Four band members will travel to Florida on Sunday morning to perform in the parade honoring the late Philipps. Phyllis Heinzerling, a 1970 graduate of Phi Beta Kappa and a member of the Phi Beta Kappa Society, will lead the band.

The event, which will be held in the University of Pennsylvania on the campus at 11 a.m., is an annual tradition.

The group is made up of students, alumni, and faculty members.

Press Descends on U. Over Tylenol Death

By STEPH JACOBSON

The university was the site of a press conference yesterday as reporters descended on the campus to question University Medical Center officials about the death of a student who died of an unknown cause.

The news conference was held at the University Medical Center, where the student was transported.

The student, who was in his early 20s, died at 2:30 a.m. yesterday after being rushed to the hospital.

The cause of death has not been determined.

U. Agrees On Removal Of Superblock Barriers

By DAVID TSCHECHER

The university will remove the university's counter-clashing posts at the entrance to Superblock after a meeting between university administrators and students.

The meeting was held yesterday morning, and the agreement was reached to remove the posts as soon as possible.

The students had complained about the posts being a safety hazard and that they were blocking their view.

LOUIS ANGELI - Brush fires torched by hot, dry Santa Ana winds rushed from ridge to ridge across Southern California on Wednesday, injuring 147 people and destroying 227 homes before dying down yesterday, authorities said. Thousands of people fled choking smoke and burning rubble, their faces smeared with gritty, palm-fiber wood. Property damage was estimated at $1 million.

Edmond Brown yesterday declared a state of emergency in Los Angeles, Ventura and Orange counties. The declaration allows local officials to request federal aid for the area.

The governor's action was in response to a presentation by Chemical Director John Erlewine, who said that "without federal disaster aid, the area could not recover.

The Office of Civil Defense, in a joint news release with the governor's office, said that "federal disaster aid would make a huge difference in the recovery process for the area." The release went on to say that "the federal government is not required to help for the area.

The spark was so thick it was like driving into a blizzard with your lights off," Erlewine said. "I don't think anyone who's ever been on a tanker to take to the sky for the PC (Polaris missile) was ever in a fire like this.

Susan had herpes for nine years. She did not know what the cause was, she had genital herpes for five years. She was diagnosed as having an ulcer at two years and was only diagnosed with genital herpes at a later date. Three years ago the problem became unusually severe. A student at Shrewsbury, Susan found herself with sores extending from her cervix down to her thighs and a fever. "I was not healthy enough to do anything," Susan said. "It was a lot of pain most of the time, so I took a lot of painkillers. She made me feel really out of it."

"I try to help people separate the myths and realities about it and cope with having an incurable disease," Susan said. "I was told that Mycoplasma genitalium could be the cause. Many people find the physical discomfort of a minor infection but have more trouble handling the emotional and psychological complications.

"Hers is demands that you manage your sexuality and that you be more concerned with your body. Some people find it really hard to be more open about yourselves, and it is not always clear what your choice is for sexual interactions and whether you want to share the information about herpes."

Student Health Doctor Malcolm Lysh said that most of his patients have a real fear of the disease and the stigma that comes with it. He said, "Some patients have a hard time believing about it. They find it strange on themselves. They come to student health. For every three patients who come in afraid of having it, one of them really has it."

"We refer you to a doctor if they are already sure they have it and they know that they have no known cause for it at the moment," he said.

Lysh said that one of the big problems herpes suffers face is misinformation about their disease. "People have a lot of misinformation about herpes because some people don't want to know the truth or the facts about the disease."

"At one time we were seeing two or three students a week who had been referred from Student Health to participate in our studies," he said.

"One of the first outbreaks of herpes lasts three to seven days. The second outbreak lasts two to seven weeks. After the first attack, it is possible to become infected with the virus again. The second attack is usually milder and less painful."

"I have had patients who have had genital herpes for five years. She was diagnosed as having genital herpes at a later date. She had problems worse psychological than physically, she has had three to seven days. She has had genital herpes for nine years. She was diagnosed as having genital herpes for five years. Group Works To Fight the Gas Company

By MARY ELLEN CROWLEY

Philadelphia residents are being informed for refusal to pay for measurements, through a bill that was made by the Philadelphia Gas Works. The company, according to a recent report, has been accused of overcharging some of its customers in its dealings with local residents.

The group claims that the company overcharged its customers and then billed them accordingly. There are no errors in the gas company's internal accounting, and they then recouped against them when the bills were paid.

"There are a number of individuals who are having troubles," said one of the group's representatives. "They're trying to turn off their gas, and they're being overcharged.

Haver was especially concerned with the idea of people being overcharged. "It would give the company an opportunity to keep their rates high," he said. "It would also show consumers that they might be able to get away with overcharging.

"The gas works is owned by the city," said Haver. "They have a right to speak out."

He noted that consumers are currently not informed by the gas works of the various options available to them. "We want to make sure that people have a voice to speak out," he said.

"The only "key" needed to take part in any of these workshops is anyone who wants to learn about energy saving tips and how to improve their fuel costs," Haver said. The first Roman Catholic racial discrimination case ever to arise out of the University since last November has been rescheduled for the hearing in November morning.

The case, in which Assistant Commissioner William Dye is charging the University and several individuals with discriminating in the arts and sciences, has been drawn out for a year because of the internal grievance at the University and the one-part meeting of the three judges that is out of 10 by deciding whether there will be a jury or not. The case is called "Dell's".

Assistant General Counsel Dennis Bankston and the counsel of the University said nothing could be done until the trial.

If there is a trial, members of the jury will have to be selected and asked questions before the hearing begins. This is similar to the setting up of an administrative hearing, including further Budget and Finance officials and according to the Third-Floor Associate Commissioner Dennis Bankston, and first Vice President for Student Affairs, University of Philadelphia from the University of Maine.

The woman, who has been employed at the University for many months, is not at this time at the University, and her presence in the University is being treated as that of a Black woman.

Dye is demanding compensation for back pay and legal fees and is demanding sanctions.

Racial discrimination is a violation of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

Police Arrest Purse Snatcher

Chief Struck at Fraternity Party

BY DANIEL D. MEISEL

University Police arrested a man who had stolen a purse from a psychology major the previous day.

The suspect, a junior psychology major, was reported to have been seen in the Psychology Department last week.

Heath said witnesses claimed that they had observed the suspect take the handbag from a woman in that room.

When they confronted him, the suspect replied that it was his and that he was only being stopped by the police.

Gordon said that a woman, who had lived in the dormitory for the past month while she was attending the University, was the suspect.

Heath said that the suspect was placed in custody and that the other suspect was later identified as a second suspect the same day.

University Police charged the suspect with burglary, theft, criminal and defraud, and trespass.

"He said he was pleased by the action of the University Police, who have made it clear to him that this is a serious matter.," Heath said.

"He was also very thankful that the University Police have made it clear to him that this is a serious matter.," Heath said.

W. Harriers Capture Temple Invitational

BY STEVEN GODFREY

The Quakers' football team visited Temple on Saturday afternoon and emerged victorious, defeating the Owls 30-10.

The contest began with a kickoff by Temple, which was returned to the Owls' 30-yard line. On the next play, Temple's quarterback was intercepted, and the Quakers took over at the Owl's 30. On the very first play from this position, the Owls' quarterback fumbled, and the Quakers recovered in the end zone for a touchdown.

The Quakers then took time out, and the Owls were forced to punt. On the punt return, Temple's quarterback was intercepted, and the Quakers took over at the Owl's 20-yard line. On the next play, the Owls' quarterback fumbled, and the Quakers recovered in the end zone for a touchdown.

The Quakers added to their lead on the next drive, scoring on a touchdown pass from Deitz to O'Neill. The Owls were forced to punt on their next possession, and the Quakers scored on a touchdown pass from Deitz to O'Neill.

The Quakers ended the first half with a field goal, leading 21-0. In the second half, the Quakers scored on a touchdown pass from Deitz to O'Neill, leading 28-0. The Owls scored on a touchdown pass from their quarterback, but the Quakers scored on a touchdown pass from Deitz to O'Neill to close out the game, leading 30-10.

The Quakers were paced by Mary Alexander, who finished with 155 yards on 80 carries. The Owls were led by Mark Russ, who finished with 10 yards on 20 carries.

The Quakers were pleased with their performance, and the Owls were disappointed with their loss.

The Quakers are now 1-0 on the season, and the Owls are 0-1.

The Quakers' next game is against the University of Pennsylvania on Saturday, September 29, at 1:00 p.m. at Franklin Field. The Owls' next game is against the University of Delaware on Saturday, September 29, at 1:00 p.m. at Franklin Field.
