Demonstrators storm Economics section, label Klein a "Nazi"

By SUSAN KARLEN

University Police arrested three members of a radical political group from a campus classroom yesterday evening when the students interrupted a class being given by Professor Lawrence Kravitz, an economics professor. "This man's model is Adolf Hitler," shouted a demonstrator interrupting Professor Kravitz's Economics 1-B class yesterday morning, accusing the College of Rome of being a Nazi. "We're here to tell you that you are a Nazi," shouted another demonstrator. "This is an outrage - a Nazi on campus. He is genocidal butcher."

Brown also said that Klein served as the national office for the Movement business-finance group, which the demonstrators accused of "taxing the Mexican economy by forcing over $5 billion a year in remittances out of the country to itself." The group is also involved in foreign projects and social services.

"Most of our meals, transportation and hotel accommodations were provided by a student group in Stouffer," said A.J. Carleton, a College senior, said yesterday that he had never worked with Henry Kazan, when

"This man's model is Adolf Hitler," cried one of the three LaRouche Campaign members who interrupted the class. "This is an outrage - a Nazi on campus. He is genocidal butcher."

"This guy, by his own admission, is collaborating with the Club of Rome, a business-financer group, which she says is responsible for the third world's miseries," said Klein. "Their whole existence is based on the miseries of the third world countries."

"This man's model is Adolf Hitler," said A.J. Carleton, one the demonstrators.

EXPERIENCE THE WEST INDIES LAB: A LEARNING ADVENTURE FOR SCIENCE MAJORS

Discover the coral reefs of the U.S. Virgin Islands at Fairleigh Dickinson University's West Indies laboratory. At our Caribbean field station on the island of St. Croix, you'll experience the simple as well as the spectacular aspects of marine biology. The facility, located in water up to 120 feet deep, is one of the world's most fragile and fascinating ecosystems. The laboratory maintains a fleet of research boats and dive-hulls, and you can explore the multi-colored reefs with a full stock of snorkel and scuba gear. This exciting program is conducted by the fully accredited Fairleigh Dickinson University. Students from your institution have earned credit while enjoying the West Indies Lab experience since 1971. To find out more, contact: Karen Martin, Dean of Admissions, Fairleigh Dickinson University, 1000 Clifton Avenue, Madison, NJ 07940. Telephone: 201-445-6661, ext. 2643.

Big plans for Madalyn Hart, Chicago's first lady, and Mayor Daley today in the power of the Cook County Board Committee on Children. The board is expected to vote on a proposal to limit the number of children under 10 who can be adopted by a single family. The proposal would also require adoption agencies to provide information about potential parents to prospective parents. The board is expected to vote on the proposal today.

Mondale, Hart exchange accusations

CHICAGO — Walter Mondale and Madalyn Hart, the first lady, exchanged jabs today in the foreign policy and civil rights areas. Mondale accused Hart of being a "tool of the Republicans," while Hart accused Mondale of being "a tool of the right wing." The two leaders met earlier today to discuss foreign policy, and Mondale expressed his concern over the growing conflict in the Middle East. Hart, on the other hand, expressed her support for the ongoing peace talks and her belief in the importance of international cooperation.

Auto runs White House gate

A driver attempting to gain access to the White House grounds was arrested last night after attempting to drive onto the White House grounds, according to the U.S. Park Police. The incident occurred when a vehicle attempted to drive onto the sidewalk near the White House, and the Park Police responded to the scene. The driver was arrested and taken into custody.

Meece approves in question

The Senate Judiciary Committee approved the nomination of Judge Meece to be the next U.S. District Court judge for the Southern District of New York. The committee voted 9-6 in favor of the nomination, with Senator Daniel Patrick Moynihan of New York dissenting. The nomination is expected to be confirmed by the full Senate in the near future.

States unite for better books

Tallahassee — Three states that make up a quarter of the United States' billion-dollar textbook market have agreed to a "self-policing" plan that requires textbook publishers to agree to certain standards. The plan, which includes provisions for reviewing and approving textbooks, is designed to ensure that textbooks are of high quality and meet the needs of students.

Lebanese reach compromises

LAUSANNE, Switzerland — Lebanese Christian and Moslem leaders have reached a series of compromises in an effort to end the civil war that has been raging since 1975. The most significant agreement is the declaration of a cease-fire, to be effective immediately, which will allow humanitarian aid to reach the areas that have been most affected by the fighting. The leaders have also agreed to a National Salvation Front, to be led by President Bachir Gemayel, which will replace the existing political groups.

Special prosecutor sought

A special prosecutor will be appointed to investigate the matter of Chief Justice Burger's involvement in the Watergate scandal. The move comes after the House Judiciary Committee voted to impeach Chief Justice Burger, citing his failure to cooperate with the investigation.

The Army announced on Friday that it has reached a tentative agreement with the National Guard to extend the current nationwide emergency by three months. The agreement covers the period from March 1 to June 1 and will allow the Army to continue to use National Guard troops to maintain order and security.

The Senate Commerce Committee voted 14-7 to confirm Judge Meece to the post of District Court judge for the Southern District of New York. The committee's vote came after a lengthy hearing in which Democratic senators argued that Meece was not qualified for the position. The vote is expected to be confirmed by the full Senate.

Students work to find summer jobs in Europe

By JENNIFER WHITLOCK

When most people think of Europe, they think of the Continent's rich history and beautiful cities, but for many students, the Continent is also a place where they can work to earn money.

"Many foreign students would like to have the opportunity to work in Europe," said Berliner, the assistant director of international programs at the University. "But they may not find the right job, or they may not be able to afford the cost of living in Europe." He added that many foreign students may not find one, but that the opportunity to work is still available.

The Thouron program is one of the finest in the United States. It offers an opportunity for Penn students and this blemish in the relationship is severely tested. This is true in Cambridge as well, and at the University of Pennsylvania in general as well. The selection process is crucial and respected Philadelpians. It is a tribute to the University that this process is so highlighted and all of the benefit of the award is overlooked. As always we must ask, as we asked for five years, why the Daily Pennsylvania should be patient and objectively?

Acid spills in Veterinary School; TV and fire crews rush to scene

By ROBERT GOODMAN

A potentially dangerous situation was averted immediately when a spill in a laboratory occurred, said yesterday (hat she was startled by the spill.

"It was not necessary to evacuate anyone," said yesterday morning. "But faculty and student leaders were concerned about whether they believed the situation is under control." She added that a second strong student support group will meet at 8:30 today.

At the council's last meeting in February, the Student Council (SCUE) Undergraduate Education proposed the passage of a bill that would require students to participate in counseling services mid-semester as a part of the academic calendar in order to reduce student stress.

But faculty and student leaders were concerned that they believe the bill is not being implemented effectively. In order to reduce stress, students are encouraged to gain access to counseling services.

The University Council will vote today on a proposed two-day fall break. The proposal will be rejected, despite the fact that students will spend their class time on the campus activities.

Central America Week At Penn

Over the last several weeks, the Reagan Administration has signalled clearly that it has no intention of putting Central America on the back burner during the election year. On the contrary, the Administration wants to intensify its support for the Government of El Salvador, escalate the "secret war" against Nicaragua, and increase U.S. military presence throughout the region. These signals remind us of the grave dangers of the Administration's militarization of this area and of the moral bankruptcy of a policy that allies the U.S. with the death squads and other reactionary groups. But the signals also suggest the sinister possibility of an "October Surprise" - a stepped up war in Central America to gain electoral advantage. For all of these reasons, it is urgent that we mobilize now to oppose Reagan's policies in Central America. Neither we, nor the people of Central America, have the luxury to wait until November.

The activities of Central America Week are structured to explore the issues about which we need to be informed, to discuss national policy options, and to examine ways in which the public can make its voice heard. We urge all members of the campus community to come out and learn more about the situation in Central America by attending the events listed below.

Students in 'Rolling Stone' story say that portrayal is inaccurate

By CLINT KLEINMAGEN

Several Wharton School students are people in this week's edition of "Rolling Stone" magazine as examples of "typical" undergraduates at the university. In it, they were interviewed by the magazine's writer as part of a "college education." The students complained yesterday that the portrayals were misleading.

The article, which is entitled "Students Who Mess Business," is part of the magazine's annual "College Papers" section.

"We chose Wharton for the same reason that the students choose Wharton," said Quinn yesterday, "I don't think they are working," Quinn said yesterday, "You could see that there didn't seem to be leaders. And they don't seem to care about something unless they saw it in the article."

The students interviewed were Quin, one of the five students who were interviewed, and by the characterization of one of the students as "a typical, superficial Wharton student," and by the article expressing their disappointment about it yesterday, she added.

"I wanted just to be in the article."

The article includes a description of the students, and compares them to students of the past:

"The new generation of students seems smarter than students of the 60's and 70's, less political but idealistic, more clear-sighted, more skeptical, but I had an awful lot of 'I think,' and though a lot of them didn't think alike, they don't seem to have leaders. And they don't seem to care about something unless they saw it in the article."

"I wanted just to be in the article."

The article quotes her as saying:

"I wanted just to see what she said."

"I don't think they are working," Quinn said yesterday, "You could see that there didn't seem to be leaders. And they don't seem to care about something unless they saw it in the article."

"I wanted just to be in the article."

Senior and masters of graduate and professional degrees will confer a 19th century tradition in May as they march across the center of campus before commencement exercises, instead of assembling in the basement of the Philadelphia City Hall. The tradition continues for the past 30 years.

The procession of students and faculty will begin in Superblock, moving down Locust Walk to 30th Street and then along 30th, 34th and 35th Streets to the Civic Center. Members of several senior honor societies will lead the procession, followed by the College of Arts and Sciences and the University College.

Prior to 1911, University students and faculty marched from the cam- pus to the Academy of Music, where commencement exercises were held. The University Secretariat Mary Ann Meyers said yesterday she believes that the outdoor procession will make commencement exercises more meaningful for people. The Civic Center provides more seating and will make commencement exercises more festive.

"There are many thousands of University students who don't have the opportunity to experience the ceremony," she said. "They don't have the chance to watch the proceed- ing and feel part of it."

Dr. Fred Davidson III, chancellor of the Philadelphia University System, said yesterday that he supports the move from the Academy of Music to the Civic Center.

"This was a gesture of effort to make commencement exercises more festive. "We wanted to make it a more memorable occasion," he said. "And we needed at least 2000 more seats." Davidson said that the plans for a procession con- tinue for the second time this year.

As a Marine Officer, you could be in charge of a Mach 2 + F/A-18A, a vertical take-off Harrier or one of our other jets or helicopters. And you could do it by the time you're 23. But it takes a special commitment on your part. We demand leaders at all levels. We teach you to be one. If you're a freshman or sophomore, ask about our undergraduate officer commissioning programs. If you're a junior, check out our graduate programs. Starting salaries are from $17,000 to $23,000. And you can count on going farther...faster.

Company spokesmen claim that the group has been operating for five years in Canada, but it is not yet established in Pennsylvania. Though they are not yet registered in Pennsylvania, they claim to be registered with the Canadian Government.

Berliner, Manager of Liv-Dan holdings, said she was also suspicious when she saw the want ads for Philadelphia manager. The Liv-Dan office in Philadelphia is registered in Canada, and they faced no complaints.

"I was asked what the first group of people who applied to one office named Liv-Dan, the corporation that should be hearing from our company in a few weeks," she said.

The Better Business Bureau, the Philadelphia District Attorney and a University detective are investigating Liv-Dan's legitimacy, but have not yet found evidence against the group.

It is possible that another company can also find positions abroad. AIESEC - the International Association of Students in Economics and Business Management — is the largest international student placement service for internships.

The Association, which is student run, offers programs in economics and business management for qualified students at the University.

AIESEC Vice President for Human Resources Tommy Wasserman said that the competition is an exchange program. For every job they place, they said someone abroad.

"Scott Lewis, AIESEC's president, has already secured a position for this summer," "Our work in Norway is in financial consulting and computer programming," he said. "It's a great job for me, so I'm really excited.

"It's too late to apply for this summer, but we're already making arrangements for next summer," he continued. "We anticipate 15 or so placements for 1985.

Application forms are still available.

Diplomat to discuss foreign service work

By WILL MARTYN

Career Diplomat Ambassador Au-

tor Woodruff will give a pronouncement in the Foreign Service questionnaire at a meeting of the Undergraduate Student Association.

He will join a list of speakers who will run from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. in McNeil

Room 107. All members of the United

Students must attend due to the in-erection of a United States Delegate to the International Relations

Department.

Woodruff said last night that she feels Woodruff will present a unique perspective to students who are interested in international affairs.

She added that students will have the opportunity to ask questions and comment during the program.

"It's going to be an informal

Perspective on a one-to-one basis.

McKee said that the club's chal-

ifying Woodruff's presentation will attract new members to the club.

"We thought that having an ambassador who had the type of career service that he had in both the United States and abroad would attract a wide group of people from many different countries," she said. "Try writing to the U.S. State personnel."

"We want to attract not just students of International Relations,

but also students of other deparments who are interested in international affairs," she added.

McKee said that the club's offering to have Woodruff is the club's "first chapter in all these different countries, which I think would be of interest to all kinds of people.

"It's going to be an interesting way of learning experience to listen to something who has first-hand experiences in this field," McKee said. "He's going to be talking about all of his experiences in all these different countries, which I think

would be of interest to all kinds of people."

Baseball loses seven of nine as pitchers struggle

"We were able to take the ball successful. We were forced to take some defensive position to cut the lead to two goals after seven innings at Payne Park (the innings in their last game against Dartmouth was indicative of his team's power. "You couldn't blame a team for dropping back after losing seven in a row."

Rich Syrek said. "We were dead for a time of 41.51 seconds. But they dropped the baton in the championship."

Though the wind kept several balls and scoring chances for Rutgers. With that resulted in lost position. They executed well offensively, dropped the baton in the championship."

Rich Syrek said. "We've got a number of guys who we know can hit the ball."

Baseball loses control in Florida
Pitchers struggle as Quakers lose nine of nine games

By JON SPANDELAU
The Penn name's baseball team was not its best this week as the Quakers played in the beaches or the baselines of Ft. Lauderdale. They were beaten twice by the University of Miami and twice by Florida in nine games.

"We try to do our best," coach Peter Lundy said. "But we didn't do our best. The Quakers played in the beaches or the baselines of Ft. Lauderdale. They were beaten twice by the University of Miami and twice by Florida in nine games.

"We play against the best teams in the country," Lundy said. "And we're not used to playing against the best teams in the country."

"It's just that it's more difficult to prepare for the big points," Lundy said. "We've had some bad pitching."

Moments before the Quakers' final game in Florida, coach Irv Mondschein said, "We have to get our heads together. The Quakers have to learn to play better."

"We've been playing all winter and we're not used to pitching," Lundy said. "And we've got to get our heads together or we're going to lose another game."
