Universities nationwide debate Army recruiting

By DAVID GOODHARDT

The University of Wisconsin-Madison, which has beenJimmy Carter's home for the past two years, is the second largest university in the country. However, approximately 300 students at the University of Wisconsin-Madison have been arrested for the past two years for drafting policy changes that would allow them to participate in the Army's draft. These students have been arrested on charges of inciting a riot and making a false statement.

The University of Wisconsin-Madison is located in Madison, Wisconsin, and is one of the largest universities in the United States. The university has a student body of approximately 27,000, and offers a wide range of undergraduate and graduate programs in various fields of study. The university has a strong emphasis on research, and is home to several national research centers and institutes. The university is also known for its strong athletic programs, particularly in football and basketball.

The university has a long history of conflict with the government, particularly in the 1960s and 1970s, when it was a focal point for anti-war and civil rights protests. The university has also been involved in a number of legal battles over issues such as free speech and academic freedom.

The university is currently led by President Ray Cross, who took office in 2012. Under Cross's leadership, the university has focused on improving its financial stability and increasing its national profile. The university has also been involved in a number of high-profile research projects, including the development of new treatments for cancer and other diseases.

The university is an important institution in the Madison area, and is home to a number of cultural and educational institutions, including the Wisconsin Institute for Discovery, the Wisconsin Center for Novel Therapeutics, and the Wisconsin Film Festival. The university is also home to the University of Wisconsin-Madison School of Journalism and Mass Communication, which is one of the top journalism schools in the country.

The university has a strong commitment to diversity and inclusion, and is home to a number of programs and initiatives aimed at promoting equity and accessibility for all students. The university is also known for its strong sense of community, with a student body that is diverse in terms of race, ethnicity, gender, and sexual orientation. The university has a strong alumni network, with more than 250,000 alumni around the world.
Campus Events

STOUFFER COLLEGE HOUSE announces a vacancy for a RESIDENT FELLOWSHIP

Faculty fellows are responsible to the Master for promoting the integration of academic and residential life, counseling and advising students, and to counsel and to counsel to students. Stouffer College House, with an undergraduate population of 130 students, offers a wide range of stimulating environment and pleasant living conditions. A two-bedroom apartment, and four rooms per week during the academic year, are provided. Write or call Professor Betsy Erikska, Faculty Fellow.

Law Students seek alumni: support

The graduate group plans to contact specific alumni groups, such as the Law School Alumni, and request that they support current Law School students bearing the cost of recruiting from other schools.

The group is interested in contacting alumni groups, such as the Law School Alumni, and request that they support current Law School students bearing the cost of recruiting from other schools.

The group is interested in contacting alumni groups, such as the Law School Alumni, and request that they support current Law School students bearing the cost of recruiting from other schools.

The group is interested in contacting alumni groups, such as the Law School Alumni, and request that they support current Law School students bearing the cost of recruiting from other schools.

The group is interested in contacting alumni groups, such as the Law School Alumni, and request that they support current Law School students bearing the cost of recruiting from other schools.

The group is interested in contacting alumni groups, such as the Law School Alumni, and request that they support current Law School students bearing the cost of recruiting from other schools.

The group is interested in contacting alumni groups, such as the Law School Alumni, and request that they support current Law School students bearing the cost of recruiting from other schools.

The group is interested in contacting alumni groups, such as the Law School Alumni, and request that they support current Law School students bearing the cost of recruiting from other schools.

The group is interested in contacting alumni groups, such as the Law School Alumni, and request that they support current Law School students bearing the cost of recruiting from other schools.
City seeks to become high technology center

By CAROL APPELING
West Philadelphia schools and educators are putting their resources and effort to make the area the city’s high technology center. With the University City Science Center attracting high technology businesses, the need for computer literacy is evident.

"The single most important thing that Philadelphia could do is to create a computer literate population," said Theodore Hamorns, the science director of the University City Science Center.

"There is, of course, the sad realization that 40 percent of the adult population in the city is illiterate - in the reading and writing sense," he added.

Several computer literacy programs are already underway. The University City Science Center’s Science Education Research Program is working with local ministry programs to teach computer skills to local ministry members.

Science Center science research associate George Brown said his Center plans to build a computer education development institute. Teachers who are computer literate will bring skills with them into their classrooms.

"There are two components," he said. "One involves the computer literate in high technology and another involves the community who wants to learn computer literacy.

Then there is summer apprenticeships with private industries to help the students.

"Ithere are two components," he said. "One involves the computer literate in high technology and another involves the community who wants to learn computer literacy.

"We have workshops for computer science. There are students like duck - to water - computers, which are more versatile than machines to get over," Baker said.

"Because the best teachers are not in factories, but in the schools, there is a need to try to put the background to touch of computers," he said. "We, of course, think that the future is in this."

Cohen said the Franklin Institute program will research and provide creative ways to teach computer literacy.

"Local children as young as three have been reading and writing at the Franklin Early Learning Center with the help of computers called "talking typewriters."

George Brown said his Center plans to build a computer education development institute. Teachers who are computer literate will bring skills with them into their classrooms.

"The school system is not independent," he said. "Communities are concerned with programs that are being established to deal with the high technology sector that is developing."

"There is also concern for the community," he continued. "There is a need for computer professionals interested in getting training in the area."

"People and interested in West Philadelphia because of its walkability," he said. "There is diversity in walkability for the future of this community."
The Motto and the Law

To the Editor:

I would like to comment on the issue of the motto "Pro Rege et Lege". I would like to request that the administration consider changing the motto to "Pro Rege et Legem".

I think it is important to emphasize the importance of the law in our society. The motto "Pro Rege et Lege" has been used for many years and it is time for a change.

Sincerely,

[Name]

Residential Update

To the Editor:

I am writing to express my interest in the upcoming residential lottery. I am a first-year student at Penn and I am excited about the possibility of participating in the lottery.

I would like to discuss some potential changes that I believe could improve the lottery system. First, I think it is important to consider the needs of all students, including those with special circumstances.

Sincerely,

[Name]

A Success!

To the Editor:

I am writing to express my gratitude for the success of our recent fundraising event. The turnout was excellent and the community showed their support once again.

I would like to thank all of the volunteers who worked tirelessly to make this event a success.

Sincerely,

[Name]
Name That Tune

PUC to host music trivia contest

By DAVID THOMAS

From the Isky Brothers to the Thompson Twins, there are thousands of songs that resonate around the radio, and an afternoon and ice who can guess the answer first will be able to see the knowledge in their face. The contest is being sponsored by the Penn Union Council.

But unlike television versions, there will be a host to give the questions. Four members—each with the best knowledge of four popular songs—will be asked to pick a song whose theme is true to everyday life.

Preliminary rounds will be held around the campus at 5:30 p.m. March 8 in the Bodek Lounge of Houston Hall, March 9 in the Chestnut House and March 10 in Killing Hall. The final rounds will be held on March 11 in the Bodek Lounge of Business Hall. All rounds of these televised events are open to the public.

"We're getting approximately 300-400 albums from people in the campus, neighbors, friends—anyone can get our hands on," PUC Entertainment and Game Council President George Colla said.

Miller said Sunday that the officers attempted to remain as thorough as possible.

University Police Sergeant James Connolly said last night that an unidentified person called police to report a bomb in the 1920 Dining Commons, "he said, "but there was nothing in the area.

Police said that both officers, a female, said only, "I think like so, male unidentified person called police at 6:31 p.m.

Jenny Sanders said last night declined to comment on the event.

Some teams will go into the competition for fun, others for the prizes. "I hope the Stumpmasters are in it," said Colla.

"We've tried to come up with a format that everyone will enjoy, but that will still be competitive," he said.

Wharton sophomore Steve Pieper, who runs the music at the kitchen in which the incident occurred, said last night, "I can tell you, the policemen, but I didn't know what it was all about.

"I don't know what it was all about," he said.

Philadelphia and University Police officers are on the job that caused police carefully inspected the building before determination was known.

"It's all we'll say," he said.

The building was examined by University Police officers.

It appears that in their search the officers attempted to remove or prevent any possibility in the building.

Boston University School of Management

Master of Science in Management Information Systems

Beginning in September, Boston University's School of Management is introducing a new graduate degree program, the Master of Science in Management Information Systems. This program, which is intended for those with management degrees, offers outstanding preparation for careers in the rapidly growing field of management information systems.

A representative from the School of Management will hold an information session to describe the program in detail and to answer your questions. It will be held Monday, February 28.

The Chestnut

38th & Chestnut
Philadelphia, PA.

Tuesday, No Cover Charge

* Except Special Shows

Senior Class Board
Invites All Seniors To
A Basketball Bash
After The Game

Wed., Feb. 23
The Fabulous Greaseband
* 50's & 60's Rock & Roll
Review

Tues., Feb. 22
FREEPORT
w/Orchestra Siembra

Coming March 2
Ko Ko Taylor
March 8
Tower Of Power

Proper dress & id Required
Disney show to feature U. talent

The Disney Channel, a new cable television service, will hold auditions tomorrow in Houston Hall to acquire new talent from colleges across the country.

"Disney is a very democratic experience," said Disneyland producer Don Hahn. "We're looking for that spark of creativity in the people we choose to work with."

The new Disney Channel will begin broadcasting April 1 to 1.3 million homes in the United States.

Individual acts chosen for the show will receive $600, while group acts will earn $800. The audition is limited to vocalists and instrumentalists who are also members of a college or university performing group. There will also be a family category which includes both vocalists and instrumentalists.

The show will be taped Friday at the Bobbi Lounge in Houston Hall. Ron French, the special assistant to the director of communications, said yesterday that an associate producer visited the University to select a location to film the show.

The show, which is being produced by Lankin Productions, will present a full-length special on June 19, 1984, as well as the colloquial acceptance of the show as a whole.

The new Disney Channel will begin broadcasting April 1 to 1.3 million homes in the United States.

"Valuable music, movie, gospel," said Don Hahn. "I'm a music fan, but I also like the educational aspect of the show."

Disney is a very democratic experience," said Disneyland producer Don Hahn. "We're looking for that spark of creativity in the people we choose to work with."

The new Disney Channel will begin broadcasting April 1 to 1.3 million homes in the United States.

Individual acts chosen for the show will receive $600, while group acts will earn $800. The audition is limited to vocalists and instrumentalists who are also members of a college or university performing group. There will also be a family category which includes both vocalists and instrumentalists.

The show will be taped Friday at the Bobbi Lounge in Houston Hall. Ron French, the special assistant to the director of communications, said yesterday that an associate producer visited the University to select a location to film the show.

The show, which is being produced by Lankin Productions, will present a full-length special on June 19, 1984, as well as the colloquial acceptance of the show as a whole.
JSR TOBELLA

"It seemed a serious threat to the war program to continue to bury the fact that the Army had released the material," a New York Times editorial said.

"I wish the Administration would recognize that the press is an important part of our military strategy," said Lt. Col. John Mixon of the Army's public relations office.

"In a democracy, the press should act as a watchdog, investigating the policies and practices of the government," the speaker said.

"The freedom of the press is a basic right in any country," he added.

Dqra Goren, a visiting professor at the University of Southern California, is in Israel to give lectures on the role of the Israeli press and on the status of women in Israeli society.

"In the early years of Israel's independence, Goren said, the press was used to enforce "law and order.""

"We have to look at the Israeli press now as a watchdog," she said.

"In the past, the press was used to support the government," she added. "But today, we have to look at the press as a check on the government."
Religion and Sexual Ethics

Tuesday, February 22 at 7 pm

Rabbi Michael Kaplowitz (Hillel)

SCingfi IHouae

Human Sexuality Series

& at the Box Office

with

Duncan Lounge

Theatre Tickets $3.50

Come to the free WIND ENSEMBLE CONCERT

music of Stravinsky & Fauchet

Wednesday, February 23 8:00 PM

Houston Hall Bodek Lounge

Puck Frinceton
Powerful Crimson beat M. Swimmers in final dual meet

In final dual meet, Harvard's Paul Gilbert, "the best leachman has in the pool," is upsetting the powerhouse Quakers in the East, both in the swimming and the diving meets, according to Harvard coach Kathy Lazor. Gilbert, who scored all seven "a"s in the diving meet, and placed first in the 200-yard freestyle, called by Penn assistant coach Randy Donee, "The general productivity of the season this year is much better than the previous years," Gilbert explained. "But the turning point in the season for us was the Saturday contest against Penn. The team was much more confident then, and the outcome of the meet was expected."

Quakers, who scored all seven "a"s in the diving meet, snared entrance to the NCAA championships, a first in Harvard history, and swept the diving meet. Harvard, called by Penn assistant coach Kathy Lazor, "We are a tough team," but was disappointed that "sweeping back to back meetings is a challenge."

The general productivity of the season has increased and I think the team is improved."

The Harvard men's team is faring well in the Eastern Championships. In early March, several Quakers took advantage of the opportunity to qualify for the Eastern Championships. However, Paul Gilbert, the best leachman has in the pool," is upsetting the powerhouse Quakers in the East, both in the swimming and the diving meets, according to Harvard coach Kathy Lazor. Gilbert, who scored all seven "a"s in the diving meet, and placed first in the 200-yard freestyle, called by Penn assistant coach Randy Donee, "The general productivity of the season this year is much better than the previous years," Gilbert explained. "But the turning point in the season for us was the Saturday contest against Penn. The team was much more confident then, and the outcome of the meet was expected."

Quakers, who scored all seven "a"s in the diving meet, snared entrance to the NCAA championships, a first in Harvard history, and swept the diving meet. Harvard, called by Penn assistant coach Kathy Lazor, "We are a tough team," but was disappointed that "sweeping back to back meetings is a challenge."

The general productivity of the season has increased and I think the team is improved."

The Harvard men's team is faring well in the Eastern Championships. In early March, several Quakers took advantage of the opportunity to qualify for the Eastern Championships.
Dave Zalzone

Showtime at the Spectrum

DP SPORTS

Tuesday, February 22, 1983

Penn vs. Princeton in Ivy main event

B. JOHN DELLAFINA

At 8 p.m., the main event: the Princeton-Carnegie field hockey game. It is for all intents and purposes, a little field hockey world series. The two teams meet twice in Ivy league championships. Princeton is primed by coach Dick Curnell and the Quakers by coach John Pitney. The winner will be the Ivy League champion.

Free bus service tonight

The Athletic Department and Undergraduate Assembly have arranged for free bus service to take fans from the debriefing tent at Franklin Field to the Spectrum. Buses will run from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. (426-3170 and 520-W). Students must present that portion of their ticket to the bus driver, and a bus pass will be good for the Spectrum parking lot, in the case of those attending the match. Buses will depart from the baseball stadium after the game, and will depart from the debriefing tent at Franklin Field after the game.

Delaware Invite serves its purpose for track teams

Women ready for Ivies

B. MIKE BENVENUTI

At the rainy weather for this weekend's Ivy League championships, Sunday's Delaware invitational in Rehoboth may have served it's purpose better than the tempestuous weather of the evening. Only one team, the Quakers, had a satisfying day.

Penn's Paul Little scored the ball against Brown last Friday. Tonight, the Quakers face Princeton at the Spectrum

B. MARC ASHLEY

Penn, Princeton and Dartmouth all moved within two points of the Ivy League championship, making the evening races even more competitive.

Wrestling team defeated by Tigers, E. Stroudsburg

B. JOE SPADANO

Last week, members of the Penn wrestling team dominated their opponents. This week, they suffered a stinging defeat at the hands of
E. Stroudsburg.

Many more qualifications for IC4A's

More men qualify for IC4A's

Penn's Gary Gingerich in action against Princeton last weekend

DP Stuart Dickstein