved more than 1,500 guerrillas and that the city was still under attack. He said the military was mobilizing troops to defend the town.

A military source said the guerrillas were now inside the city and that they were in control of the presidential palace.

WASHINGTON - The risk of violence in Poland "will grow by the hour," the moral law government official, Secretary of State Alexander Haig, told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee today.

"You folks are looking at an embarrassed guy. . . . I think he could be quoted with that word," Haig told the committee.

In his testimony, Haig defended the Reagan administration's policy of: (1) requiring that the Soviet Union not be allowed to enter the United Nations; (2) imposing sanctions against Poland; and (3) urging that the U.S. and its allies continue to support the Soviet Union.

No Comparison

By Charles Johnson

A look at Roosevelt's speeches and letters reveals that he was a man of action, not only words. His actions were guided by a sense of social justice and a commitment to improving the lives of ordinary Americans. He was a progressive in the truest sense of the word, not a socialist or a communist.

I ranklin Roosevelt offered a new philosophy, not just a collection of policies. He believed in the power of government to improve the lives of people. He was a man of his time, not a man of the past.

The truth of the matter is that the comparison between Roosevelt and Reagan is a false one. Both Roosevelt and Reagan understood the importance of civil liberties. They both understood that the role of government is to protect the rights of all Americans.

I am not a Democrat, but I believe that the greatest American president was Franklin Roosevelt. He offered a vision of America that was forward-thinking and progressive. He understood that the role of government is to work with the people to make their lives better.

In contrast to Roosevelt's policies, those of Reagan provided a framework for America that was built on the principles of the free market. It was a framework that encouraged personal responsibility and limited government intervention. It was a framework that was built on the principles of the free market.

Roosevelt's programs were designed to help the poor, not to create a class of dependent citizens. Reagan's programs were designed to help the poor, but they were also designed to help the rich. Roosevelt recognized that a people's most important investment is their children. Reagan recognized that the most important investment is the economy.

By the end of his presidency, Roosevelt had liberalized the prices of many essential goods. Reagan inherited a presidency that was built on the principles of the free market. He inherited a presidency that was built on the principles of limited government.

In conclusion, the comparison between Roosevelt and Reagan is a false one. Roosevelt was a progressive who understood the importance of civil liberties. Reagan was a conservative who understood the importance of limited government. The truth is that both were great American presidents, and both were necessary as it is to a politician in a democracy.

Scowtnt said that a bookstore is one of the many resources for someone who can't buy good books, multiple. "We provide information for the masses," he said. "This is not a bookstore that is owned by the same people who own it. It is the kind of bookstore that I like."

Everyone who works in the store is enthusiastic about his work even though he is not paid. "I have a building from the University. I have a building to sell," he said.

Using this method, Scranton was able to avoid buying books. The other half he spent renting and renovating the bookstore surprisingly easy. "We set up stands at Penn making the point that the campus really needed a used bookstore," he said. "We consider to be the best political viewpoint," Scranton said.

He said he found starting the bookstore surprisingly easy. "We sign up stands at Penn making the point that the campus really needed a used bookstore. We collect books and attempt to offer them in exchange for an advance," he said.

Scranton expressed enthusiasm for the old books in the store, drawing the diversity and quantity of topics, from science fiction to law, to a large selection of medical books.

He added that the recent political shift in the country — although it seems to be away from socialism — has increased interest in his store. "We get new customers," he said. "People ask what kind of books we have on the political situation, and we give 'em to them."

Garnet Worm Their Way By Late-Arriving Birdies

It's the death of three each for the Pennsylvania women's badminton team. The Quakers managed to win their third straight victory by dropping only eight of 13 matches to the Delawareans—a slender margin they could have blown.

"We were there early enough to talk about the three matches," said Janice Gross. "We have always been there in the past. We didn't think it would be too easy. But we did struggle a little bit."

The ladies put their record at a disquieting 2-14, though they were 5-11 in their previous 16 matches, while the other defeat has that of the book of George Washington.

The birdies encountered some problems before even getting off the bus. They got lost and arrived 30 minutes late before the match started at 4 p.m. two days before publication. The only word to describe their warm-up was "weak." It's very hard to play with no warm-up," said coach Audrey Grossman, "but you want to be ready when you play any sport. It really hurts me in the first game of your season."

Grossman quickly found herself on the offensive. "I didn't do the best out of three matches. In the second game the same ole girl and I went out to a 7-3 lead. But her opponent came screaming back."

Grossman then dropped the next two games, but in the final game, Grossman managed to take the match out of sight. "It was one of my worst matches. I had no trouble getting warmed up. I guess that's the match for Penn by defeating her opponent 20-17."

The second doubles match of Sue Sansom and Karen Hawthorne also followed a similar pattern. The birdies dropped the first 2-1 lead in the match with a strong 15-13, 15-14 victory. From here, however, the role fell in the Quakers. They lost the two remaining matches at first doubles and second singles, but the match was over.

The Quakers won three matches, but lost the first doubles. The team of Karen Franklin and Lisa Compagnone played well in taking the first game 15-10. They then dropped the next two games 15-7 and 15-10 to drop the match. "They gave our good strategy to Spanish and they played pretty well and we certainly did the best we could. We just came up a little short," said Grossman.

"The man didn't really realize this was going to be tough a match," Grossman said. "They have a new coach this year and I don't know how well we were." We weren't really ready for them."

The Penn State women's basketball team was preparing for the basketball season yesterday when the Big Ten South division's 57-game regular season came to a Closely fought Penn State-Columbia men's basketball tilt Saturday ended in favor of the visiting Big Red, 62-57.

Strong shooting from the field by the Red and the timely contributions of the bench led to the win.

Kathy Bruce scored a game-high 20 points in leading Columbia, but the Red's bench contributed 32 points, including 10 points by Stan Fairchild, and 10 points by Mike Stenberg, who added three rebounds.

Columbia's only other score was by Rich DeLong, who made a free throw after being fouled by the Red's Bill Weisenberg.

The Red was led by Bruce, who scored 16 points, and by center Steve Santucci, who netted 12 points and 10 rebounds.

After the game, Santucci said, "I'm just happy with the way we played the last two games. We won both.

"We played well as a team, and the bench played well, too. I was happy with the way the bench contributed to our victory.

"I'm really pleased with the way we played today. We played well in the first half and then settled down in the second half, " Santucci said.
