Cheating

What a tangled web we weave when we practice to deceive

By JOANNE KANE

Cheating on a paper. Having a meal in class. Taking a test. Cheating on taxes. Cheating on one's taxes. Not cheating on one's taxes.

Academic cheating is an ancient art with infinite variations, and it can be found in all levels of society. Everyone has great times for cheating it in class, and students are no different in this. But the question is, who are the ones who commit academic dishonesty, and what are the reasons behind it? This article aims to explore these questions.

Students strive for high grades

They find brown-nosing isn't the only way

By Stacie CRAWFORD

To strive or not to strive, that is the question.

And the University is more than a question. It's a serious issue.

The driving force behind this issue is the Code of Academic Integrity, a statement of principles on which the University operates, and which is followed by students and professors.

But for the wise reader, it may be a bit more ambiguous. This means it is not always clear, especially when it comes to personal incidents in your life that had an impact on your grades.

Many codes may range from a minor to a major infraction. But the University has a comprehensive Code of Academic Integrity that covers a wide range of behaviors.

And that's just the beginning of the story.

Despite the seemingly endless possibilities, there are still common mistakes that students make. These mistakes can range from minor to major, and can have serious consequences.

Many problems are serial private and between the student and professor. The professor may be biased, or the student may be fearful of expressing their thoughts. The professor may be on the fence, or the student may be afraid of expressing their thoughts.

Hart said that the definition of a failure is a student's performance in the course. For example, a student who received a failing grade in a course may have failed the course. A failing grade in a course is defined as a grade of F or less.

Some people, like student Edward Behrendt, say they cheat because they don't feel it's a moral issue. Being a student, I believe it is.

Not everyone agrees with this. Some people say that it is not fair to get a higher grade because of something they didn't do. In my opinion, it is unfair to get a higher grade because of something you didn't do. It is unfair to the other students who worked hard to get a better grade.

But some people just don't cheat.

"I never cheat," junior Matthew Adams said. "But I think it's unfair that I have to work harder than someone else.

Other students, like sophomore Robert Townley, say they cheat because they don't feel it's a moral issue. Being a student, I believe it is.

Power Play/Play Power

By Pam Seidenman

In physics, power is defined as work divided by time. Particles deal quite well without it. People, however, don't get along so well without it, apparently; we appear to power hungry—always seem ng more than we have or can handle. But is that really power we want? No. It is the image, the illusion of power. The power itself is secondary, if it is perceived correctly. It is the money, the admiration, and awe we are after, rather than the operation of power itself. And for us, power would better be described as leveraging.

Leveraging is a means to an end. It is a tool which enables you to take maximum advantage of the situation or condition of power. Power leads to action, action leads to results, and results lead to change. Let's take a look at the meaning of power and the way it is perceived.

We could choose to be powerful, but many of us believe we are only supposed to solve problems, but we pretend. And we have become so preoccupied with solving that we have forgotten how powerful we are. So let's be honest. Because looking for the real thing, we struggle endlessly with our perceived problems, our perceived solutions, our perceived deficit, while weighing further on our meaning of power. We want it all as if we were a limited commodity. I don't want to, and it is not easy. People are just like precious jewels to be hoarded and we carefully guard our power, hoarding it, wasting it on action we don't need to undertake— and achieve— but not to reach. Oh my God, where do we do it with our power—if we make it, we should use it to achieve the ability to make it rich, admired, and revered. Sadly, we do it. Not forgetting that the power and its imagery are Indeed, we are, just as much the same as you as the people we receive it from. Power is a question of need, user, or desire. I think it is important to think about, or at least, for us to think about our intentions, or, like a question of need, user, or desire. I think it is important to think about, or at least, for us to think about our intentions, or, for example, power over someone.
Many residents of the West Philadelphia community are pleased, saying West Philadelphia Corporation General Development Director George Brown, head of the program, "is a cross-sectional effort." He said the program's directors are making an effort to ease red tape while still maintaining enough supervision to ensure that assistance gets to those who are need of it.

"All of this is based on good intentions but you still need supervision," said Brown.

Navy Officers Get Responsibility Fast.

Some desk jobs are more exciting than others.

As a Navy pilot or flight officer, your desk can be a sophisticated combination of supersonic jet aircraft and advanced electronic equipment. But you can handle it. Because Navy flight training gives you the navigation, aerodynamics and other technical background, you have to do. In return, Navy aviation demands something of you as an officer: leadership.

Your path to leadership starts with officer training that's among the most demanding in the military. It's intensive leadership and professional schooling combined with rigorous Navy flight training to give you the guts and other qualifications of a career officer, and college graduates for the rank of ensign of the Philadelphia Naval Aviation.

The training is hard but rewarding. One important reward for Navy officers is decision-making authority. In the air, and on the ground, you have management responsibility from the beginning. And your responsibility grows as you gain experience.

No company can give you this kind of leadership responsibility this fast. And nothing beats the sheer excitement of Navy flying. The salary is exciting, too. Right away, you'll earn about $18,300 a year. That's better than the average corporation will pay you just out of college. And with regular Navy promotions and other pay increases, your annual salary will soar to $31,100 after four years. That's on top of a full package of benefits and privileges.

Before you settle down to an earth-bound desk job, reach for the sky. Reach for the stars. Reach for the tuition aid. Reach for the coupon. Find out what it takes to be part of the Naval Aviation Team. You will find that it flies at twice the speed of sound.

Almost 10 percent of these students registered, compared to 7 percent of the freshmen.

Several students and faculty members have raised concerns about the administration's handling of the campaign. Some have accused the administration of being too involved in the campaign, while others have criticized the administration for not giving enough support.

"This is a great way to get students' attention focused and involved," Hughes said. "We can use some momentum going we can really make a difference."

Students simulate corporate life in Wharton management game

By Shirley Driessen

Weekly simulations of the marketing, finance and operations functions of the fictional Bass Club in the Wharton Game, sponsored by the Decision Sciences Club.

The competition tries to mirror the forces behind the real market of some unanswerable industries. As a result, the Bass Club decides whether to market a product in the North or South. When it is chosen to market in the North, there is a larger market for the product in the South, said Walter senior Tom Tansote, who is manager of the game, said, "I've always wanted to see how I could apply what I'm learning in my coursework to a real life situation.""The simulation provides a group of five fictional companies to be managed, Tansote said. "It's practice for the real world!".

Four groups of ten all players organized themselves into groups which compete against one another, Tansote said. Each firm meets weekly to make 30 decisions regarding their company's future activity in marketing, operations or finance.

Man arrested in attempted theft

By DEB ZEIT

Philadelphia Police arrested a man early this morning after he allegedly stabbed a man in a parking lot.

A 19-year-old male, who lives on the north side of the city, was stabbed in the stomach shortly after 12:30 a.m., when he was working in a nearby convenience store.

"I was looking down and saw a black male, about 6 feet 6 inches, wearing a hat and a tan coat," he said after he was attacked. "I asked him to leave, but he wouldn't." The man then pulled out a knife and slashed the victim's stomach.

The victim was taken to the hospital and is expected to survive.

Zenn said he was outside the store, working a fryer, when he saw the attack.

"I came out and saw him walking away," Zenn said. "I told him to stop, but he wouldn't." He then pulled out a knife and stabbed the victim in the stomach.

The suspect, who is also 19 years old, was taken into custody.

Dancer Arthur Hall to lead class today

By NANCY WASON

Arthur Hall, a renowned dancer, will lead a class at the University of Pennsylvania today.

Hall, who is known for his unique style and technical ability, will teach a modern and the Katherine Dunham technique.

"I am excited to be able to share my knowledge and passion with the students," Hall said. "This is a unique opportunity for them to learn from a master dancer like myself."

Hall's class will be followed by a performance by the Katherine Dunham Ensemble.

The ensemble's managing director, Lahla Hall, said last week that the ensemble is responsible for developing a black-oriented technique.

"We are committed to preserving and promoting this important characteristic of African dance with modern dance methods," Lahla said.

"This is a unique opportunity to teach a master class, which concentrates on a specific style and technique of dance," Gerstenhaber said.

"We are proud to have Arthur Hall lead this class," Gerstenhaber said. "His expertise and passion will no doubt inspire the students."
I'm ready for living well. Will you wait for me? I wish it were possible for me to be with you everywhere I go. I believe that you are here somewhere when I am not. I know you are always somewhere with me. I feel your presence in my life. I am thankful for your love and support. I wish I could be with you always. I love you. I love you.
Penn Weekend

...it is the last meet before the Quakers take off to the Ivy Championship, next weekend.

"This is our last chance to work out the kinks before the final," Connolly said. "We'll be able to see how we're holding up, and hopefully I'll be able to get more in shape." She added that the team will be "very, very excited" for the meet, not that the "Things don't look too good. That's about as close to the truth as we're going to get," said Assistant Brain Coach Tim公共交通 McIntyre. The Quakers have been beaten three times this season, including a 3-1 loss to Cornell earlier this month. "I don't see how we're going to make much difference."

...Tommy is making his third appearance against Princeton in the past two years. The Quakers won both previous meetings, but he said that he was not too optimistic about the chances of victory this time. "With these young kids carrying the load, we just don't have enough experienced runners to compete in this high heat."

After losing their last two meets to Navy, the Penn men's track team faces another difficult obstacle tomorrow in a dual meet against Princeton. Last weekend, the Quakers turned in some fine performances, but the Midshipmen could put up a strong challenge. "We're not expecting much," said Coach Joe Connolly. "If we can do our best and perform well, I'm sure we can get some good things against quality competition."

The Quakers have always performed well in the tough meets and should respond to Princeton with the kind of team that Connolly and Pizza are looking for. "We're more than optimistic. 'We're ready for some really good performances."

After the last two weekends, during which the Penn wrestling team faced two difficult opponents, it was a pleasant surprise for the team to win the dual meet against the Yale Bulldogs to this "the weekend should be easier than most this year."

The question is, whether the Quakers want another upset."

Howe Cup is challenge for W. Squash

PENN loses to Yale in league match, prepares for 'Super Bowl' of squash

By TOM HARRETT

It almost looked like a Howe Cup type of meet, one tournament, one set, one competition that every college squa-shad on his plate and at stake. And while an exciting one is on tap, it looks like the matches will be the teresting part. The Howe Cup is the national champions-ship of squash, and it is being held this weekend at the Yale arena. The most interesting part will be the matches themselves.

The matches themselves will simply qualify for the tournament in an achievement, but for Penn it is a non-

PENN sells not a serious problem (qualification) as it is to avoid the admirability of the Quakers. They are one of the top teams in the Ivy League, and one of the top teams in the nation, and the competition for the right to be.

Penn isn't the top seed and in the men's tournament, but they will be the top seed in the women's tournament. As

Quaker coach Andy Weil believes, qualifying for the top seed for her team will be the performance of the lower-seeded teams in the women's division.

Karin Solomon says, "We need excellent performances from the lower seed teams to qualify for the top seed in the women's division.

Twenty-four teams will compete for four-seed status. Penn is in the top seed grouping of Yale, Emory, and Harvard. The Quakers' opponents will be Yale, Emory, and Harvard. The winners of the women's group move on to the second round, while the runners-up are eliminated. The Quakers' first opponents are Emory Bulldogs. The lowest opposing team is Harvard. The winning team of the Emory

Quakers' second round will be Harvard. The winning team of the women's league championship is at stake in the match tomorrow.

Last year, the Quakers finished second in the Howe Cup.
