Over Sports Funding

In the preliminary report of an investigation into the University of Pennsylvania's sports funding, it was revealed that because of inadequate compensation of coaches, the University fails to achieve parity overall. This often creates a concentration of resources on the men's teams, particularly in basketball.

University of Pennsylvania's Student Council votes to remove the article from the student newspaper.

By Peter Canillow

The university's new policy, which requires students to run for student government offices, places a burden on students who are not interested in politics or the student government. The policy is seen as a form of discrimination by some students.

By Mark Goldstein

The resolution introduced by Goldstein is a response to the proposed changes in the student government's election process. The resolution calls for the reinstatement of the student newspaper's right to publish articles without interference.

El Salvador Floods Kill 489
SAN SALVADOR—A flood tidal wave from floods and mud slugs of its torrential rains killed 489 persons and injured nearly 1000 others in Guzmantown Wednesday. Although authorities estimated there were as many as 30 million water rivers in the country, the actual toll of flood victims was estimated to be about 30 million. On the Montebello estate, where floods flooded over 200 buildings, hundreds of bodies were dug from the mud and dumped into the river. The bodies were then hauled to central Houston Hall for burial. The flood waters cut off the road to the capital, and the bodies were dumped along the way. The flood waters also cut off the road to the capital, and the bodies were dumped along the way. S. African Speech Cancelled—

The South African government announced that it would not allow the former Prime Minister, Mr. Vorster, to address the Student Union at the University of the Witwatersrand. The announcement came after a meeting between the University authorities and the government. The government had been pressuring the University to cancel the speech, citing concerns about the content of Vorster's speech. The University had initially refused, citing the importance of free speech and academic freedom. However, following the meeting, the University announced that it would not allow the speech to be held. The decision was met with mixed reactions from students and political groups. Some criticized the University for giving in to government pressure, while others welcomed the decision as a victory for free speech.
The Philadelphia Zoo Roars With Visitors

B. ALEX STADT
Someone asked if I had ever been to the Philadelphia Zoo. I said, "If you mean before I was born, you're right." But then I thought, "I didn't mean zoo!"

"Oh, I know," the person answered. "It's National Zoo."

I realized then that I should have used my head in the first place.

But I digress. I can hardly believe that it has been one year since the novelties of the opening day. That was last year at this time. And the animals still come around every day, on schedule and with the same periodicity as the sun and moon.

The Philadelphia Zoo is filled with wonders, and it has become a haven for all those who have a fascination for nature. Among the attractions of the zoo are the various exhibits, ranging from the butterflies to the birds and from the monkeys to the hippos. Each exhibit has its own unique charm, and visitors are encouraged to explore and learn about the various species on display.

One of the most popular exhibits is the butterfly garden, where visitors can see a variety of butterflies flitting about. The garden is located near the entrance of the zoo, and it is a great place to start your visit.

Another popular exhibit is the bird show, where visitors can hear the beautiful melodies of various birds. The show is held daily at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m., and it is a must-see for bird lovers.

The zoo is not just for children; it is a great place for adults as well. Visitors can learn about the fascinating world of nature and its inhabitants, and they can enjoy the beauty of the outdoors.

The Philadelphia Zoo is a wonderful place to visit, and it offers something for everyone. Whether you are a nature lover, a bird enthusiast, or simply looking for a fun day out with the family, the zoo has something for you. So come on down and see for yourself what all the buzz is about!
No Free Lunch

Last Wednesday, The New York Times reported that Imelda Marcos was coming to the University to receive an honorary degree. The University subsequently denied the report, and the next day The Times arrested a correction in another story about Marcos. Still unclear, the University issued a strongly worded statement, condemning the "false and irresponsible" reports.

The statement ended with "I hope this clear statement of the University's position will help to insulate us from further attacks." But if Nuhut's record is already besmirched, the University might want to make sure it is not further besmirched by a lack of a pure conscience.

The University should not have taken part in the honorarium of Imelda Marcos, but nor should it have hidden behind a mask of strong sympathy. Sheldon Haken has said Monday that "Marcos was a Pac-5 parent visiting the city and it was the correct thing to do." Clearly, it was not.

The War of Ideas

By AMES ALEXANDER

Religion and public policy expert Michael Novak, speaking in the Anenberg Center's theological and philosophical center yesterday, used his lecture by talking about the role of philosophers and theologians. He started out by saying that "the role of philosophers and theologians has not as an economist," he said. "Thus, theologians and philosophers should give some attention because it is the duty of Judaism and Christianity to change history." Christian economy must have a moral, he added. They should give some attention because it is the duty of Judaism and Christianity to change history.

Novak held that "the quality of the spirit is as important to its political economy as the capacity is as important to its political economy."

"Yes, the president is in the duel with Larry Baxter."

One of the habits of mind needed for business, he said, is to think with one of these "good points." The president's idea that the spirit of the economy is important to its political economy."

"It's not so much forms on the board so much as the spirit or belief that you have to save now for tomorrow that is important," he said. "On that point, I thought he was very good." College justice Larry Linsky said after the lecture that he agreed with the president's position. "Yes, the president is in the duel with Larry Baxter."

Hackney Kicks Off
United Way Drive

By JONI SCHULT
In a meeting that marked the start of the annual United Way Drive, President Sheldon Hackney handed a $9,000 check to the Committee on Development, highlighting the University's ongoing commitment to United Way.

"We live in an extremely complex society today," he said. "We will be able to be as successful, provide good-quality education, and do everything we do in this city and in this University if we do it together."

"We have always been very active in United Way," he continued. "I'm confident that we can, as we have in the past, do it again."

"I hope that in your way you will be able to help us, and that it will be a great success," he said. "I will report on the results, and I think we can do it together.""
Gov't Eases Hiring Guidelines

Affirmative Action Review Continues

By NINA LEI:
The U.S. Department of Labor has proposed a new set of regulations for affirmative action which would ease government pressure on the University to hire more minorities and women.

The Affirmative Action Division said Tuesday that the new regulations would make it easy for employers to satisfy affirmative action regulations without necessarily having to hire more minority employees. Under current regulations, employers are required to meet affirmative action goals on a regular basis.
College Republicans To Host Candidates

By B. Eric Roberts
Local congressional candidates Michael Mazara and Steve Jenkins are among the scheduled speakers at tonight's meeting of the College Republicans, according to College Republicans President Mike Fink.

In addition to Mazara and Jenkins, representatives from the six election campaigns of Gov. Bob Turnquest and U.S. Sen. John Hagee are expected to attend.

At the 7 p.m. meeting, which will be held in the Bishop White Room in Houston Hall, the group will also be announcing officers and year and signing up new members.

The group also will be making plans for a number of events, including a letters-writing effort to former presidential candidate John Anderson and National Conservative Convention in Indianapolis, and two fund-raising functions to support the group's efforts.

Another featured speaker at the meeting will be Republican Ward Leader Matthew White, Jr., a University of Houston student.

The meeting will also feature the group's annual presentation of awards and political organizations give their "state of the state" over all the grantors political activity.

College Republicans President Mike Fink said that more students than ever have expressed interest in the group, and he is eagerly awaiting tonight's meeting.

"We have a large number of students interested in the College Republicans," said Fink. "We need to make sure that people interested in the polity are coming to our meetings and discussing their ideas with us."
Famed Director Harold Prince To Lead Annenberg Production

By DICK SCHOLLO

Harold Prince is an innovator and the winner of seven Tony Awards, including one for his direction of the hit show "Evita." He is now taking on a new challenge that is nothing short of magnificent: directing the first play directed by the center in the last 10 years. "The function of the center is in the context of what is going on in Iran," he said. "There is no better way of reinforcing our relations with Iran than through theater."

He is working on "Evita," the musical based on the life of the Argentinean leader. "It's not an anti-communist show," he said. "It's a story of where we've been."

A career that has spanned 50 years has brought him numerous awards and accolades. A recent one was receiving an Honorary Degree from his alma mater, Columbia University, in 1993. He has received a total of 12 Tonys, including 1985's Tony for Best Director for "Sweeney Todd," 1986's Tony for Best Direction of a Musical for "Les Misérables," 1989's Tony for Best Direction of a Musical for "The Phantom of the Opera," and 1994's Tony for Best Direction of a Musical for "The Who's Tommy." He was the first director to win a Tony for the same show twice, "Sweeney Todd." The show is among his most successful, grossing over $600 million worldwide since it opened in 1981.

The upcoming visit will be Prince's first time directing a production in Iran. "The center was created," he said. "The New York Times is a platform to bring news from Iran to America, and the center is a platform to bring news from America to Iran."

He is continuing the work of his predecessor, Marshall, who was in Prince's class at the University. "It's important to the continuation of the center that students be involved with its activities," he said. "The center is in the process of organizing a symposium for undergraduate students auditing the center."

Marshall, who was in Prince's class at the University, said the late Khomeini "had this idea that he knows," he said. "It's important to the continuation of the center that students be involved with its activities," he said. "The center is in the process of organizing a symposium for undergraduate students auditing the center."

He said that during Prince's last two visits, efforts were made to involve students in the center. "There were students on hand last year when we were in Iran, and this year there will be even more," he said. "The students have been involved with its activities," he said. "The center is in the process of organizing a symposium for undergraduate students auditing the center."
