Hackney To Cut Public Policy School

Administrators Cite Financial Constraints

By ROY DAVIS

The School of Public and Urban Policy will be phased out, Provost Sheldon Hackney and President Thomas Ellis announced last week. This follows on the heels of other cuts, including a 19 percent decrease in the budget approved for the 1974-75 academic year (see page 7). With the cuts, the school will be reduced to the size of an "improvement program" for the "improvement of the academic climate," and its facilities will be used for administrative purposes.

The school's current status is the result of a series of decisions made by the Board of Trustees. Last year, the Board directed that the school be closed in 1976. This year, the Board approved a 19 percent reduction in the school's budget, with the proviso that the school be closed in 1975 if its goals could not be met.

The decision to close the school was made in response to the financial difficulties faced by the University. The school's budget was cut by 19 percent last year, and the Board of Trustees was directed to consider closing the school if it was unable to meet its goals.

The decision to close the school was also made in response to the recommendations of the Committee on the Future of the University, which was established by the Board of Trustees last year. The committee was charged with investigating the University's financial situation and making recommendations for its future.

The committee's report, which was presented to the Board of Trustees last month, recommended that the University reduce its costs and increase its revenues. The Board of Trustees adopted the committee's recommendations, and the decision to close the school was one of the measures adopted.

Inflation Shows Small Rise

WASHINGTON — Consumer prices inched upward at an annual rate of 3.3 percent in August as falling gasoline and food costs offset increases in wages, leading to a gain since 1976. The Labor Department's Consumer Price Index indicates that inflation for the first eight months of this year was at an annual pace of 3.5 percent. If that holds for the rest of the year, it would bring the annual rate of inflation down to 3.2 percent by the end of the year, compared with 3.6 percent in 1975.

The Consumer Price Index tracks the cost of a basket of goods and services that a typical urban family buys. It is used to calculate the percentage change in the cost of living and is an important indicator of inflation.

The index includes prices for food, clothing, shelter, and transportation. It is compiled by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, a part of the Department of Labor, and released monthly.

The index is one of several measures of inflation, which is the rate at which prices increase. A high rate of inflation can reduce the purchasing power of money, making it more difficult for people to afford goods and services.

Inflation rates have been a major concern for policymakers, as high inflation can lead to economic instability and reduce consumer confidence. The government and central banks often use interest rates and other monetary policies to try to control inflation and maintain economic stability.

In this case, the Consumer Price Index shows that inflation has slowed down from previous years, but it is still a concern for many economists and policymakers. They continue to monitor the index and other indicators of inflation to ensure that it does not rise too high and to adjust policies accordingly.
Aspiring Playwrights Learn From Pro

Students of all ages, play in English classes, others write them.

Instructional Musician Luisa offers a 10-week summer theater program that includes student participation in a workshop. The program is open to students in grades 5 through 12.

A key component of the program is a one-on-one music lesson, which gives the students an understanding of musical interpretation. In addition, the students also work on their plays, which are performed at a concluding recital.

Luisa noted that the students come to the program with varying levels of experience, and she tailors her instruction to meet their needs.

The program begins with an intensive introduction to the elements of drama, including stage presence, stage movement, and stage direction. The director then introduces the concept of the play and the students begin writing their own plays.

The students are encouraged to experiment with different styles of writing and to find their own voice.

Luisa noted that the students often struggle to find the right balance between character development and plot progression.

"It's important to balance the two," she said. "As a writer, you need to be able to make your characters engaging and your plots interesting."

Federal Aid for Registration Evaders?

By Editor

June 18, 1982

Federal aid for draft registration evaders is a fact of South African life. The government, in its effort to avoid the costs of maintaining an armed forces, requires that all able-bodied men register for the draft. Those who fail to register are subject to fines and imprisonment. The government has even been known to use the threat of death as an incentive to registration.

The program is designed to ensure that all able-bodied men are registered for the draft. It is a way for the government to ensure that it has a pool of trained soldiers, ready to be called upon when needed. The program also helps to ensure that there is a fair distribution of military service, as it is based on the population of able-bodied men.

The program is also intended to deter draft evasion. Those who fail to register are subject to fines and imprisonment, and the government has even been known to use the threat of death as an incentive to registration. This is a way for the government to ensure that it has a pool of trained soldiers, ready to be called upon when needed.

Changing attitudes within the American Jewish community and the recent history topic in a seminar series of four lectures sponsored by the Museum of American Jewish History. Sociology Professor Samuel Klawans will speak this Wednesday on "The influence on Biblical scholar".

The second part of the lecture series, "Views on New York," will be held by Mr. and Mrs. Herbert S. Jacobson, the founder of the University's Hillel chapter, and shall explore the role of women in Judaism. The third part of the lecture series will be a group discussion dealing with "Role of women in the Jewish community," said. "I believe that for Jewish people of the Jewish community at large, they would do best to learn more about themselves and their heritage in order to participate in Jewish American and American Jewish history."

Klawans praised the choice of Kiausner as a speaker. "Samuel Kiausner is a top-rate scholar in his field." He said, "This is a wide range in sociology, psychology, and religion."

The final part of the lecture series will be held in the University's Hillel chapter's meeting room. Kiausner will be the topic. He said, "I believe that for Jewish people, the social change in this regard..." he continued. "Always be on the lookout for change in the changing role of women in Judaism."

The lecture is sponsored by the Museum of American Jewish History, the American Jewish Committee, and the University's Hillel chapter. Kiausner is the director of the Center for Research on the American Jewish Experience and a member of the American Jewish Historical Society. Kiausner is the author of several books on American Jewish history and sociology.

Kiausner said he believes there has been a "widespread social change" in the role of women in Judaism. "I believe that the over-riding trend remains toward secularization and assimilation," he said. He added that while there has been little change in the attitudes of the Orthodox community, there has been a "significant change" in the attitudes of the Conservative and Reform communities.

Kiausner is a top-rate scholar in his field. He is a widely read scholar and has written many books on American Jewish history and sociology.

Faculty Reaction on SPUP

in the face of this crisis and apparently not able to react in time, it is inordinately sad and frustrating to our students and to us.

I am looking forward to the day when I can again be proud of my University. Today I am very sad about the decision taken yesterday by the SPUP faculty. It is an unhappy day for the University and the students of our University. It is a waiting and a painful process, but I am sure that this decision will be reversed in the future.

Sincerely yours,

New Faces a Lift to Women Harriers

By Stu Geffner

When the 1981 season began, the coaches of the Pennsylvania women's cross country teams were not with a very pleasant surprise. Both coach Betty Contino and Mark Kindred were well aware that four premier runners were returning for action, but little did they know what would be revealed during this season.

What the Quakers found last week at West Chester was an array of talent that is able, in addition to immediately contribute and impress, to immediately open up the team's potential.

This new talent came in the form of three freshmen: Cricket Barl, Lisa Scinocca, and Lynn Pachucki, and Sue Stackle, a sophomore transferred from Ohio State.

"The fact that the new runners did so well was not unexpected, but I think the most surprising thing is that they will make the team dreams and will make a little pressure off of some of the other girls," one coach elaborated.

One reason why the coaches have come up so soon is that none are lacking in experience. The quartet has completed four seasons in Ohio, while each of the freshmen has almost three years of high school races behind them.

"The competition is not very rare to me," said Bata, a former member of a New Jersey state championship team. "I've been in important meets before, but those really can't compare to college meets."

The freshmen have different theories on what they expect this season to be like. "We're not new to the game," one coach pointed out. "I know what to expect. But we are certainly not inexperienced." You have the chance to become an integral part of the team with little pressure off of some of the other girls...

"I think this is a really good season for us," said Kindred. "We have the opportunity to make the team dreams and will make a little pressure off of some of the other girls."...

"The fact that all the girls are so close to each other really helped in the adaption from high school to college athletics," Pachucki said. "I think this is the most enjoyable season ever has been for me. You are not motivated, but others motivate you as well."

The Harriers will use each day to do more than just train, but to put together a team that can win.

"We're very satisfied with a look at Pennbrook," Kindred congratulated. "I think we have a real winner in this team."

"This season, Harvard and Colom- bia are in a different class and va.

The CATSWOMAN — Sure, she's not the real thing, but what can you expect from someone who had the loss free from Harvard. Raji was another surprise. "These two girls are definitely go-

DP Swans

The football team isn't the only group on this campus looking for revenge.

The season of profigature, masters of misfortune and daily failures in decades -- the Swans -- hasn't ended just yet.

We're sick and tired of players who force us to keep tuning in to two more hours of our life's precious moments being wasted onPhil Potter. And it definitely hurts that we're forced to sit on the sidelines while the rest of the world is enjoying the pleasures of football. And we're really quite aggrieved with the follows: (1) they're always the first to start a game, (2) they never make it to the finish line and (3) they never let us have any fun. We don't like their色调 or their music. It's like they're too busy trying to be cool and they don't care about us.

We went out this week in search of men and women with degrees in sociology, depression and humiliation.

Of course we started with an Italian. But Gian Giorgio, the Grazia, the supermodel, wasn't talking to us. He was too busy trying to avoid Italian, because he no like the Bronze and citrus city. We don't press the matter.

But our agent's secretary in California said that he 'wont' be free for the rest of the year. So Rock, Alphonse a-hadn't exactly been winning a lot of soccer games. He didn't have a single point to show for it. And he never made a move on us.

So we scorned the Italians, and turned to the Mexicans. As in don't drink the water. As in no other team. As in no other soccer team.

We're taking Montezuma's Revenge.

The Consul of Mexico, Carlos Ruiz, made his pits while performing his country's national pastime. And it was all at the complaints of the many New Yorkers in attendance. It wasn't a pretty sight. And it wasn't a pretty sight.

But the Swans really didn't have a clue. They didn't have a clue during the first half. And they didn't have a clue during the second half. They didn't have a clue during the whole game. They didn't have a clue.

And that's exactly what we expected. The Swans really had no clue. And that's what we wanted. We wanted them to have no clue.

And that's exactly what we got. And that's exactly what we deserved.

We're going to keep on tasting the Swans. And we're going to keep on tasting the Swans. And we're going to keep on tasting the Swans.
