EVERYTHING was ready for the big anti-war rally on Wednesday in Oak Cliff. A traffic island on the corner of Forbes and Bigelow is the site of this past weekend's "Mop-A-Thon," which was organized by a group -- not sure if she's a group or just one person -- who lead a dozen people, in army fatigues staged a mock invasion of a traffic island, "mopping up" the island with wooden mops. There is undeniable proof that the island was driven through the rain, shouting "Murderer!" and midway through the talk, a dozen people unfurled an American flag and the crowd joined in this patriotic effort to "break the back of the Palestine liberation organization." We've been hearing all this stuff in the last few days, so it is good to know that it is going on somewhere.

The University Police Department is currently drafting proposals for some kind of dress code for on-campus activities. The idea is that the courses would be counted if the students are "properly dressed," which includes not having "purple departmental jeans," he said. We have no idea what this means.

Instead of the usual on-campus commencement exercises, the University Senate has decided to "sweep up" its "two parallels to peace" with the aid of plainclothes bodyguards, the author has learned. These plans are adopted. Racial strife resurfaces at U. City High School

B. KENNETH DRAKE

Conspiring against the rise of the student, reports of racial tension at the school were in the early morning.

The trouble began when a 13-year-old student came up against his peers.

The fight started with a football game yesterday afternoon. A classmate of the student was hit by a pass and the two began to argue. The argument quickly escalated into a physical altercation.

Throughout the night, tension continued to rise, with similar incidents occurring in classrooms and hallways. The school administration has responded by increasing security presence and implementing additional measures to address the situation.

In the last two months, tensions between the school's black and Asian students have erupted into a number of incidents of violence directed against Asians.

The situation has intensified in recent weeks. Although the situation has intensified in recent weeks.

He steered into the class to 10 minutes late, taking his exams from his pocket and handing them to each student.

The next thing I know my professor, known for his squeaky voice and glasses, walked up to the board and began lecturing. He had a very high and nasal voice, which I found quite amusing. He then walked back to the front of the class and continued his lecture.

I was surprised to see him using a pointer, a device I had never seen before. He also had a very interesting accent, which I found quite entertaining.

In conclusion, I enjoyed this class and learned a lot. I would recommend this course to anyone who is interested in the subject matter.

Agenda proposals, athletic cuts face U. Council discussion today

By LAUREN COLEMAN

University Council will address a proposal today calling for the group to allow states to appear on its agenda by written petition.

Chairman Frank Luntz, who said at the last Council meeting that states were part of a specific constituency automatically be placed on the Council agenda. Luntz, a College senior, has charged that the Council is ineffective and lacks input from students and faculty. Luntz's proposal as a result of a 10 percent of the student body, should be a forum for debate and discussion of University issues. Luntz said recently. "I think their's backing down."

Council Steering Committee Chair June Axinn said last night that she supports the proposed changes. "I think it's a reasonable idea. Its time to place an issue on the agenda," said Axinn, a School of Social Work professor. "I think the steering committee generally does a good idea of placing items on the agenda, but I don't think we can have issues as addition to that. We can only add things proposed."

The discussion was spurred by J.C. School of Social Work professor. "I see [Council] as a body that should be a forum for debate and discussion of University issues," said Luntz, who stated recently. "I think there's backing down."

We'll help you get more out of college, gain valuable job experience — and pay you for it.

If you have an interest in sales, advertising, or business in general, we just might have a part-time job for you as a member of our Advertising Sales Staff.

We're The Daily Pennsylvanian, Penn's 99-year-old student-run daily newspaper, and we're just one of the three free college papers in the United States. Our experience, knowledge, and resources can provide you with a professional background and experience that can help you the change or to prepare you for jobs. We offer you the chance to earn substantial income, meet new people, and develop valuable new skills.

This is an excellent opportunity for ambitious, dedicated, enthusiastic students — and you need not have prior sales experience. We have a limited number of positions available, and we're waiting for your application.

If you would like to apply, please call our Information Center Thursday, December 1 at 5 P.M. at the DP office. We'll tell you more about the Sales Staff, answer your questions, and schedule an appointment or interview with our training director.

You can't get experience like this anywhere else on campus.

Students face drinking charges

Hearing to follow raid of campus bar

BY MICHAEL NADIS

Four of 10 Pennsylvania students charged with underage drinking at the university have paid fines in the case and would not be brought against them.

"We have not been told about any hearing," said Engineering School sophomore Kevin Kutstein, who was also arrested in December in the case.

"They told us that we would only have to appear if there were charges brought against C.P.'s," he added.

College sophomore Michael Lewis, one of the students said the students were given the option of either paying a $25 fine for underage drinking or going to jail.

"There was a court date (December 4) on the actual summons which we gave up when we paid the fine," Lewis said. "Once that's given up, there's no way we could have lost." He added that the Admissions Office's new procedure, Yale University's early decision applicants also increased by about 10 percent after drop-off.

"We're sure that part of the increase is due to the changing perceptions of the University's academic standards," she said.

"When you pay the fine, you're not going to jail," Lewis said. "I gave up the fine, so I'm not going to pay any more money and I'm not going to court." He added that they are being prosecuted.

Police's 18th Precinct yesterday said the students were given an option of either paying a fine or appearing in court.

"The LCB may just be on the lookout for underage drinking at S.C.'s, in less than eight months, and came as the LCB was investigating a bar for alleged Code violations, including serving alcohol to minors. The LCB is expected to have three charges on campus early next month.

Gorilla takes charge of U. computer class

By SUSAN MATTEWS

A large gorilla burst into Computer Science and Engineering 450, the usual site for introductory computer programming classes, just as class was beginning yesterday. The gorilla announced to the class that he had "learned from the Internet," and proceeded to sing "Happy Birthday" to himself. The class was then interrupted by a gorilla."I was flattered but embarrassed," said Professor Claude, "but I couldn't help it." The gorilla then proceeded to sing "Happy Birthday" to himself and to the rest of the class, who were all very impressed by the gorilla's performance. Professor Claude then asked the gorilla if he would like to join the class, and the gorilla agreed to stay for about 10 minutes more. He then left the class, leaving the students and faculty members laughing and wondering what had just happened.

Other students were more enthusiastic about the unexpected visitor. "I couldn't believe my eyes when a gorilla burst into the classroom," said Engineering senior John Boiler. "I was flattered but embarrassed," said Professor Claude, "but I couldn't help it." The gorilla then proceeded to sing "Happy Birthday" to himself and to the rest of the class, who were all very impressed by the gorilla's performance.

There was some confusion among some of the students about the gorilla's presence in the class. Engineering senior Mike Edler said he was surprised to see a gorilla in his class, "I was kind of taken aback," he said. "I thought maybe it was a kid, but it was a gorilla." Other students were more enthusiastic about the unexpected visitor. "I couldn't believe my eyes when a gorilla burst into the classroom," said Engineering senior John Boiler. "I was flattered but embarrassed," said Professor Claude, "but I couldn't help it." W. Cagers win opener

Few things are as satisfying to Penn's offensive performance in the game.

"I had never seen Penn play better," Rankin said. "I asked someone on the bench if the first half was the best we had played in a long time and we finally got to play our dink stuff and it was working."

"We're really happy about the win," Ahlman said. "We're practical a long time and finally got to play our dink stuff and it was working."

Swim teams open at Princeton—

"Swim teams open at Princeton—

For the eight varsity rookies, the first half was reassuring. The team was already down 14-10 at the start of the season," Lawlor said. "But Rankin was slightly confused at the start of the season.

"We are a new team that's getting used to each other's mistakes. We can look to everyone for support."

"The season is definitely off to a good start," Lawlor said. "It was a good chance to try new things."

Quakers wait for Bromwell

"I'm very pleased tonight," Bromwell said. "I was very unhappy last year and that made it difficult for me to concentrate on my studies. This year I feel more relaxed."

And maybe next year, Perry will be Boston's All-Ivy guard again.

Perry's a super basketball talent," Fordham's All-Ivy guard said. "A guy that has a lot of ability to take charge."

"He's a big, strong guard with a lot of talent," Columbia's All-Ivy guard said. "He's a big, strong guard with a lot of talent."
Swim teams begin rebuilding in opening meets at Princeton

B. TOMPSETT

Swim teams begin rebuilding for their seasons that are to open today. Both the men's and women's swim teams.

Lawler is scoring his second season as coach, and both teams should be improved this year. The two teams are at Princeton every year, but not going to do that again that next year by scheduling an earlier meet.

The Princeton men's team will face the Tigers on the road this year. With one of the best class of Princeton, pool or caudal, the coaches at both schools considered removing the meet. Princeton eventually decided that it should stay.

"I discussed moving the meet here with the Princeton coach," Lawler said. "But it would have been such a big advantage in the pool. They really wanted to keep the meet there, but the meet is much later than there."

All 12 men and women are eager to get to the Princeton pool. The men hope to add some points to their total by scoring big. Lawler has the men looking for a victory against Princeton in every meet.

The Princeton swimming team has many returning swimmers. The team is also returning several freshmen. Lawler said. "They are one of the toughest teams we've faced this year.

"I think they will do well in the meet. But if they don't, then I would say they are not as strong as we are."

"We are not a very deep team," Lawler said. "We only have 11 men on the team and we can't compete with Princeton and their numbers."

"It would be a long shot for us to win," Lawler said. "But it would be a good meet for us."

The final point total for the men's team might look one-sided, but the meet will be a significant step in rebuilding the swim teams.

W. Squash beats F&M on road, 9-0

McMullin shines against former team

BY BLAISE BELL

Anna McMullin, a junior transfer from Franklin and Marshall, has scored the first round since receiving her transfer to the Penn Women's Squash team. She is also the number one for the Quakers and her presence was seen from the tion.

But both scored against Penn pumps. McMullin was not the first to go as she had approved with the Penn pump for some time. New York. But it was at a very high level.

"It was a strange," McMullin said. "I was not sure if I was supposed to go or not."

The McMullin's second season, and this game, brought 13 players to the Quakers, another six players to the men's team.

"They've all put in a lot of work," McMullin said. "But they have been working together for a year."

"I'm pleased with the win. It's a rebuilding year, and we are not a very strong team."

Penn dominated the Sea Gulls In the game. "We only have 15 men on the team," Lawler said. "But they all are working hard."

"I think they are going to be good," Lawler said. "They are going to be good."
