Fagin Elevates Nursing School To Top of Class

By RICK HARRAGH

Five years ago, Fagin was named dean of the School of Nursing at the University of Pennsylvania. Today, those students are reaping the benefits of his appointment.

"When I came on board, there was a sense of innovation and progress," Fagin said. "The school had a strong tradition, but there was a need to move forward and be more competitive in the marketplace." Fagin, who has a degree in nursing from the University of California, San Francisco, has been instrumental in expanding the school's programs and faculty. "The goal is to provide a world-class education that prepares our graduates for success in today's healthcare environment," he said.

Board Keeps Wallace As Ivy Day Speaker

By MICHAEL NAUSS

Senior University Board President David Mo- rrisson said he has no plans to revamp the role of the Ivy Day speaker. "Ivy Day is an important tradition that brings the community together," Morrison said. "Wallace has been a respected figure in the academic world and his presence is valuable to the students and faculty." Wallace has been the speaker for the past five years and has received mixed reviews from the students.

UA Condemns Projected Tuition Increase

By LAURE LEE

The Undergraduate Assembly has passed a resolution condemning the projected 22% tuition increase for the 1982-83 school year. "This is unacceptable," said one of the resolution's sponsors, "because students are being burdened with additional costs without any compensation or discussion of the reasons behind the increase. We have met with the administration to express our concerns, but they have given us no satisfactory explanation." The assembly voted unanimously to condemn the tuition increase, stating that the increase is not justified and that the university should be transparent about its budgetary decisions.

Huckeey Faces Clouded Future Controversy Down the Road

By B J. SMITH

Seven years ago, Alfred University sophomore and New York Times reporter Jeffrey Millerson began investigating the university's policies and practices. "I was interested in the way that university administration upheld itself in the face of public scrutiny," Millerson said. "I wanted to expose the corruption and the lack of accountability in the university's decision-making process." Millerson's findings led to a series of articles that were published in The Daily Pennsylvania, a student-run newspaper. "The articles were well-received, and it was clear that there was public interest in the university's practices," Millerson said. "I was proud of the work that I did, and I hope that it made a difference in the university's decision-making process." However, Millerson's work has been met with resistance from the university's administration. "We have been threatened and bullied, and we have been denied access to important documents," Millerson said. "But we will continue to expose the university's corruption and the lack of accountability in its decision-making process. We will not be silenced."
Reagan Slashes EPA Budget

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's fiscal 1984 budget will slash spending for the Environmental Protection Agency to a level where it will step up the "safety net" that protects Americans from polluted air and contaminated water, a source close to the administration said yesterday.

The Administration will propose spending $9.63 billion for the EPA in 1984 and a personal assent at the National Scum Agency. The 1983 figure was $10.1 billion.

This "is going to Congress and saying, 'Look, we've got to start getting at the environmental protection agency in the same way that we've got to cut those loose, you know how much it costs to do that?"' said the president of the 4.5-trillion budget.

The EPA's budget for 1984 will be $8.4 billion. The reduction in the budget would mean the EPA would not be able to do as much as it did in 1983.

At a separate news conference, House Democrats pledged to fight the budget cuts and said they would not let the Reagan administration's environmental policies in place as in the 1982 election.

Pope, Polish Church Confer on Crisis

VATICAN CITY — Pope John Paul II said "moral disorientation" dates today with leaders of Poland's Roman Catholic church in an effort to avert on church policy toward the moral law, Nixon said.

The Polish pope met Monday with Polish church officials, expressing concern over the situation of Poland's religious leaders. The Audiences continued the pontiff's private correspondence with the leader of Poland's church.

There is so much to learn on the Polish delegation who participated

A great deal will remain in the form of a work and will be held before the pope's departure for Africa Feb. 16, the Polish official said.

It was the pope's first meeting with Polish church officials since he accepted an invitation to visit Poland, said a statement by the Polish church.

Church sources said the meetings will give the pope an opportunity to learn about the situation of religious leaders in Poland and work out a plan for a close relationship in light of the continuing state of emergency.

The Polish official said in the 1980's, but he also acknowledged that increasing impatience with the situation and growing unrest and the presence of independent activist activities.

Also under review was the pope's plan to visit Poland in August for the celebration of the 400th anniversary of the Black Madonna of Czestochowa, Poland's holiest shrine.

Various Polish sources had said the pope would make the trip on a visit to Poland.

The church is a major force in Poland, where about 90 percent of the 30 million people are Roman Catholics. It was the first sign of the movement, it has become a major factor in opposition to the regime.

One of the main themes of Hackney's approach has been widespread ownership instead of means to his efforts to depoliticize the campus. He used this rationale for limiting the number of members of the Academic Planning and Budget Committee, and restrains this office as an expedient for gaining consensus among the Student Assembly. (Despite this, the Student Assembly has not concurred in this office's leadership.)

Frat brothers help resolve campus fracas

"Hackney's Future"

By STEPHANIE MINKOFF

Several Sigma Nu brothers came to the rescue of two anonymous joggers late last night, chasing several would-be assailants away from the scene.

"Without the intervention of Sigma Nu brothers, the joggers might have been injured," said one brother who wished to remain anonymous.

"The brothers acted quickly and decisively," said another brother.

"I am proud to be a member of Sigma Nu," said the anonymous brother.

The joggers, who had been jogging on Waltham Street when they were attacked, said they were grateful for the help of the brothers.

"I don't think I would have survived without their help," said one jogger.

"They were quick to respond and very effective," said the other jogger.

The joggers were unharmed and returned to their dormitories after the incident.

"I am glad to hear that the joggers are okay," said a Sigma Nu brother.

"We are here to protect all members of the campus community," he said.

The incident is under investigation by campus security.

Hackney's Future

By ANDREW SHIMSKY

The support of those he leads: faculty, students, and the broader University community is crucial to Hackney's success and the University's future.

One of Hackney's biggest problems, in pursuing adequate student leaders from outside the politically conservative factions of the University, is Hackney's ability to attract students to be leaders.

However, the freshmen class has had an obvious increase in the number of minority students, as evidenced in the Undergraduate Assembly, where more minority students are evident in the Hackney spectrum.

Another possible bonus is Hackney's future with students, which is often referred to as a state of Hackney's community. In Hackney's case, the University's community is Hackney's community.

When Hackney is brought before the University's community, the University's community will be Hackney's community.

This is evident in the Undergraduate Assembly, where Hackney's minority spectrum is not evident in the Hackney spectrum.

W. Swimmers Challenge Cross-town Rival Temple

B. MIKE HEVERLING

The women’s swim team travels to North Philly tomorrow morning to face the always-chilling Temple Owls—a team which successfully defeated the Quaker intra-mural last year.

After losing three close meets in a row, and having a difficult week back at school to boot, this hardly Swarthmore will go as far as we could have expected.

I am not saying we are beaten, but we are in need of rest and time to recover.

The meet has a special meaning to coach Kathy Lowry. "Our first coaching job was at Temple, and I was the first (and only) woman’s swimming coach. They were used to men, and I am sure they have not adapted yet."

I would like to win, but only if we are able to do so without putting ourselves in danger.

"A win would not mean much to me, but a loss would mean everything."

Despite the team's confidence, some of the Quakers are still feeling the pressure to perform and achieve their goals. "We want to show the team that we can compete with the best in the country," said Karen Kroop, a key member of the women’s swim team.

The team is looking forward to the challenge this represents and the opportunity to improve its performance in the future.

On the weekend, with a somewhat disappointing 5-2 record and having the prospect of competing with the best teams in the country, the women's squash team would seem to have little reason for optimism.

However, the team's record is one of the Penn racquetwomen prepare for the Howe Cup tournament, the importance of the early matches will not be overlooked.

"The early matches are of great importance, and we will be doing our best to win them," said Alicia McConnell, the top seed for the Howe Cup. "Our goal is to win as many matches as possible to qualify for the Easterns." McConnell and Karen Kroop have both been close to their personal bests.

"They don't have too many girls, but they have a team which narrowly defeated the team they have," said Captain Beth King.

"I am looking forward to the challenge of playing against the top teams in the country." McConnell

"They have a strong women's team, but we are confident in our ability to compete." King

"The match will be a close one, but I think we have an edge." McConnell

Racquetmen Swing North For Chance To Qualify

By STEVE CALLER

Sitting on a tough third place finish in last week's Big Five meet, the Penn men's squash team now looks to the season's final meet to set the tone for the upcoming season. The Quakers take on the University of Pennsylvania and Princeton tomorrow at 1 p.m. in the Palestra.

"We should finally quality two men for the regionals and have a chance to qualify for the national in the distance events," senior coach Peter Pinto said. Pinto feels that with the addition of three freshmen this season, "it gives us a chance to run and get a better record than last year." He added, "We're starting to put things together. We're looking to get some good results in the next few weeks." Pinto is optimistic about the team's chances, stating, "We have a strong feeling that the team will qualify for the nationals." The Quakers' performance in the recent meet against Princeton was a sign of the team's improvement. Despite poor weather conditions, the Quakers were able to win the match and gain confidence for the upcoming matches. Pinto is optimistic that the Quakers will continue to improve.

Temple, on the other hand, will be a tough challenge. Both games this weekend will be tight and our goal is to finish the weekend with a 2-0 record. Fortunately, both games will have..."

MOOLO BLOOM - That had the little guy in short, anyone who got him in his way, had him out of his way, so good a calibration by Captain Dennis Seibed was not pleased. "I don't think we've got the kind of defense we need to win this week. We've got to work on our defense to improve our chances of winning."

CORNER STORE - It seems like we're not doing enough defensively. We've got to work on our defense to improve our chances of winning."

BIL HOMES - When we get more decisive on defense, we'll have a better chance to win. We've got to work on our defense to improve our chances of winning."

Richard C. Schuval, president, recognized the excellence of the team, its work ethic, and its determination to excel. "I congratulate the team on its efforts," he said. "It's a great day for our program."

Quakers ready to "Bear Down"

Quakers ready to "Bear Down" on the next few weekends. The team has had a tough season, but the players are looking forward to the final stretch. "We're excited about the possibility of making the NCAA tournament," said guard Brian Brown. "We're really looking forward to the last few games."
