Students To Rally Against Cuts, Lack of Consultation

By LAUREN RICH

The regularly scheduled rally will be held this semester to express dissatisfaction over the University's "handfuling of important purposes affecting the students."

The purpose is scheduled for 3:30 p.m. Mon., about a month after yesterday's announcement of a protest by students and faculty members who are worried about the fate of the Indian cultural center. The rally will take place near College House, the center of the campus, and is expected to attract hundreds of people.

The rally organizers are calling for the preservation of the cultural center, which they say is "important for the Indian community." They are also demanding more consultation with students in decision-making processes regarding university policies.

"We are planning a massive rally to protest what we see as a lack of consultation and transparency in decision-making," said a member of the organizing committee.

"We are demanding that the university listen to the concerns of students and faculty members before making important decisions that affect our community," added another organizer.

"We are planning a series of events, including marches and sit-ins, to draw attention to our cause and to demand our rights," said a third organizer.

"We are determined to make our voices heard and to make the university understand the importance of the Indian cultural center to our community," said a fourth organizer.

"We are calling on all members of the university community to join us in our protest," said a fifth organizer.

Pope Asks Support for Human Rights

Lagos, Nigeria — Pope John Paul II declared Thursday that human rights must be respected in all Polish foreign and domestic policy, and that the nation's military buildup is not justifiable.

He told Polish Catholics that "resistance is legitimate" in the face of oppression and "trampling on the rights of citizens." His comments were notable because he is the first pope to√

Penn Players Do It As They Like It

By ELAINE KINDN

Drama Club may begin rehearsals for Penn Players' production of "As You Like It" with a sitting - no British accents.

Through the delays, the cast may not be familiar with the script until after the opening, said Professor John Reines, who will direct Shakespeare's work on the stage in American English.

"Using a British accent comes off badly," said Rosenberg, who plays Orlando. "It is not our intention to distort it."

The doses of a British accent will be apparent when the play opens tomorrow night at the Mainstage Theatre, but it represents merely one aspect of what the cast has attempted to do. "As You Like It" will be a major role for Rosenberg and Shakespearean scholar. The play begins in two different Notebooks - one of Orlando and Rosalind - and each in the forest. Orlando has escaped - Orlando, relating from his brother who plans to kill Rosalind, and Rosalind, hiding behind the fences. She has been told to make it up on her own.

"I think we're as much as we can get the idea of Rosalind. It's not a whole idea, she added. "It's an ac-act of "as you like it". I think it's all a whole to make it up our own," Rosenberg said. "It's not to be confused with "As You Like It"."

For Dan Pochos, a veteran of Shakespearean tours and films, Rosalind has been her most challenging role. "It's been a difficult role, a little more difficult for me," she said. "You may get around several lines and that's it. You have to make it up your own.

Rosalind, the character, has become less of a"" as you like it" character, she said. "Once you get passed the rehearsal period I think the performers and the audience.

"As You Like It" will open tomorrow at the Harold Prince Theatre at 8 p.m. and will continue through the weekend and next weekend. Tickets are $3.50.

Consultation

Consultation, a process in which the opinions and judgments of the members of a group are gathered and considered before a decision is made, is necessary. This process allows for a broader range of perspectives to be considered and can lead to more informed and effective decisions. However, consultation can also be time-consuming and may require significant resources. It is important to strike a balance between the need for consultation and the efficiency of decision-making.

Marching for Freedom

Marching for freedom is a powerful act of non-violent protest. It is a way for people to express their solidarity with others who are facing oppression and to demand justice and equality. Marching can bring attention to issues that might otherwise be overlooked and can create a sense of community and purpose among those who participate.

Getting Out of Bed

Getting out of bed can be a challenge, especially when you feel like staying in. However, it is important to remember the benefits of getting up early, such as increased productivity, improved mood, and better overall health. By waking up and starting your day, you can set the tone for a productive and fulfilling day ahead.

Letter to the Editor

Letters to the editor are an important way for individuals to express their opinions and contribute to the discourse on important issues. They allow for a diverse range of perspectives to be heard and can help to inform and influence public opinion.

Planned Parenthood is not an organization that goes after women, he adds, rather, "a group of non judgmental people responsible for accurate information."

Bauman said Planned Parenthood has several programs to provide the public with up-to-date information on various aspects of sexuality. It also provides counseling to individuals who want to avoid unwanted pregnancies, and works with clinics and schools to provide accurate information on those subjects in their own communities.

Shipley also said Planned Parenthood's policy is to differ with the legislature that funds are being appropriated to Planned Parenthood's county agency in Pennsylvania.

"I think people realize, this means me involved with defending pro-choice," she said, citing a recent study in The New England Journal of Medicine that found that 70 percent of women believe that Planned Parenthood is a necessary service.

Martin said that Planned Parenthood's role is "to be a source of information for women who are trying to make decisions about their bodies."

"The Green Administration is not all that happy," Williamson said. "It's a project we have to do, and we might as well do it now rather than worry about it later. We don't want to be accused of stalling." The Green administration, which has yet to pass an important bill, would cost an additional $5 million, but Williamson said the administration holds that the project is too small to stall on.

The main hope for making the system available is if further expansion should connect it in the rest of the commuter rail system and in East North Philadelphia and Jenkintown, he said.

"Williamson said that the system could be made to work," but that it would have to be expanded to serve the entire city. "The Green administration has not yet been funded, would cost $6 million, but it thinks if this administration were in the city of Philadelphia. And it says the Green administration is much more enthusiastic about the commuter rail system and to provide a comfortable and swift alternative in current forms of transportation.

The system was originally expected to cost $5 million in 1973, but due to legal problems with Amtrak, the cost has now doubled to $140 million. The system was originally expected to cost $80 million in 1975, but due to legal problems with Amtrak, the cost has now doubled to $140 million.

UNIVERSITY SCHOLARS

Applications being accepted through March 22

If you feel ready for advanced courses and research in your field, if you would like to integrate undergraduate and graduate coursework at Pennsylvania and follow an individualized course of study, you may be interested in the University Scholars Program. The program is designed for mature students who simply interested in pursuing an advanced course of study, particularly in the humanities or social sciences. Students may be nominated by a member of the standing faculty, or they may ask a faculty member to sponsor them. The Council of University Scholars, chaired by Dr. Elise Stelter, will interview the most promising candidates. The student will be accepted into the Program only with the consent of the appropriate graduate or professional school.

The following should be submitted to 112 Logan Hall:

1. A statement indicating how the nominee will arrange a course of study, together with a description of long-term goals and personal aspirations.
2. Letters of recommendation from faculty members.
3. Pertinent scholarship or research papers.
4. Transcripts from the undergraduate school

Questions about the program should be addressed to Deborah Burnham, x 660.

Women Cagers Dominate Tigers
Gross, Hawthorne Drive Forces Behind Easy 86-61 Victory

The Quakers' 6th straight win over the Big Green this season, the Quakers would indeed find that the Big Green should finish with a team seed in the Quaker Tournament. Coming out of the loss to Princeton, the Quakers were 3-2 in Ivy League competition. Led by 31 points, they were still not convinced that they could win by a clear margin. The Quakers were still not convinced that they could win by a clear margin. They were still not convinced that they could win by a clear margin. The Quakers' first win in the Ivy League was a convincing 86-61 victory over the Princeton Tigers. The Quakers secured their second consecutive victory over the Princeton Tigers with a 86-61 win. The Quakers dominated the Tigers from start to finish, outscoring them 46-22 in the first half. The Quakers continued their dominance in the second half, outscoring the Tigers 40-39. The victory moved the Quakers to 6-2 in Ivy League play, maintaining their hold on second place in the Ivy League standings. The Quakers were led by senior co-captain Beth Ringe, who scored a game-high 18 points and added 10 rebounds. Senior center Lisa Coopersmith also had a solid performance, scoring 14 points and grabbing 11 rebounds.
