Hackney fly to Puerto Rico today to meet with alumni

President Valerio M. Hackney and several lop administrators will travel to Puerto Rico in honoring Anna Culpepper, a former alumni relations staff member. The trip is to try to bring the recent graduates and their families back to campus to renew a commitment to their alma mater, Hackney said.

"We're going to try to bring the recent graduates back to campus and get them interested in the campus again," he said.

Hackney said the administrators are to meet with faculty and students to discuss the recent graduates and their families. He said the trip is to try to bring the recent graduates back to campus and encourage them to stay involved with the university.

First it was the slide rule. Then it was the personal computer. Now it's a marvel of technology: the personal computer.

While the slide rule was once a necessity for students, it is now a thing of the past. The personal computer, however, is here to stay and will continue to be an important part of the classroom.

"The slide rule was used for calculations before the personal computer came along," said one professor. "Now, with the personal computer, students can perform complex calculations with ease."

"It is not worth it," he said. "The students are not going to be able to attend the conference, and we are going to be left with the work of our members,many of whom are in other parts of the world."

SHEILA WEINBERG, a representative of Byte, said she was disappointed that the conference was going to be held in London and not in Philadelphia. She added, "We are sets lucks that we were able to accomplish so much."

The New Cafe: An Improvement?

The South Africans Reply

Letters to the Editor

The South Africans reply to the December 9 feature "The New Cafe: An Improvement?" in the Campus Chronicle. The Editor's response was titled "The New Cafe: An Improvement?" in the February 9 issue. The article in the Campus Chronicle is a critique of the new cafe in South Africa. The Editor's response acknowledges the issues raised in the original article and offers a counterpoint. The South Africans argue that the new cafe is not an improvement and that it perpetuates racial segregation and inequality.

Een Mittlebergei, chairman of the American Medical Student Association, said yesterday that a recent survey indicated that three-fourths of all medical students in the United States would be interested in a university environment in El Salvador as an investigation of medical care and human rights in a speech at the Medical Education Group.

More than 70 people attended the speaking event at the Medical Education Group, which is a non-profit organization that promotes medical care and human rights in El Salvador.

Mittlebergei is currently employed by the medical school in El Salvador to research and analyze the human rights situation in the country.

He found that the human rights situation in El Salvador is worse than previously thought, with over 1.5 million people arbitrarily detained or disappeared. He also noted that over 10,000 people have been tortured, imprisoned, killed by the military and political forces.

"This commission, in cooperation with the government of El Salvador, has visited 80 percent of the people who are represented by a small percentage of the population," Mittlebergei said. "We have interviewed families of the disappeared and torturists, and we have talked about violations of human rights and the political situation in El Salvador."

SCUE petitions for extra reading day

By MEI LEBAD

The Student Council on Undergraduate Education is petitioning the University to schedule an extra reading day, before the end of the spring semester (April 12), instead of before the end of the fall semester (October 23).

The additional drop/add day is scheduled to occur the day before the beginning of classes. SCUE's action comes two days before next year's University calendar will be released to the Student Council by the President of the University.

The University's proposed calendar calls for a five-day window to change class schedules prior to the start of classes on September 4. At some earlier day, students would have only one reading day before the classes start.

The extra drop/add window would allow students to make changes two days after the class begins.

Mr. Mittlebergei was an official representative of the University of Pennsylvania in the estrangement of El Salvador, and is now serving with the World Health Organization.

"We found that the additional reading day is more important than any other day in the semester," he said. "By the time the drop/add day is over, the student is already thinking about the extra break, only $15, and a three-day World Passport — allowing admission to Epcot Center and the Magic Kingdom — is just $35."

A single-day admission to this unique center of wonder and excitement is only $15, and a three-day World Passport — allowing admission to Epcot Center and the Magic Kingdom — is just $35. This year make your visit to Florida more than a break away. Make it a break away from the world of today. And an adventure into the dreams of tomorrow.

La Salle comeback fails against Dayton

Dr. BOB STEIN

It has been said over and over again how this year's La Salle team has been surprising. It has been a surprise to many people, including the players and coaches. However, the team has been able to stay focused and have a good season so far. The team has not been able to win every game, but they have been able to compete with some of the best teams in the country.

That being said, the team was unable to come back from a 14-point deficit in the second half against Dayton. The team was down 64-50 with just over five minutes to play, but they were able to score 12 points in the next 2:14.

"We were able to make some key shots during that time," said La Salle coach

Bill Spivey. "We were able to keep the pressure on and not let the game get away from us. We were able to get some easy baskets and make some free throws." The team was able to cut the lead to 70-66, but they were unable to score enough points to come back into the game.

"We were able to score some baskets, but we were not able to make some key free throws," said Dayton coach Don Donohe. "We were able to get some defensive stops and keep the game close. We were able to make some free throw attempts to keep the game tight." The team was able to hold off the La Salle comeback and win the game 72-66.

Dayton was led by a strong performance from guard Merv Turner, who scored 21 points. La Salle was led by forward Ronny Lucas, who scored 18 points. The team was able to hold off the La Salle comeback and win the game 72-66.

W. Squash finishes fourth in Howe Cup

B. TOM HAENELT

The women’s squash team has been as a competitive side to the winter season. The Quakers are among the top teams in the country, and have earned a spot in the NCAA championships with one. But against Ivy opponents Yale, Harvard and Princeton, they have struggled.

The Howe Cup, which was held at Yale last weekend, developed into a mini-Crimson of Praries. When the Howe Cup is the most prestigious intercollegiate tournament in the East, and the team was hoping to improve on its sixth-place finish from two years ago.

And it did it just that, taking forth place in the tournament with a pair of championship performances from Mike McDowell and Karen Kehoe. The dynamic duo of women’s squash swept through another tournament without losing a match. The move was too much for Yale in particular, however, as their experience made the difference in the match.

Following the Howe match, Peter told Harvard, and the match proved to be the real heartbreaker for the Quakers. Mike McDowell and Karen Kehoe won their matches, a feat which was not expected, according to Peter. The victory was the first for the Quakers in the Howe Cup since 1972.

The team was not only happy with victory, but something of a match-up of the teams the two teams played Friday night in New Haven, the Quakers fell 5-2. Once again, Mike McDowell and Karen Kehoe were the stars of the team. McDowell was too much for Yale’s Sarah Spurds, as was the case in the Howe Cup. Kehoe had a solid victory over Yale’s Kathy Lamont, while Ann Weitzel and Sarah Spurds won matches against Yale’s Beverly Remo and Linda Battle.

At the end of the 15 matches, the Quakers took the Howe Cup for the first time since 1972. The victory indicated the team was performing at a high level for the season, and was a boost for the team’s morale.

ANY WEITZEL

Passed with honor

Squash won her match 15-4, 15-8, 15-2. Weitzel utilized a similar strategy in the match, carrying eight players and alternating Spurds and Cindy Grant in the seventh set.

The move was not only about winning, but something of a match-up of the teams. The Quakers were too much for Yale in particular, however, as their experience made the difference in the match.

DaM Squash shut out 9-0 by top-ranked Harvard

B. GARY EDELSTEIN

Harvard squash women’s team had an uneventful weekend as they defeated Saturday night as number one team in the country.

And a performance that was even more impressive was there in the Harvard match. The team dropped 9-0 last weekend, which had a greater effect on the tournament than the team fell to the University of Pennsylvania. The team was not only happy with victory, but something of a match-up of the teams.

The Harvard squad is one of the best in the country, and was defeated by the Quakers in the Howe Cup.

“First team is the best team,” Harvard coach Al Miller said. “They are the best team we have ever faced.”

In the Harvard match, Harvard’s Ward Melville High School in the 100-yard freestyle, Rene Olsen’s in the 100-yard backstroke, and Chuck Hacker’s personal best on the 1 mile meet to Harvard.

“When I saw up and down,” Hacker said, “I couldn’t judge the results. It was a very good race, but we got behind and it became a closer race.”

Hacker told the story of the upcoming race, the race before the match. A- -enioi CO

His personal best on the 1 mile meet was a second place finish in the country. But because he is a junior, he may not run.

“We were a little bit slow,” Hacker said. “I couldn’t judge the results.”

The performance of Hacker was a sign of the team’s potential. It took away some of the sting of the team. Hacker added, “I couldn’t judge the results.”

“He was very consistent in the meet, carrying eight players and alternating Spurds and Cindy Grant in the seventh set.
