Tours, parties productive for prospective freshmen.

By WILLIAM MULLINS

The University has accepted 4491 students to the Class of 1982, and many of these freshmen are just beginning to arrive on campus.

The Admissions Office afternoon calls the period from July 1 to August 31 a "high-intensity" time for the office.

"The day stretches from 9 a.m. to 11 p.m. five days a week," said Admissions Director Jane Cameron.

"Our chief concern is that people have a good time during their visit. We want them to have a chance to see the University as a whole."

The University admitted 4491 students to the Class of 1982. This is the highest number of students ever admitted to the University.

"We're very pleased with the result," Cameron said. "We've been able to attract a diverse group of students."
RULES GOVERNING FINAL EXAMINATIONS

1) No student may be required to take more than two final examinations on any one day during the period in which final examinations are scheduled.

2) No instructor may hold a final examination except during official examination periods. The period for final examinations is 1) the last three full days of the term or 2) four full days immediately following the last day of instruction.

3) No instructor may hold a final examination on any one day during the period in which final examinations are scheduled.

4) No instructor may change the time or date of a final examination without the approval of the dean of the student's college or the vice-president of the university.

5) No instructor may increase the time allowed for a final examination beyond the time allowed for a final examination for the student's college or the vice-president.

6) No classes (covering new material) may be held during the period of final examinations. Review sessions may be held.

7) All students must be allowed to see their final examination. Access to graded final examinations should be ensured for at least one period after the examination has been given.

We encourage professors to be as flexible as possible in accommodating students with conflicting examination schedules.

Sleep: Everyone needs it, but few get enough

By DAVID ZAPP

Although the diverse pleasures of the summer season are enjoyed by all, even the busiest of schedules can't help but wear on everyone. Everyone seems to cherish it, but many members of the community don't get enough of it.

Mired in the swamp of responsibilities and obligations which are part of college life, students are finding it difficult — especially in the time of year — to get the sleep needed which they feel they require. Part of college life, (Indentions are fin-

Youths escape break-in at U. building

University Police are searching for two unidentified men after they attempted to burglarize a campus building last night.

University Police Sergeant James Connolly said last night that at approximately 9 p.m. Saturday a Physical Plant employee observed a large black van in the parking lot of the Physical Plant, which houses the offices of the Dairy Plant Department.

Connolly said the employee began to question the youth, who then dropped and laid on the hood of the van, which contained dental equipment, and fled toward the rear of the building.

According to Connolly, the employee also reported seeing two other men in the van, but they fled the scene before police arrived.

Police said they found a small amount of marijuana in the rear of the building, which was later seized and destroyed.

Connolly said the building was not occupied last night, and that the investigation is continuing.

On April 24, 1915, began the first Genocide of this century. Within three years the Ottoman Turkish Government had massacred 1.5 million Armenians, and had forced more than another million into exile.

For the 68 years since, the Turkish Government has refused to accept any responsibility for the atrocities they perpetrated against the Armenian people.

We, the survivors of the Genocide, can never forget this ignoble crime against humanity.

Armenians worldwide demand that the Turkish Government acknowledge its responsibility for the Genocide...

This is not much to ask for, in deference to the irremediable human tragedy they have caused an entire nation to endure.

“I have given orders to my Death Units to exterminate without mercy or pity men, women and children belonging to the Polish race.... After all, who remembers today the extermination of the Armenians?”

Lttw. Crew nipped by Tigers; Hvws. strong in ton to Yale

BY AARON LEVINE

"Lttw. were a lot more ready," said Penn's Harold Hellman. "They knew we were coming, they would have had to win tough waters. At one point, Penn caused another, but we couldn't beat them. We couldn't lose against the top-ranked Tigers. As it turned out, however, we proved to be more of a threat than they expected.

Penn's freshman boat had capsized in the Schuylkill River, leaving the crew with a fight on their hands. The crew had to battle against the odds to make it to the finish line. It was a tough and long journey, but they managed to pull through.

As Hellman said, "We're going to come back, we're not giving up." Penn's determination paid off in the end.

"Four seconds," sophomore Adam Nash added. "Our freshman crew can't overcome in a few weeks. It's going to be a tough one to lose. This is going to be a tough one to win and a tough one to lose. We're going to come back, we're not giving up." Penn's determination paid off in the end.

The next day, there was a strong current, which made it even more difficult. At one point, Penn was close to winning, but then the currents turned against them. The crew had to fight against the odds to make it to the finish line. It was a tough and long journey, but they managed to pull through.

"All the crews had to battle against the odds to make it to the finish line. It was a tough and long journey, but they managed to pull through," Corbett said.

"If we win the Henley Regatta, we'll have good words to say about Penn," Hellman added.

Penn's win in the 100-meter dash was a close one. The swimmers had to push themselves to the limit, but in the end, they managed to win. It was a tough and long journey, but they managed to pull through.

All the swimmers had to work hard to win the race. They had to push themselves to the limit, but in the end, they managed to win. It was a tough and long journey, but they managed to pull through.

Quakers

The difference between the number of runs allowed and the number of runs scored illustrates the difficulty the Quakers had in hitting against the fluffy Tigers. As it turned out, however, the Quakers proved to be more of a threat than they expected.

According to Nash, "Hillman-Hillman-Quakers' defensive deficiency. Of the 353 runs given up by Penn this season, only 35 were earned. These totals do not include runs scored because of defense mistakes that could not be charged on errors. It's the best defense we've ever seen this year," Hillman said.

The doubles header with Dartmouth scheduled for next weekend is now on. But the Quakers may have to get into their school week, as Senior Josh Green remains a part of the run for the Quakers.
