Injured Student Calls Police over Negligence

College Senior Says Frat Guy Caused 27-Foot Fall

BARR ATTORNEY

College senior Sarah Barr's 27-foot fall was the result of a prank among fraternity members, which caused her to suffer a broken back and fractured ankle, said the half that she put in room selection, said Dr. Joseph O'Connor said his department is aware of the problem but has had trouble getting funding for repairs. "There was only half a grate," she said. "That's the only way to be covered by a grate," he said.

Barr refused to comment on the possibility of her taking legal action against the University.

As tomorrow's Assembly elections loom, the University's over 7,000 housing units are expected to generate a profit of $1.5 million this month and charged with a further $1 million in future years. If the housing units are allowed to remain intact, a flood of students will once again be able to apply for the $300 per semester fee.

Gerry said the other way to reduce costs is to cut the number of rooms available for students. He said that some students who have the $250 per semester fee, are "not always encourag- ing the human race. "It is this kind of thinking that has caused so much discrimination and hatred among people." He added that the lack of information among people about the case has been "hamstrung," he said. "We are very concerned that the trial will be fair to everyone," he said.

Student Convention Opens

In between answering a barrage of questions on the next day's events, one of the co-chairmen, Andrew Cohen, who was student body president last year, made it clear that he had spoken from both the affirmative and negative points of view on the same debate.

He stated that the organizers accomplished their objective of infusing students with the sort of knowledge that he felt was necessary to assist them in developing their own views.

Victim Cites Negligence

Even after his death, the driver's account was not enough to trouble the company's insurance underwriters, who said, "It is our usual practice to examine every death and accident, and in this case we found no fault to blame on the company's part."

SEPTA Improves Mass Transit for Safety's Sake

City Limits

More police, increased anti-graffiti efforts, and improved lighting has helped SEPTA combat the crime which exists between 35 and 50 percent throughout the entire system.

People often ask why SEPTA doesn't have a police department. "The perception problem will diminish if stations are clean and crime statistics are down," said Smith.

"The task force is working to improve mass transit generally," said Smith. "More people will use the subway if they see the effort is being made to improve it."

"The perception of crime exists because of some comments made on the subway bulletin board," said Smith. "At least 3 trains have been equipped with bright red emergency buttons which all or the passengers were afraid to report. Surveys revealed that 80 percent of all the passengers were afraid to report it."

Security measures, such as police officers who ride the trains, have been reduced by 2.5 percent. "The perception problem will diminish if stations are clean and crime statistics are down," said Smith. Smith said that crime prevention is largely up to the individual. "The public has to be aware of their surroundings," said Smith. "The public has to be aware of their surroundings," said Smith.

A Legacy of Activism

While making her pitch to be Chairman of the Undergraduate Assembly last April, Liz Cooper said to her fellow representatives that "there is no very important for students to be advocated." Thus lies the source of the frequent and impressive successes as well as the sporadic,失败的 past of this year's Undergraduate Assembly and its Chairman.

The conundrum lies with the fact that the University as a whole has not had a trouble-free past. Although the Upperclassmen Senate has been functioning properly, there is a lack of consistency in the handling of difficult situations, and the overall direction of the student body. Throughout her term as Chairman, Liz Cooper has met many challenges, and has managed to come out successful in some instances, but has been severely criticized in others.

The idea of the legacy of the Cooper IA is also controversial among members of the group. Some believe that her efforts have significantly improved the quality of student life, while others think that her mistakes outweigh her successes.

Indeed, the idea of improving student life is seen as an important goal in the administration. The Board of Trustees and the University have been working hard to create a more active and involved student body.

The idea of improving student life is seen as an important goal in the administration. The Board of Trustees and the University have been working hard to create a more active and involved student body.

On the other side, the view that a certain number of Penn alumni and friends support the idea of a "civic duty" component in student life is also seen as a valuable contribution.

In conclusion, the idea of improving student life is seen as an important goal in the administration. The Board of Trustees and the University have been working hard to create a more active and involved student body.
Judge Clears Path for 3400 Block Renovation

By Carolee L. Shreffler

Another roadblock was removed today for the Sansom Street Redevelopment Project as a judge today cleared the way for the University to begin the $3.4 million renovation of the block of Sansom Street between 37th and 38th streets.

The ruling was a victory for the Sansom Committee, representing the University in the case filed by Karp and not right.

Asian Student Groups Hold Cultural Show

By Jon Schlein

"A Glance of the Orient," a cultural show featuring traditional and contemporary music, dance, and martial arts of the Orient, will be held at 7 p.m. tomorrow in the University Museum.

The show, to be performed by the Harrison Auditorium, is the largest joint project ever undertaken by all the University's Asian student organizations, the Chinese Student Association, the Korean Cultural Society, and the Japanese Cultural Association. The program will include a variety of traditional ethnic acts in the show, which the students have been planning for several months.

For the members of the Asian groups, the show will also provide an opportunity to demonstrate the University's involvement in the activities of the University's international students. As well as providing an example of what the community can expect should the center eventually be built.

"We believe that this is the type of project that the center should be involved in," said John Kim, United Minorities Committee representative for the Korean Cultural Society. "The performance will be a showcase for the cultural groups on campus."

"We hope that this will be an event that the community will frequently have open to University students," said Susie Kim, vice president of the Korean Cultural Society. "We hope that the show will provide the students with an opportunity to understand the cultural values." Kim continued.

"Having our events at the international center will allow more people to understand what's going on."

Until recently, University officials have been confined to the property of the redevelopers of the block. University officials have been unable to construct an international center for campus minorities because of the legal dispute with the redevelopment authority, and the University has been unable to construct an international center for campus minorities.

The ruling yesterday continues a line of events that could have a great impact on speeding the renovation of the center. The ruling yesterday was a victory for the University, the redevelopment authority, and the University's international students.

Dramatic to Absurd

Theater Lab I Slices Life With One-Acts

The musical comedy opens with a chorus of 20 individuals, expertly channelling the song of the wild ducks in the fable. Wendy Rogers' dynamic portrayal of a woman trapped in a New England town speaks a truth to the audience about the struggles of life in Israel Horovitz's 'The Frogs'. The play uses a modern-day setting to comment on the absurdity of life.

Review

R. ROBERT

In a program of four one-act plays, the students of Theater Lab I take their viewers from some drama to light absurdity - a difficult task, but the group carries it off skillfully. While the first play appears to be a serious slice of life as some Garfield's, the characters move around, bypassing and ducks in An Evening Of One Acts. The director's skill lies in the careful selection of the plays. Each play is a snapshot of two of the world's most well-known people - Horace (Richard Rolewicz) and Margaret (Sharon Deli) put on an amusing play while they get ready for their date. The play is a mixture of serious and comic moments, and the audience is left with a sense of completion.

SUMMER SCHOOL IN THE COLORADO ROCKIES
A unique adventure at the University of Colorado - Boulder
Where else can you study Shakespeare under the stars, raft down the Colorado River, study under the stars, study Shakespeare under the stars, be a part of the Colorado Shakespeare Festival, and meet famous professors? Summer School in the Colorado Rockies offers all of these possibilities.

Anne Goldstein and the rest of the Quarter betwen dropped their first conspicuous victory in the region yesterday afternoon against Lehigh.

For the Quakers' men's track team, continued success meant finding ways to stay on top of the Ivy League.

The Quakers had a good performance at Princeton, but are still looking for their first win in the Liberty League.

"We are hoping to get our first win," said Deurha.

"I'm pretty sure we'll get our first win," added teammate Mark Smith.

Despite the lack of success, the team is looking to improve in the future.

"Our goal is to improve each meet," said Deurha.

"We're working hard to get better," added Smith.

The Quakers will look to improve at their next meet.

Netwomen Face Big Red Red

By Marc Ashley
The netwomen's fall season began with a strong performance against Cornell.

"We played well against Cornell," said Ashley.

"Our team is looking good," added teammate Lisa Smith.

The netwomen are one of the top programs in the nation.

The women's crew, under new head coach Larry Witty, begins its spring season tomorrow against Yale in Derby, Connecticut.

Witts' Gritty

Although it probably won't be the last row of the year for the newly minted NCAA champion; this week the Quakers' men's rowing team will have the opportunity to give Yale a serious challenge. A month ago, the Yale men scored their first collegiate win against Penn. Now, the Quakers hold the advantage.

"Yale is coming off a loss against Princeton last weekend, so they are somewhat deflated," said Mark Coker, the landlord for the 1982 varsity campaign, and this weekend's head coach. "They are in good shape, but they have been working overtime to get back on track." Coker said. "The meet will be close, but the Quakers have the offensive talent to pull it off."

Against Yale, the Quakers will place five rowers from the Hamblen Quarter, a title that will have to be defended this season. In the 1981 season, Hamblen Quarter swept the Irving Cup, the annual intercollegiate competition. This year, however, the Quakers will face stiff competition from Yale, which has won the Irving Cup three times in a row.

The matches will be held in Derby, Connecticut, on April 15, 1982, at 1:30 p.m. The competition will be held in the Connecti cut River, which is known for its strong currents and challenging conditions. The Quakers have traditionally performed well in such conditions, and they will look to continue their winning streak.

The Quakers will be hoping to claim victory over Yale for the first time since 1980, when they defeated the Bulldogs 5-4. Since then, Yale has won the Irving Cup each year, leaving the Quakers empty-handed.

This year, the Quakers have a talented roster, including returning standout Drew Coker, who finished third in the IRA National Championships last season. Coker will be joined by a strong group of returnees and a promising class of freshmen, giving the Quakers a solid chance of reclaiming the Irving Cup.

The meet will be held in sunny Connecticut, with temperatures expected to be in the mid-70s. The Connecti cut River will provide a challenging course, with waves and currents that will test the rowers' skills and endurance.

The Quakers and Yale will be vying for the top spot in the IRA National Championships, which will be held later in the season. The winner of this weekend's meet will likely have a significant advantage in the IRA Championships, and both teams will be looking to make a strong statement.

The Quakers and Yale have a rich history, with the former holding the upper hand for much of the rivalry's history. However, the Bulldogs have won four of the last five matches, and they will be looking to extend their winning streak.

The 1982 season promises to be exciting, with both teams looking to make a name for themselves in the IRA National Championships. The Quakers and Yale will be vying for the top spot, and the outcome of this weekend's match will go a long way in determining who will emerge as the winner.
