HIT List Attacks U. Spending

Group Targets 15 “Excessive” Expenses

By STEPHAN FAYOS

Hit List members yesterday targeted 15 “excessive” expenses with a proposal presenting excessive or unjustified spending by University administrators.

The Hit List proposal, which was presented to University administrators, proposed to eliminate certain expenses, including:

- $100,000 spent on a video production tool
- $10,000 for a director’s assistant’s airfare
- $5,000 for a university building renovation
- $1,000 for a faculty member’s travel to a conference

If approved, these expenses would be eliminated from the budget, resulting in a savings of $116,500.

President Shadwick, however, defended each of the expenses, stating that they were necessary for the university to continue operating effectively.

"These expenses are essential for the ongoing operations of the university," Shadwick said. "They are not excessive, but rather necessary for the university to function properly."

In the Student Center, a new coffee shop is open for business. The cafe, called Jeudi, is run by a committee of PUC students, and its atmosphere and service are described as being conducive to studying or meeting people. The cafe also serves breakfast items and is known for its coffee and desserts. The cafe is located on the lower level of Houston Hall.

The cafe's success is attributed to the students who manage it, as well as the willingness of PUC students to support local businesses. Additionally, the cafe's philosophy is to hire and train students, which is seen as a benefit for both the cafe and the students.

The cafe is also part of a larger trend of student-run businesses at Penn, with other successful examples such as the campus bookstore and the student-run cafe in the Student Union. The cafe's success is seen as a reflection of the growing trend of student entrepreneurship and the importance of supporting student-run businesses on campus.

Overall, Jeudi is seen as a successful example of student entrepreneurship and a valuable addition to the campus community. It is a place where students can come together, enjoy a cup of coffee, and perhaps even learn a thing or two about running a business.

TO THE EDITOR,

Michael Adleu: a sophomore at the University of Pennsylvania, has maintained a 3.5 average in his first two years. With a bachelor's major in American studies, Michael now carries a 3.5 credit average. In his fourth year, he will be obtaining a work-study job at the Hollis Center of the University of Pennsylvania and simultaneously conducting research in the child psychology and the development of young children. In addition to his work, part-time and weekend jobs, Mike earned the 1980 Perry Sinners award of Counselor of the Year. The entire student body unanimously selected Mike as the best of the center on the campus. He is an extremely hard-working student, always willing to put in the necessary time to help any young child in need of his aid.

To the Editor,

IT is my personal conviction that the letter from David L. House in Tuesday's Daily Pennsylvanian regarding the United States Army and its role in Vietnam is an incredibly stupid and poorly thought out diatribe. It is unfortunate that today's army is not what it once was when it was composed of certain social classes; there is no way that this current army is not going to be held accountable for the current actions by the United States military.

Michael Kossow

Ph.D. In History

Another such affront could well be the 1980s version of the United States Army, which is today composed of volunteers from all walks of life, working hard to protect our country and keep our hard-earned freedom.

To the Editor,

I am writing as the acting President of the University of Pennsylvania Students Council. I am writing to express my concern about the recent increase in tuition and fees at the University.

The University has now directed its focus towards the financial well-being of the campus. In response to criticism about the University's financial management, I believe that it is important to recognize the efforts being made to maintain the quality of education at the University.

As a student, I understand the need for higher tuition rates to support the University's financial resources. However, I also recognize the impact these increases may have on student families.

I urge the University to continue to work towards finding a solution that balances the financial needs of the University with the concerns of students and families.

Sincerely,

John Doe

Isaac Bein, ambassador to the United States, described last night the problems of the Middle East and the Palestine question.

Israel Ambassador
Views Mideast Strife

Bein described the Middle East situation as one of war, noting that Israel has encountered many problems.

"The peace with Egypt must be broken," he said.
"It is there to stay. It depends on the Arabs to come to the negotiating table.

There are some countries in the Middle East that do not want peace.
But we are in for a long battle."
Temple Army Policy

The Temple University Student Commission will consider whether Temple University, because it awards the army to recruit, is in violation of the university's nondiscrimination policy and has been discriminating against the army in violation of Temple's nondiscrimination policy.

The commission will go to Temple soon, possibly next month, as one of its first findings. "We're looking into this and will do our best to make a decision," said Goins.

Brown said the commission was an "important step toward ensuring that the university's nondiscrimination policy is upheld throughout the university."

"I feel that we're bringing Temple in line with its own policies and with the city ordinance," he said.

Temple University's Board of Trustees yesterday called for the student commission to study the university's decision to permit the army to recruit mission on campus. "We're looking into this important issue and will consider its importance to the university," the board said.

The university has also filed a complaint against Temple University's decision to permit the army to recruit. "The complaint is against Temple University Counsel Robert Reinstein, who appeared before the Human Relations Commission," said Goins.

Reinstein said, "If the university finds in violation of the ordinance, it will have a far reaching impact." The results of this case will have a far reaching impact, he said.

The Temple university found in the complaint against Temple University Counsel Robert Reinstein, who appeared before the Human Relations Commission. Reinstein said, "If the university finds in violation of the ordinance, it will have a far reaching impact."

"This is not an extreme case nor do we have a far reaching impact," Reinstein said. "The university has traditionally provided an open forum for all organizations, except in extreme cases."

"Whether this is an extreme case or not we have a far reaching impact," Reinstein said.

Brown, president of the university's Student Commission, said, "If an institution is responsible, Temple University is found to be in violation of the ordinance, it will have a far reaching impact."

"The results of this case will have a far reaching impact," he said.

The Temple university has been successful in its position against Temple University Counsel Robert Reinstein, who appeared before the Human Relations Commission. "We're looking into this important issue and will consider its importance to the university," the board said.

Best Advice: Look For A Summer Job In November

It seems early, but as the old saying goes the "early bird gets the worm." Last summer, many college students in the Northeast didn't find summer jobs. It's a "no-fun" situation with a.ing expenses rising rapidly. In the present economic climate it's hard to find summer work. If you don't want to see yourself in that situation next summer then take some action right now. Enjoy your Christmas and Spring Breaks knowing that your summer is secured. These are good paying jobs waiting for you when your exams are over in May.

Looking now isn't so hard. Some recruiters are on campus in the very near future looking for enthusiastic and hard working students. One that comes to mind is a rapidly growing firm named College Pro Painters. They are a unique organization because they hire college students to manage and run painting businesses during the summer.

Wait, before you say I can't paint! or I have no business experience, take note that College Pro Painters train you how to paint and teaches you aspects of how to manage a residential painting business during their training sessions held in February and March.

College Pro was founded in 1971 by college student, Greig Clark. He started part time when he realized that he wasn't going to make enough from his job to go back to school in the fall. He ran a business for three consecutive summers and then trained a number of his friends at college how to run College Pro outlets.

Clark's idea grew quickly and now, 11 years later, College Pro is a very successful business nationally expanding throughout the Northeast by offering professional quality painting at student prices. College Pro is presently the largest residential painting company in North America, employing over 2,300 college students and painting over 13,000 homes in 1982.

Presently, College Pro Painters are recruiting on numerous campuses in search of motivated individuals to fill their management positions. They require a total of 275 students to fill the vacancies in the positions of Outlet Manager and Production Manager.

College Pro Production Managers and train paint and crew foremen, deliver paint and supplies, schedule paint jobs, move crews and equipment, inspect job sites and monitor quality control.

College Pro Marketing Managers implement advertising programs, monitor response, estimate and sell paint jobs, monitor contract production and quality control.

"College Pro Outlet Managers operate a painting business within a defined geographical area. They do the job of both the Marketing Manager and the Production Manager and manage all aspects of the business."

Penn Seeded First Over Cornell, Brown and Loyola

BASKETBALL REPORT
Dennis Reinhard's Slamm dunked his way past a Penn Paulin Official and out of the University of Pennsylvania's Palestra in the run and the cold to grab tickets. The action has been tabled for two days at the Palestra, where the University Volleyball Championship will be played.

The spikers, who are having to add 121 more in the tournament, are second in the Penn and can turn for a Penn title. They have won the tournament in the past, and the tournament is played in the Palestra.

The folklore of volleyball, Cornell and Brown are the only teams that have been part of the tournament, and the Palestra is neary-perfect, at 2-0.

The Cornell and Brown games are expected to be the last to come, and the Palestra is likely to be sold out.
