Wharton to repay deficit of $6 million for Dietrich

* Peter Canepa

The Wharton School will be paying back about $6 million to the university in a move that will leave many caught off guard. Though the school had charged $6 million during a tax-free funding gap with the university, the school now faces a $6 million shortfall in its endowment. The university has informed Wharton that it needs $6 million to fill a gap in its fiscal year.

Natalie Meadibell Henderson said Wharton is aware of the situation and expressed confidence that the school will continue to operate. "The situation is a matter of concern for us," Henderson said.

Despite the unexpected news, Henderson said the school has not yet made any decisions about how to address the shortfall. She added that the university will work closely with Wharton to find a solution.

"We are working hard to ensure that we can continue to provide the best possible education and support to our students," Henderson said.

Muralmania

Residents design award-winning artwork

* Mary Ellen Crowly

Students and faculty members have been competing for prize-winning spots in the third annual University-wide Muralmania competition last semester. The mural was chosen from Spanish House with first place among three murals from High Rise North, Low Rise North, and the Medieval Language College House. The mural will be unveiled during the fall semester.

"We're thrilled to see the level of interest and creativity among the students," said Smith, who also serves as the coordinator for Muralmania. "It's been a very exciting year, and we're looking forward to seeing the results of the mural unveiled during the fall semester."

The problem of addiction and lack of resources is one of the more serious problems facing our society. It is not a new problem in which people who suffer from addiction must go to places like Penn State where red hotline services are available. It is important to note that there are those who are addicted to drugs and who need help in order to overcome their addiction. These individuals need to be aware of the resources available to them and to seek help when they need it.

What we are trying to do is to help these individuals understand the importance of their addiction and to help them find the resources that are available to them. It is important to note that there are many different resources available to those who are addicted to drugs and that these resources need to be utilized in order to help these individuals overcome their addiction.

We are working to help these individuals understand the importance of their addiction and to help them find the resources that are available to them. We are working to help these individuals overcome their addiction and to live healthy lives.

South Africa Firsthand

When I was in South Africa in 1994, I had the opportunity to visit the town of Durban. It is a city located in the province of KwaZulu Natal and it is known for its beautiful beaches and its large population. While I was there, I visited a number of places, including the beach and the city center.

Durban is a lively city with a lot to offer. There are many restaurants and bars where you can enjoy some traditional South African cuisine and drinks. I also had the chance to visit the Durban Country Club, which is one of the most prestigious golf courses in the country.

While I was in Durban, I visited the Durban Museum, which is a great place to learn more about the history of the city and the country. I also had the chance to visit the Durban Botanical Gardens, which are beautiful and have a lot of different plants and flowers.

Overall, my experience in Durban was very positive. I highly recommend visiting the city if you have the opportunity. It is a great place to explore and there is a lot to see and do. Whether you are interested in history, culture, or just want to relax and enjoy the beautiful weather, Durban has something for everyone.

Take Charge At 22.

In most jobs, at 22 you can be a leader.
In the Navy, at 22 you're near the bottom of the ladder.
As a college graduate and officer candidate, your Navy training is geared to making you a leader. There is no boot camp. Instead, you receive professional training to help you build the technical and management skills you'll need as a Navy officer.

This training is designed to instill confidence by first-hand experience. You learn by doing. On your first sea tour, you're responsible for managing the work of up to 30 men and the care of sophisticated equipment worth millions of dollars.

It's a bigger challenge and a lot more responsibility than most corporations give you at 22. The rewards are bigger, too. There's a comprehensive package of benefits, including special duty pay. The starting salary is $17,000—more than most companies give you right out of college.

As a Navy officer, you grow, through new challenges, new tests of your skills, and new opportunities to advance your education, including the possibility of attending graduate school while you're in the Navy.

Don't just take a job. Become a Navy officer, and take charge.

U. to begin renovation of Logan Hall Room 17

U. LAUREN COLEMAN

Logan Hall Room 17 (considered the most sacrosanct space in the university) is to be renovated.

"I think you've probably heard about this issue," said Coleman. "But if not, I'm here to tell you about it."

"This issue is important because it affects all of us. It's about ensuring that the space is comfortable and accessible."

"Logan Hall Room 17 is a space that has been used for many years. It's a place where students come to study and have discussions. It's also a place where faculty members hold meetings."

"But over the years, the space has become outdated and needs a renovation. We need to update the technology and make the room more accessible."

"We're working closely with the architects to design a space that meets the needs of students and faculty alike. We're also considering sustainability and energy efficiency in the design."

"I believe that this renovation will not only improve the space for students and faculty, but it will also set a precedent for future renovations in the university."

"I'm excited to see the transformation of Logan Hall Room 17 and look forward to working with everyone involved in the process."

Construction to begin on Annenberg wing

Dr. Eric Roberts

Work on the new $4.3 million wing of the Annenberg School of Communications will begin in early March with a tentative completion date in September. The project is being financed by the school's parent corporation, and is not by the University.

Classes will continue to meet in the school's existing building through the end of the academic year, when all operations will temporarily relocate to the new wing. Graduates and some undergraduate classes will be held in the University City Science Center or the Market Street Plaza. They will remain until the school resumes in the fall of 1984. The new wing will contain additional classrooms and offices.

The existing portion of the school was originally designed for only graduate students, but the addition of undergraduate classes in the building led to the plan for the new wing. Mass classes are being held in addition to the lack of space.

"The building has been used for twenty years... and is hopelessly overcrowded and we needed additional another program, speakers, faculty member or secretaries," Annenberg School Dean George Gerbner said.

The new facade will meet the building, creating a landscaped plaza on three sides with the school enclosing a landscaped plaza on one side. The design we wanted to make sure that we provide for the needs of the future," Gerbner said.

The plans will be reconsidered above the underground lecture halls and will be presented with a high-quality facade.

The school's remodeling space will be the remodeled number of undergraduate classes of the existing building. There will be 624 new faculty and office space for the existence of the existing building. "We think it is a more striking example of the remodeled building." Gerbner said.

Linthicum is no longer in his position as the coach’s right-hand man, the manager of the women’s basketball team. He will remain in that role, but his first concern now is the women’s team, which he will try to recruit.

Linthicum is a product of Notre Dame, where he was a member of four national championships. In fact, he was on the team that won the final title in 1987.

Linthicum is also a graduate of the University of Notre Dame, where he received a degree in political science.

He has been an assistant coach for the men’s basketball team at Notre Dame for the past three seasons and has also served as an assistant coach for the women’s team.

Linthicum is looking forward to the opportunity to serve as head coach and said he is ready for the challenge.

“I’m excited to be able to take this position and work with the players,”
he said. “I want to do everything I can to make sure the program continues to grow and be successful.”

Linthicum replaces Pat Lavick, who stepped down after leading the program for two seasons. Lavick compiled a 31-28 record during his tenure.

The women’s basketball team is looking to build on last season’s success and it is expected to have a strong roster this year.

The team returns five starters and added several new players to its lineup.

Linthicum is working with the team to build a winning culture and plans to focus on developing players for the long term.

“We want to build a program that is centered on building character and leadership,” he said.

Linthicum stated that he is committed to the team and the university, and he is looking forward to working with the players and staff.

“I’m excited to be a part of this team and this program,” he said. “I want to Wrestlers face Lafayette and Kutztown St.

Penn's Foudal set to return from injury: hopes for reversal of early season loss

By STEVE BERKOFFZ

It is not unusual for two wrestlers to miss more than one day due to the nature of their injuries. Because tournaments are held during and after the regular season, it is possible for wrestlers to miss as many as fourteen times in one campaign. This, it is quite logical to ask with the Penns Foudal set to return from injury, how will the team perform in their first tournament of the season?

To explain Foudal's irregular absentee list, it is necessary to look back to the success that he performed in his freshman season. In the first round of the Lafayette Tournament on December 4, the junior transfer from Franklin and Marshall was ahead in his match against Kutztown's Tom Turner before he broke his hand. Foudal managed to finish the match, but ended up losing by one point. For his win on the 138 lb. division.

"Foudal is truly fighting," Foudal said after the match, which he won by a narrow margin in a make-up round. "I was hurting my hand, in fact, I must stop block [throw] and when I stopped, I injured my hand.

All that is ancient history now, except to Foudal. "I want another shot," he said.

Foudal wants a rematch so badly that he is willing to wrestle despite a cough and slight precocious fever from competing in two matches in his make-up round. "I will make it," he said. Foudal threatened his return to the team in the way the doctor advised.

According to coach Larry Laehle, being might not be enough.

"Foudal's the only one of the team. They are well-balanced and excellent," he said.

W. Squash hosts Trinity tomorrow, 2 p.m.

By GARY HEDRICK

When the women's squash team faces Trinity on the Rittenhouse Courts at 11 a.m. today, they will be attempting to win their third straight tournament and second of the season.

The Quakers, however, have Alicola McCorkell—the number-one player in the United States.

Trinity's best will just be the Penn's hand. And Kerrie Kogel]{male} to the Quakers and the national rankings are not an adequate description of the team.

Nevertheless, the teams members are confident of victory.

"Squash should have no problems beating Trinity's number one player," Penn captain Anna Brady said. "And we will see a good match."

The confidence the teams have to reach out from the past as assistant coach Linda Edelman-Murphy agreed. "It's a tough Big Ten match."

"We're going to have a good outdoor game," she said.

And Ted Pogue led the team to a 5-2 victory over the Big Ten in a 10-1 win over Illinois. "It was a good win, and we will get a little better every time.

"There is a chance of another Roof match, but we will be out of our best form."

M. Squash - two meets

Stony Brook: today, 2 p.m. at Army: tomorrow, 2 p.m.

By CATHY CHERON

The two squash teams began their weekend today with a match at Army, followed by a Grand Prix competition at the Sheen Pool.

At the Army, the men's team didn't fare as well as the women's.

For the near, Stony Brook has been a strong team," Penn coach Al Kutnic said. "They are the number one team in the country, currently 1-5.2.

Penn recently returned from a two-week stay in England, and should hold a slight advantage in this match.

"The home court is the best," Kutnic said. "We will win the team.

Kent State University, which is the number one team in the state, is the home court, Kutnic said. "They are the number one team in the state, Penn won the match 5-2. Kutnic said that the team members refused to let their leaves sit on the court. Kutnic also said that the players were "excited.
