PUC to meet on spring pork showing

Mayoral candidates meet in debate

News in Brief

State can rule on creationism teaching

NEW ORLEANS - The Louisiana Supreme Court ruled recently that the state did not have to allow for changes in the curriculum for public school employees to teach evolution and creationism in the classroom. The school board had also been asked to make a decision on whether to allow both topics to be taught in the same classroom.

Members of the state Board of Elementary and Secondary Education (BES) were asked to allow changes in the curriculum in order to provide a "fair and balanced" approach to the topics. The board rejected the request.

"We are not ready," declared Bill King, a BES member and the creationism administrator. "We are not readying for a full trial with representatives of the groups. The final decision is still in the hands of the BES." The full board was expected to meet to discuss the matter.

"We are as excited," declared John P. Leigh, chairman of the BES, "as the creationism administrator. They are now ready to meet to discuss the matter." The full board was expected to meet to discuss the matter.

Student smoking drags as health worries rise

OIL IN LOW

Sometimes it seems that society can be divided into two teams — those who smoke and those who don’t — and one of the more pressing issues of the day is a rate of passage from adolescence to adulthood that has declined in popularity. But still, the number of smokers remains high.

A survey of current freshmen at Harvard University found that 23 percent of the class of 1984 smoked, while only 3 percent of the class of 1964 smoked. The figures have remained relatively stable since.

For its share of the decline of smokers among the general population, women are smoking in greater proportions, perhaps reflecting the increasing pressure they feel to break the smoking habit.

"The social pressure to smoke is increasing for women, while it is decreasing for men," said Student Health Director Samuel F. Bard. "This situation is not unique to Harvard. The situation is not unique to Harvard. It is nationwide."

According to the National Institute on Drug Abuse, smoking is at an all-time high among young adults. There are a number of cigarettes that appear especially for women. As women become more cancer-oriented, they feel a personal pressure to begin smoking.

"Women more often use cigarettes to smoke, a lot of people do smoke," one college junior, who asked not to be identified, said. "A lot of women smoke because they don't want to be the last. Now it is considered bad to smoke."

But the future is not so gloomy for non-smoking women. They are being encouraged to "catch up" by the American Cancer Society and the National Institute on Drug Abuse.

Negative Action

"The University of Pennsylvania, which includes the health sciences school as well as the arts, social or sexual affairs departments, is a very complete university," she said. "When the woman in the crown is present, she is our campus's communal personage."

"When she does not come to the university, we do not have to worry about a communal or sympathetic person." She added that in such cases, "We have always been told not to worry about communal or sympathetic person." She added that in such cases, "We have always been told not to worry about communal or sympathetic person."

Some historical details are necessary for a full understanding of the position. The position was created in 1976 at the University of Pennsylvania, where Logan is currently serving as Vice President of Student Life and Public Safety. Logan was appointed to the position by Dean of Public Safety Provost Eliot Stellar. It became obvious that the next person to be appointed was needed. Logan was chosen for the position in March 1984.

Dismantled without letting the University community know about the situation, she said. "There was absolutely no arrangement of anything. We were not permitted to do their job."

"There are some things you cannot accept without being made legal. We have a certain person's name, but that's not the same."

Since her arrival seven years ago, her job description has changed. "It is impossible without bringing dishonor to the name of the University of Pennsylvania," she said. "The current job description does not include anything that would have placed me entirely out of the job description."

Wells said that since she made the decision to sue the University, she has been put on trial. "I have been put on trial for the next seven years. I have been put on trial for the next seven years."

Wells's efforts over the past seven years have produced nothing for the fines she has been put on trial for. The country is out all 24 hours a day. Dr. Sam’s renewal of Student Health Services, under which students require proper vaccinations before matriculating, is a cause for concern.

Law students’ picket

The picket was organized by members of the AASU Committee Against Discrimination as Penn, which was formed last year to protest discrimination against blacks in recruitment of the Army, which discriminates against black and lesbians, and the high percentage in its recruitment.

Students have often voiced their concern about the treatment of women who have not been properly vaccinated or have been kept from being properly vaccinated.

Pat Metheny to play at Irvine
Fusion concert slated for tomorrow

By BRIAN ESBLER
The Pat Metheny Group will jazz up Irvine Auditorium at 8 p.m. tomorrow with its fusion-style music.

The band, which specializes in "jazzy-oriented rock," is popular among college audiences across the nation. The group gained national attention last year with Off Ramp. The album won a Grammy Award for Best Jazz Performance, and was voted "Best Jazz Album of the Year" in the Playboy Magazine Readers' Poll. Two of the group's past albums have been nominated for Grammy Awards, and Travels, Off Ramp and As Falls Wichita Have Falls, Wichita are currently listed in the Top 20 Albums of Billboard magazine's Jazz Chart. The most recent album, Travels, has been on the chart for 15 weeks, and As Falls Wichita has been on for a near record-breaking 121 weeks.

"I think it's great we can get an artist of Metheny's stature to play on campus" said PUC Concert Committee Co-chairman Adam Spiegel, an Engineering School junior. "One of the Penn Union Council's goals is to provide a variety of music on campus. The music of Pat Metheny has a large crossover appeal - it can be enjoyed by everyone."

Metheny's talents have earned him worldwide critical acclaim. Last year, he was voted Best Jazz Guitarist in both Rolling Stone and Guitar Player magazines.

The Pat Metheny Group also features Lyle Mays on keyboards, Steve Rodby on bass guitar, Paul Wertico on drums, and multi-instrumentalist and singer Palm Arger. The group, which tours regularly across the United States, will tour Japan in November.

Tickets for the concert are available at the Annenberg Center Box Office, Ticketron and Wanamaker's for $9.50 and $8.50 with a student identification card, and $2 extra without.

The story behind the Penn women's tennis team's 3-0 record in dual matches involves more than strong performances by the top players. There has been some lightening of the mood at the bottom of the singles list. As fifth and sixth singles players, Richardson and Tracy Lauer have given the Quakers depth.

Yesterday, the two won their matches and helped Penn defeat DePauw, 5-1.
