Center Plans Fourth Show Dealing With Apartheid's Aftermath

By LEE SCHAPIRO

The Department of Speech is presenting a historical tradition of using art and drama as a tool to help deal with apartheid South Africa.
The play, a political satire written and performed by South Africans, will be presented at the University at 8 p.m. this Saturday in the Center at 3-March.

The play is being performed for "the cause" (it would have been censored in South Africa), and was written so that the entire play is not in one world where apartheid exists.

The show's director, the Center's Manager, Senior Stephen George and Assistant Manager Harold Albert will conduct the main theme of the show, which is to re-educate students about living in a world different from what we have experienced.

Assistant Director Richard Therault of the Department of Residential Life will be speaking to guard against violence.

"We're here to educate the students, to encourage them to think about how they can be involved in making the world a better place," George said.

Therault added that this program doesn't stem from a single event, but is part of a comprehensive program that the department has put in place over the past year.

"We're trying to raise awareness, to encourage students to think about their responsibilities as global citizens," he said.

The speech, which is being held in conjunction with the University's African Studies Program, was the first in a series of lectures and presentations on African Studies.

"This is the beginning of a much larger program, which will continue throughout the year," Therault said.

The program is open to all University students, and will be held in the Center at 3-March.

"The issues of today," he said, "are very different from the issues of the 1940s. "We've known for a while that the end was near."

The public knew this as well, he added, and the nation was ripe for a change in leadership.

Baha'i Seek To Cure Injustice in Society

By JANE DORSON

The Baha'i Club is part of the university's 100 clubs and activities, and its members are working to change society for the better. The group is based upon the idea that all religions have a purpose, and they believe that the Baha'i faith is working towards that purpose.

The Baha'is are known for their beliefs about the oneness of mankind. They believe that all religions are part of a progressive revelation—there is one God and one way of worship. The Baha'is also stress the importance of unity through diversity.

The Baha'i Club meets every Tuesday, and they have a series of events throughout the year. One such event is "New Race of Man," which was mentioned in the text.

Members of the Baha'i Club also work on a variety of issues, such as human rights, equality for women, and poverty. They believe that the Baha'i faith can provide a solution to these problems, and they are working to spread the message of the Baha'i faith around the world.

The Baha'is around the world have been persecuted, and they believe that their faith can provide a solution to the problem of injustice. They are working to make the Baha'i faith known to all people, and they believe that it can bring about a better world.

The Baha'is believe that the Baha'i faith is a way of life that emphasizes the importance of unity, justice, and service. They believe that the Baha'i faith can provide a solution to the problems of today, and they are working to spread the message of the Baha'i faith around the world.
—UA Condemns Moving of Game—

The University of Iowa has condemned the move of a game to Philadelphia. According to the article, the University has stated that the move goes against its traditional rivalry with Pennsylvania, and that it is not in the best interests of the fans or the players.

The move was made due to the University of Pennsylvania's decision to move the game to Philadelphia. The article states that the University of Iowa has expressed its concern over the move, and has condemned it as a breach of tradition and fair play.

The University of Iowa has also stated that it is not in the best interests of the fans or the players to move the game to Philadelphia. The article notes that the move will be met with strong opposition from the fans and the players, and that the University of Pennsylvania will have to justify its decision.

The University of Iowa has expressed its determination to fight against the move, and has stated that it will do everything in its power to prevent the move from taking place. The article notes that the University of Iowa has always been a strong supporter of traditional rivalries, and that it will continue to fight against any moves that threaten these rivalries.

A fireJacit is the cause of the circumstances believed to have caused a fire death at Lubell College. It is a cigarette in the hand of a sleeping smoker in bed, smoking two cigarettes, with both end tips ignited simultaneously, "dead-end" type.

This brings us to the second part of the program. A questionnaire on fire safety will be distributed throughout residences to allow students to see themselves as the base elements of the safety.

- To make sure, it's the fire that kills people — it's the smoke.

Theriault continued. "Residential Living is a real responsibility, and would rather take the blame for underestimating the fire danger.

The most recent fire occurred in the mid 1960's, in a fraternity where three outdoor decks of smoke inhalation. Miller said last year, prefigure the years to come.

Ivy Roundup

Ivy Co-Champs are on the Move

By JOHN DELI PIV

It's hard to believe we're at the half-way point of the 82 Ivy League season already. As such, believe it or not, everyone is playing for the Ivy title.

Quarterback Jim Cordicchia tin completed 13 of 26 passes for 135 yards in the 48-21 victory over Yale a few weeks ago. "A lot of you guys seemed to think we didn't have much offense," he said. "Well, we've been putting up points in the last three games, haven't we?"

The Quakers, in fact, have been scoring in waves, as Cordicchia's passing made a total of 75 points in the last five games.

Another reason that the Quakers have been winning their last three games is the balance among the three Ivy teams.

"We've been playing well on defense and offense," Cordicchia said. "I think we've been playing our best football in years."

The Quakers are 3-0-1 in their last four games, while the Bulldogs are 2-2 in their last four games.

"Our defense has been playing great," Cordicchia said. "We've been holding teams to less than 10 points per game."

The Quakers' defense has been led by senior linebacker Paul Andree, who led the team with 10 tackles in the win over Yale.

"We've been playing very well," Andree said. "I think we'll be able to make the playoffs."
