As Mayer Probe Ends

THE UNIVERSITY community was caught by surprise last month when the resignation of the University's chief executive, Robert Jordan, was announced. The move came as a shock to many, as Jordan had been a prominent figure on campus for many years. The University community was caught off guard by the news, as Jordan was expected to remain in his position for at least another year.

The resignation was announced by President Sheldon Hackney, who said that Jordan's departure was necessary in order to move the University forward. Hackney praised Jordan for his dedication and hard work, but also acknowledged that it was time for a change.

The University's board of trustees has appointed Provost Michael F. Gannon as interim president until a new president is found. The search for a new president is already underway, and the board is committed to finding someone who can bring stability and leadership to the University.

Changes Bring More Centralized Structure

The University's administrative structure is undergoing a major change, with the creation of a new, centralized structure. This move is part of President Hackney's effort to streamline the University's operations and improve efficiency.

The new structure will be led by Provost Michael F. Gannon, who will serve as interim president until a new president is appointed. The provost will be responsible for overseeing the day-to-day operations of the University, and will work closely with the board of trustees and the president.

The University's board of trustees has approved the new structure, and is committed to implementing it as quickly as possible.

Moving Out

The University's administrative offices are in the process of being relocated to a new, centralized location. This move is part of President Hackney's effort to improve efficiency and reduce costs.

The new location will be located on the University's main campus, and will be ready for occupancy in the fall. The move will take place over a period of several months, and will require the University community to adapt to new circumstances.

FAS Grant Creates More Tenured Jobs

The University has received a $4 million grant from the Pew Memorial Trust to fund research into robotics and artificial intelligence. The grant will create more tenured faculty positions, which will help support the University's research efforts.

The grant is part of the University's ongoing effort to improve its research capabilities, and to attract top researchers to the University. The grant will be used to fund research projects, as well as to support the hiring of new faculty members.

U. To Renovate Franklin Field

The University is committed to improving the student experience, and is committed to investing in new facilities and services. This includes the renovation of Franklin Field, which is the University's flagship athletic facility.

The renovation will include new seating, new lighting, and new locker rooms. The field will also be resurfaced, and new turf will be installed.

The renovation is part of the University's ongoing effort to improve its athletic facilities, and to provide the best possible experience for its student-athletes.

TERRORISTS BESIEGE POLISH EMBASSY

BERN, Switzerland — Anti-Communist terrorists threatening to blow up the Polish Embassy released three more hostages early today, after rescuing five hostages yesterday. The terrorists were believed still to be inside the building as of late this morning. The terrorists, according to their demands, is "police" to end martial law in Poland and return all political prisoners to the USSR. The police were believed still to be inside the building as of late this morning.

One of the three women freed yesterday and she was "tortured torture" until the release. The terrorists claimed they had enough demand to destroy the building, themselves, and their hostages.

In Warsaw, the Foreign Ministry gave in formal permission for Swiss police to enter the embassy, which normally has extraterritorial status, but police were not on site yet. The terrorists also called for the release of the three women, including two pregnant women. The Polish news agency said in Warsaw, however, that they still were being held hostage in the case of "pinball" of the most recent hostages were freed.

Reform Jews— The terrorists released a pregnant woman from the "September Brothers" yesterday. The Reform Jewish News, however, said they still were being held hostage in the case of "pinball" of the most recent hostages were freed.

They identified one of the hostages as embassy employee, and Polish sources have said they were only 19, including three women. The Polish police agency said in Warsaw, however, that they were still being held hostage in the case of "pinball" of the most recent hostages were freed.

Fitts Accepts Post as Acting FAS Dean

In other changes in administration, Fitts also said he is enthusiastic about planning the University's future. "I think it is always an uncertainty of which faculty, and where the emphasis will be placed," he said. "We plan to do it ourselves and not have it done for us." Fitts's style "He has a very nice sense of humor and he is very low-key," he said yesterday. "He doesn't get terribly excited, which is good for I think planning the future." Fitts will serve as dean during a search committee composed of faculty, trustees, students, and alumni sponsors a successor to Dyson. The new dean is expected to be named by February of next year.

Although Fitts will hold the title of acting dean, he added several major issues which will take place on his head or one of the nation's most prestigious liberal arts and sciences. Sitting in his College Hall office yesterday, Fitts said there will be immediate changes in planning and the retention of full faculty. Although Fitts and the grading system will be eliminated, he said yesterday. "We don't want to do other things, because we've made some people, it is better that we do it ourselves and not have done for us." Fitts said his office is collecting information from each department in the FAS on "where they want to go, and what, if any, long-range planning in other areas." He also plans to reorganize the FAS Board of Overseers, a task which in the past has been specifically involved in development. "We will be getting their advice and help in development which is an area which in the past has not been very involved," he said.

Fitts will serve as dean while a search for a new deanship of FAS is going on. "The foreign language requirement is always an uncertainty of which faculty, and where the emphasis will be placed," he said. "Hopefully we will have something determined by the end of the academic year."

President Milton Shapiro lauded Fitts's role. "He has been a very nice man of humor and he is very low-key," he said yesterday. "We don't get involved with other people, which is good for a dean."

Changes and Beginnings

At the University of Pennsylvania, not even the summer is a time of peace and tranquility. The campus is quiet, with students, faculty and administrators scattered around the world, but it is not quiet. The university is always buzzing with activity, whether in the summer or during the academic year. In fact, the summer is a time when much of the planning and preparation for the upcoming academic year takes place. This is also the time when many students and faculty members are able to focus on their research and coursework, without the distractions of classes and other academic obligations. In addition, the university is always looking for ways to improve and expand its programs and services, and the summer is a time when these efforts are particularly active. This is also a time when the university is able to welcome new students and faculty members, and to provide them with the resources and support they need to succeed. In short, the summer is a time of change and transformation at the University of Pennsylvania.

Jordan's Exit Leaves Questions

By POST-GAZETTE

As Director of PNC, President Edward Jordan faced a small college in his tenure. University officials are left to decide whether his brief tenure will have been a success. Jordan was hired in August 1986 and left in August 1987. His departure has left the University officials in the difficult position of having to prepare the University for the long road to success in the future.

President Millet said, "The biggest challenge is to find someone who understands the importance of the University's tradition and its mission."

The role of President Jordan was to ensure that the University remained on track for the future. Jordan's departure has left the University with a difficult decision to make.

The Experiment

Jordan has left for a job better suited to his talents and skills. Jordan's status was often misunderstood. Jordan was a man of limited capacity, according to one administrator.

Mayer To Leave U —

Investigation into charges of drug trafficking and sexual harassment

The allegations were then referred to the Wharton academic freedom committee, which found that the charges against Mayer, if proven true, would merit his termination from the faculty. If the Wharton investigation had been completed and had supported the charges, Mayer would have been the first faculty member in the University’s 240-year history to be stripped of tenure.
This Week in History

September 12, 1981 - New York University, a starting defensive back on the 1968 football team, has been ordered to cut his hair or lose the squad. Asked about the long-haired star quarterback of the New England Patriots, football coach Don Shula said, "I respect Joe Namath for his talent, but personally I think he is a bum."

September 9, 1981 - Students returning to campus are greeted by the newly-installed "Three Stooges" in front of Van Pelt Library. Following this event, a similar sculpture of the original Three Stooges is to be placed near the office of The Daily Pennsylvanian. This stunt has been called the "split infinitive."
General Counsel Hall Resigns

Lawyer Takes Post With Energy Firm

By STEPHEN W. LUCAS

University of Pennsylvania's General Counsel, Martin C. Hall, has announced his resignation in order to accept an executive position in the energy management firm of E.I. du Pont de Nemours.

Hall will take over as vice president and counsel of the Pardee Management Company, a firm dealing with coal, oil, and natural gas, on October 10. His resignation was effective the past in late May.

Hall, who has been General Counsel since June 1980, first served as the University's assistant provost in September 1976 as associate general counsel. He took over as the University's primary legal consultant when Stephen Barkham left the post to teach at the Law School.

President Sheldon Hackney said yesterday the search for a new general counsel is underway and he hopes to have a new person in place by the end of the year.

"I'm going to miss him, and the trustees are very sorry to see him go," Hackney said yesterday that while the University's long term workload was handled by his office.

Among the legal disputes which the Harvard Law School graduate has oversaw include numerous discrimination cases, an inquiry into the University's long term disability plan, and the recent Wharton Computer Center antitrust.

"Twentv years ago, that was the diversity of issues which were handled by his office," Hackney added.

The position of general counsel was created for Barkham in 1976 by then President Martin Meyerson. It was one that dealt more efficiently with the school's continually growing legal matters.

"It's been a unique position in a unique institution," he said. "It was a privilege to work at the University, a privilege."

"I'm going to miss him, and the trustees are very sorry to see him go," Hackney said yesterday that while the University's long term workload was handled by his office.

Hackney attributed the increased workload to a growing number of cases involving litigation in recent years. He also said to change are an impediment to the duties of general counsel.

"There was an economic opportunity for Hall to do something very different," Hackney added. "I'm going to miss him, and the Trustees are very sorry to see him go.

Looking back at his University career, Hall said he thought the most distinctive characteristic of his tenure was the diversity of issues which were handled by his office.

The selection of Roberts, who will also teach in the Folklore Department, made an above-par search for the new DuBois master possible.
Groundbreaking, John Roberts' ap-nomination was partially due to the Provost's office being aware of the University's need for a new master.

The University received a numerous applications for the position, Roberts said, and Reserve Adjunct Professor Ralph Smith, who resigned as master last spring, was impressed with the applications.

English Department Chairman
Robert Hudson, a faculty representative on the search committee, said Roberts received the position because of his unique qualifications.

He said last night Roberts was the committee's first choice when it met with the Provost's office in June.

"He is the one that we wanted to make it," he said. "He was the one that we wanted to bring in."

Roberts is currently a professor of Folklore and Afro-American studies
at the University of Missouri.

He said he was surprised to be named master of DuBois House.

"It was a shock to me," he said.

"I was not prepared for this position, but I am looking forward to it."
Koval Takes Over As Acting Vice Provost

Robert L. Kubic, who has served as the university's acting vice provost for the past two years, will serve as the university's acting vice provost for the next year.

Kubic said he is pleased to have had the opportunity to serve as acting vice provost.

"I have been pleased with the university's performance over the past two years," he said. "I have had the opportunity to work with many different departments and to see the university's growth and development.

Kubic said he will present a report to the board of trustees on the university's performance for the past year.

English Department Chairman Robert Lubic, who has been the university's acting vice provost for the past two years, said, "I am pleased that the university has continued to grow and develop under Kubic's leadership.

"I am confident that the university will continue to be successful under Kubic's administration," he added.

Kubic said he is looking forward to working with the university's faculty and staff to continue the university's growth and development.

Lakiee Laugh is not your average appealing athlete. She is 5'9",

AURORA, CO. - Arena hockey, a game that was once popular but nothing to be considered serious or political. Now, as a matter of game, is on the rise again. Five teams are trying out in the city of

Denver, and the Colorado Flames

are just one of them. According to the team's general manager, JOHN

SMITH, the Flames have been shaping up to be a force in the city's arena hockey scene.

Smith explained that the Flames

are made up of players from a variety of local hockey teams, including the University of Colorado at Denver and the Colorado Avalanche. The team's goal is to provide a competitive game for fans of all ages and skill levels.

The Flames' first official practice was held recently, and the players were excited to get back into the game. "It's been a long summer," said one player. "I'm ready to get back on the ice." The team is looking forward to their opening game later this month.

SMITH said that the Flames plan to play a regular schedule of games,

starting in the fall. "We're hoping to have some fans come out and support us," he said. "We're hard at work to make this team a team that everyone will enjoy." The Flames are also planning to join in a few tournaments throughout the city, and they're looking forward to battling it out with other teams.

The Flames' first game will be held at the Denver Coliseum, which is the team's home rink. They plan to play a few more games in the Coliseum before moving on to their final schedule.

The Flames' website is www.coloradowhockey.com, and fans can keep up with the team's development on social media.

The Colorado Flames are a promising team in the world of arena hockey, and they are expected to make a splash in the city of Denver. With hard work and dedication, they are sure to be a team for fans to watch out for.
