U. Admits 4594 To Next Year's Freshman Class

Michael M. Zoller, the University's admissions dean, announced Wednesday that the University had admitted 4594 students to the Class of 1986. Last year, 4498 students were admitted to the Class of 1985.

Zoller said the admission committee had received 19,203 applications for this year's freshman class. This is a slight increase in the number of applications this year, he said.

The admissions committee received 4772 minority students' applications this year, according to Zoller. Last year, 4748 minority students applied.

The average SAT score of this year's admitted students was 1260, Zoller said. The average score of this year's admitted students was 1264 last year.

Zoller said that the average of the admitted students was 1264 last year.

SAC Panel Proposes $1500 Grant to WXPN

SAC panel chairman and sophomore Warren McGarrity yesterday proposed a $1500 grant to WXPN, the campus radio station. SAC, which funds WXPN, has only received $12,100 in funding this year, McGarrity said.

He said the station, which serves as a source of news and entertainment for University students, has been unable to receive support from local businesses.

Search Begins for Wharton Dean

Dean Donald Carroll announced last week that the University would begin a search for a new dean for the Wharton School.

Carroll, who has served as dean since 1976, said he would be leaving the position in June.

The search committee will include members of the University community, as well as students and faculty.

In order to be admitted to the University, students must have a certain number of credits. These credits are accumulated by taking courses, which are typically offered in the fall and spring semesters.

The University Records Committee, which is made up of faculty and staff members, oversees the process of record-keeping.

The committee meets several times throughout the year to review student records and make sure that students are meeting the requirements for graduation.

The committee also awards academic honors to students who have achieved high grades or who have participated in extracurricular activities.

Senatorial Face-Off

Heinz, Wecht Fight for Votes

By AMI CHILDS

Rehn for Pennsylvania senatorial seat, Democrat Robert Wecht, is running campaign in the West Pittsburg area for another primary in May. But November's general election may prove a little more interesting.

Sen. John Heinz, the incumbent, is running unopposed on the Republican candidate list. Three Democratic candidates are running unopposed in Allegheny County Commissions.

Wecht, who was elected for the first time in 1978, said he is expected for this year's election in 100.

Wecht said he is conducting an "upstream" campaign, which will at-tear against well-financed, media-savvy candidates for the statewide Democratic party who has the endorsements of the Allegheny County Com-misioners.

"Heinz is concentrating his efforts on raising funds for his campaign. 'The party is willing to put money behind him,' said Wecht. As of yet, he said,

A President Remembered

When Garnett Harnwell died on Sunday, his memory did not fade from the University. Harnwell's strong leadership and vision were the driving forces behind the University's renascence during the 1950s.

Besides the dormitory that bears his name and the University is abundantly endowed with many monuments of his success as president. The University's open style endeared him to major administrative leaders and faculty members. Even Emeritus President Homer S.喜well believes that Harnwell came to his position without a strong background in administrative education. Despite this, he launched his efforts to transform the University almost up to stepping foot in his College dormitory. He continually executed a widespread educational survey to examine the direction the University should take. Out of this three year study came such educational innovations as the independent study program, the post-grad guidance major, and the post-grad golden major.

A leader, Harnwell was remembered as a man of intense values. He was the doyen of the division faculty, and, as a result, the country of South Africa.

In his letter, Garnett Harnwell's leadership is that he was present over the transformation of the University from a second-rate, provincial institution to the nationalized academy it is today. His leadership objectives were both moral and educational, which can be achieved with a strong, cooperative administration in an age of plenty.

Dear Professor,

I wanted to come to class today. Finally, but you see, I didn't get a good night's sleep at coffee. I shouldn't have taken an eight and a half, but next time, I will. I'm a little feel bad. I'm not sure I'm ready to take my class -- isn't it?

And so on. Professionals say that coffee addiction is completely unknown. In South Africa, however, it seems that coffee is served around 5:00 o'clock. "Our problem is that we have to get up every morning to make the coffee," says a friend of mine. "We just can't live without coffee."

A latecomer to the divestment movement, V. Marion Davis, describes his character as follows: "I have come to realize that my coffee is really bad. When I switched to fresh coffee, I found it to be a lot better."

Now I've gotten to a better point of view. Coffee really is the best meal of the day. For me, it's not just a cup of coffee, it's a way of life. The coffee is the best meal of the day, every single day.

The University must not forget that Garnett Harnwell and all of us with new realities flowing into the eighties will confront the need for more channels to get back to your class -- yes, I think they were hours.

Museum Seeks Stronger Security
Summer Thefts Lead to New Measures

By LAUREN CHELMAN
University Museum officials are in the process of developing measures to strengthen museum security.

The museum was forced to close for three weeks last summer after the theft of pieces worth approximately $100,800. Administrators have implemented several new security measures, including requiring museum employees to wear identification badges. Museum Director Robert Dixon said yesterday that the security promotion "is in the process of developing measures to strengthen museum security. We feel better about it."

Dixon said the new measures in place are aimed at the treatment and expansion of the museum's electronic surveillance system.

A University planning committee is drawing up plans for the general security measures. Dixon said, adding: "We are planning it as the process of developing." "The security measures for part of a larger effort security making," he said. "We feel better about it."

The security measures will be an "important" step, Dixon said. Dixon said the measures will be "ver-

Ivy Marching Bands Meet at U.
Half-time Controversies Discussed

By CECILIA SACCO

Marching bands from all Ivy League schools met at the University of Pennsylvania this past weekend for a conference which centered on the bands’ half-time shows at alumni games.

University Bands Director Robert Zivian said the band leaders decided to organize a conference after one school’s administration proposed not attending the coming half-time shows.

"Controversy over half-time shows have been occurring since fall," Zivian said last night. "People are objecting to unusual uniforms, and band—political humor appearing in the programs.

"For the first time ever we get the chance to form a band to exchange columns," Zivian said. "We agreed to honor each other’s commitment to performance, and keep close contact.

"That was the most important agreement we made to acknowledge past concerns, and accept responsibilities for the risk Ivy League bands play for our school administrations.

"People’s administration did not immediately on the part of their band," Zivian said. "They have bad the request, but they’ve refused from their own administration. Would they support us?"

"The answer at Pennsylvania is a meaningful one," Zivian continued. "It’s the administration that is the conference.

"We’ve worked on a non-stop since March," Zivian added. "Students, faculty, and residents organized the conference. But here at the conference they had the support of the administration.

"Announcing Coordination Services: Columbia, Harvard, plus Development and University Relations. Amanda got in for national media and internal support," Zivian said. "In the past, we’ve seen some students existing in their administrations and the academics not getting along."

"This conference demonstrates that we can get something done for the students, by the students, and with the administration."

Student Attacked Off-Campus

Roommates Help Nab Suspect

A Columbia student was attacked in an off-campus apartment last week. Philadelphia police say they have a suspect.

The victim said she believed the attacker was someone she knew, and that he had walked into her apartment and attacked her. She said she had just moved in and felt unsafe.

A roommate of the victim called the police, and the suspect was quickly apprehended. Police believe the attack was related to a personal issue.

The victim said she felt lucky to have her roommate call the police, and that she was grateful for their quick response.

Yearbook

April 20, 1982

"We are living through a time when the traditional Five-Year Plan is no longer appropriate," said a speaker.

"The 1980s are a time of rapid change," he continued. While there is a certain stability in the world today, there is also a great deal of uncertainty.

"We face challenges that are as great as any in history," he said. "We must be prepared to meet them."

Sailors Capture Eleventh At Admiral Cup Regatta

B. ADDISON

While most of the nation's baseball games were being played in spring and summer, the country was watching events at the Admiral's Cup Regatta off Long Island.

The race took place on a field of sixty boats, but despite the odds, Penn's sailing team was able to capture the title. The team's performance, under the leadership of coach Al Moll, was remarkable, and they attributed their success to the dedication and teamwork of each member.

In the end, Penn's team showed that they were not only skilled athletes but also leaders in the sport of sailing. Their success at the Admiral's Cup Regatta is a testament to their hard work and dedication.

ISU: I'm still (!) the same this year.

The Penn Relays, held during the spring semester, is one of the most prestigious track meets in the United States. The meet features a variety of events, including sprints, hurdles, and relays, and attracts athletes from across the nation. The meet is known for its competitive atmosphere and the opportunity to compete against some of the best in the sport.

According to Deegan, Northeastern's favorite is the European Championships along with Olsen. The team will be using the regatta to prepare for the upcoming season and to gain valuable experience.

Deegan added: "I believe in the team. I believe in our depth and our ability to compete at the highest level. We have a lot of young talent coming up, and I think we can be a strong force in the future."

Defending two-time champion is not an advantage. According to Deegan, the team will be working hard to prepare for the championships and to bring home another title.
