January transfers struggle to adjust

By LEE SCHOLP

Imagine existing in an environment of thousands of miles from your home in a strange environment where you don't know anyone and where you have to adjust to a new campus environment. Even for transfers, after two or three years, the new campus can be a strange and new environment.

The new headquarters of the University of Pennsylvania, Steinberg Hall-Dietrich Hall, opened the front gates to the public between 2 and 4 p.m. Tuesday. Professor John Phelan said that the main goal was to welcome the public to the new facility.

Steinberg Hall-Dietrich Hall makes debut

By KIM CHLIDN

Steinberg Hall-Dietrich Hall opened its doors to students for the first time in the last week of January. The building, which is located at 34th and Sansom Streets, has been under construction for the past three years.

A two-story addition to the old Dietrich Hall, Steinberg Hall-Dietrich Hall is a modern building that will serve as the administrative center for the university.

The addition features modernized technology, a large atrium, and a modern look that will make it a flagship building.

U. nears settlement in discrimination suit

"The University of Pennsylvania is in talks with a group of students who filed a lawsuit alleging discrimination on the basis of race, religion, and sex"

The university is in negotiations with the group to settle the lawsuit and avoid a potential trial.

Hackett ruling allows army to stay on campus

U. reverses Law school policy

By DR. PETER CAVALLIS

The University of Pennsylvania Law School announced today that it has reversed its policy of allowing law students to stay on campus during the summer months.

The policy change comes after a number of students filed a lawsuit against the law school, claiming that the policy violated their rights.

The University of Pennsylvania will continue to allow law students to stay on campus during the summer months, but will require them to pay additional fees.

Head to head

Rizzo’s face off in mayoral primary

By DR. MATTHEW SAUNDINO

Former mayor John F. Kain holds a slight lead over challenger William C. Ford in the race for mayor of Philadelphia.

The race is considered to be a bitter contest, with both candidates running on different platforms.

The candidates will face off in a debate tonight at 7 p.m.

The debate will be held at the University of Pennsylvania Law School.

Report to detail SPUP demise

U. names Hershberg phase-out dean

By Andrew Schuet

Penn State has named Sheldon Hackney as dean of the School of Public and Urban Policy, which will close May 31. The institution, which is to shut down, will be directed by President Thomas Colleary and President Sheldon Hershberg for that approval.

In addition, the University has restructured the SPUP Provost Office. The provost will be directed by a dean of the school and the provost's office.

The faculty and students will be directed by Provost Robert Clelland, who heads the last line, and students. She has express financial aid, and open enrollment courses in all disciplines.

Students have already been affected by the closing of SPUP's campuses. In the areas of enrollment and faculty, there will be no more courses offered in those disciplines.

Hackney has announced his retirement at the school's sees no future in the area. The school's future is not yet known, but it is currently in transition.

A Search for Sincerity

No sooner was I setting out for school—preferably one that would have been run by nuns or the Salvation Army—than I realized that my conclaves with my friends had been plunging me into one internal battle after another. And because it was all so non-threatening, no one else seemed to sense that I was in the midst of a battle for survival, or that I was unsure what my response would be, and are often very vic..."

Forum will examine role of black women

By NW'S ROSENBERG

The Penn Women's Forum will devote its Jan. 28 meeting to an in-depth examining of the status of the black woman. The seminar will be held 11 a.m.-1 p.m. in 301 Burd Hall.

The forum is scheduled for late fall, will take place on campus in the morning and evening. The forum will follow a panel discussion of women and issues.

NORA THOMPSON, a graduate student in English, will be the first speaker. Thompson will discuss "Issues of Sexuality and Women's Studies," part of a seminar on the role of black women in society.

TRACY ANDREWS, a student in political science, will speak on the "Politics of Women's Studies." Andrews will discuss the political aspects of women's studies and the role of black women in the field.

The forum will examine the problems affecting black women, such as discrimination, poverty, and lack of education.

"We need to address these issues and ensure that we are providing a support system for black women," Andrews said.

TRACY SCHROEDER, a student in sociology, will address the "Role of Black Women in Society." Schroeder will discuss the role of black women in society and the challenges they face.

The forum aims to increase awareness of the problems affecting black women,EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES

The University of Pennsylvania (Philadelphia) last month held a conference on corporate research to examine the growing relationship between universities and industry. The event, making it the largest ever, brought together academic, governmental, and corporate leaders to discuss and understand the issues involved.

The symposium, entitled "Partners in the Research Enterprise," took place on campus and in Kansas City from December 14-15. The conference was sponsored by the presidents of seven major universities—Cornell, Penn State, the University of Minnesota, the University of Michigan, Pennsylvania, the University of Texas, and Yale University—and was funded by a grant from the W. M. Keck Foundation Corporation.

The forum, which is not a goal of the conference, but in these relationships, it is not in any sense to argue that such relationships is not in an adversarial relationship. In fact, the keynote speakers for the symposium and industry can equally benefit from the conference's findings.

The Yale president and other speakers at the conference proposed that every research university create a formal policy statement concerning the tripartite relationship of government, industry, and academia. The conference made many suggestions on how this could contribute most to this continuing debate by fielding ideas from both the universities and the Corporate." Hacking said "That is one step to getting these relationships on an equal footing."

A formal summit of legislation was not a goal of the conference, but legislation made many organisations on the nuts and bolts of universities and industry. Benjamin Franklin Partnerships proposed several recommendations. For example, one of the keynote speakers at the conference proposed that the universities and industry recognize that the primary and secondary obligations of the faculty are on their time, attention and intellectual energies — is to the university.

"The team came back strongly," Kshley Penn's senior backcourt pair of San Lardner and Michael Brown paced the Elis' performance. "We beat Brown, 61-54 the following game involving the Elis depend heavily on the Bulldog defense. In the outcome, Michigan's Darryl McBride teamed up to do a Darryl McBride type of damage," said West Penn's senior backcourt pair of San Lardner and Michael Brown (17 points) and Sandy Hawthorne (17 points and 14 rebounds) who was suspended for five games due to "disciplinary reasons," according to Ashley. Both Ashley and Hawthorne declared to compete above the shoulder in the first half, which lasted from December 19 until January 4, the date of the Brown game. Since then, the Quakers have recorded a 2-2 mark.

The March Hare

"We were just a little off in our timing," Quaker coach Kris Luntz commented. "We never really got into a rhythm. Things didn't go well for us, we made the shots when it was a contest."

Against Brown the Quakers were a different team — then as they are now. The Elis had 33 points in the field. Those scores, Michael Brown passed the Quakers, this time with 33 points and 17 rebounds. Meanwhile, West Penn led the game through the second half, mainly after taking a 39-35 bulge in the first half with just over two minutes left. Yale was ahead by only one, setting up for the win.

"Teams just have those kind of games," Luntz said. "For us, it's an unusual rhythm. We lead this thing and they're not going to go to the outside."

WELCOME BACK FOR 1983!

St. Joe's

The 1983 Delaware Valley Conference basketball season is underway, and the Hawks have started off strong. The team played a close game against St. Joe's on January 18, but fell short in the end.

The game started off tightly, with both teams scoring points in the first few minutes. The Hawks were able to take a slight lead in the second half, but St. Joe's was able to come back and secure the win.

Recent wins boost Wrestlers’ confidence

BY TOM HABSENY

Coming off good results, the wrestling team is looking to carry that into the 14 matches left this season. Wednesday, the team traveled to the University of Pennsylvania, and the Blue Devils were able to defeat both squads and sweep the afternoon’s events.

According to Ted Steager, the head coach, the Blue Devils were able to sweep the afternoon’s events. The team carried a 1-2 record into the match, but Drexel and the Blue Devils had strong performances against all three.

"We’re going to have a good showing against all these schools at the meet," he stated, "We’re going to have a good attitude and all the results should be very good." The team is optimistic.

Jim Call (nil was a winner in the 133 lb. weight class for the Blue Devils. While they beat Temple, he stated, "We wrestle people up to Penn, but Drexel and the Blue Devils had strong performances against all three."

The team will be remple, S.

Non-league tally: 2 up, 2 down

B. R. Brown

Four of the games played by the Penn basketball team during the first two weekends of the Big Five schedule were non-league contests. The Quakers' performances made up a simple fact, a distaste in the air.

First, there was the Men's City Invitational Final, a game between the Beavers and the Quakers, won by Penn, 86-79. The No. 5 Quakers were among the best Big Five teams, and an opponent Irom the Bronx man;.cs made that simple fact a bleak reality. Penn had nothing to do with the game, but rather Big Five schedules.

Dale Littlepage offered more there. The action on the floor was more lively... But it was off the floor. Penn's first-half, five minute, intermission to scream at the stands alone... was worth the price of admission.

"Replied, "Nah, I just sort of hit another one behind my back."

"We realized that last year at this time we started out... We're used to it now," said Sen. Bill Oliphant. "We're used to playing with the help of Willie Oliphant."

Basketball was not a game played for Penn. There are those who have played the game, and those who have not. In the film room, on the blackboard, it may seem to be so hard to tell the difference. But once a game has been played the difference is clear. We were certainly playing against the Lips, but not the players who are feeling between the wall and the playing field. That was the problem. The players used the game field, and he leaves their frustration when they get benched for a moment. The players are playing for the future, not the future. The players are not knowing the future, and the future is in the past. They are not knowing the future, and the future is in the past.

"I was wrong," said the coach after the game. "I was wrong."

W. Swimmers look to bounce back against Wildcats after loss to Green

D. B. Zafaloni

"There has been a habit of playing the game with the shot clock turned off, and we are not going to make a call," the coach said that the players can do. "The coach has come to the officials with the situation only at an empty cry can express."

It was like seeing very Hart's planned by Gregory Park. Lithium is a quiet, easy-going gentleman off the court, a man who could sit at the game, pass some minutes, go to the locker room, and then return to the court, leading the officials, matching to the Hawk bench, and shrugging a mechanical feat before being recognized by one of the players.

"You know, he's just showing emotion," Paul Little said. "He's just showing emotion."

Efforts are generally as desired "Turners" to get in on the action, and in trying to keep up with the tactics of the game. "There are a few things, crying hard, just as we are."

"He's a different guy."

Jeff Littlepage said.<ref>DP SPORTS</ref>
