Fraternities may cancel Greek Week

By FELIPE ALBRIGHT

This year's Greek Week celebration may be canceled after a proposal shortening the Greek Week to a mere two days was approved by IFC local chapter. "We should be doing something to make Greek Week more inclusive and not just a weekend of drinking," said one Greek Week executive. In other words, the IFC members must eliminate alcohol policy, which caters only to a minority of the student body.

The fraternities also have expressed little enthusiasm for a Greek Week that would only feature alcohol. "We're not interested in a Greek Week that's just drinking," said one fraternity representative. But the fraternities must take into account the needs of the university and its students. A Greek Week that only focuses on alcohol is not beneficial to the student body as a whole.

The original decision to change the Greek Week from a full week to a two-day event was made to include more students and to create a more inclusive environment. "We want Greek Week to be for everyone," said one IFC member. "We don't want it to be just for the fraternities." The Greek Week committee will now review the proposal and make changes as necessary.

A Good Looking

SCHUMEREK College junior Jeff Young and College sophomore Brad Smith plan a new game for Greek Week. "We think it could prove popular," he said. "Maybe these ideas could lead to a new interest in the Greek Week, instead of just alcohol.

The fraternities also discussed a proposal for adult involvement in planning Greek Week. "We believe in collaborating with the community and involving the student body in the planning process," said one fraternity representative. "We want Greek Week to be a community event, not just for the fraternities." The Greek Week committee will now review the proposal and make changes as necessary.

'Cafe Flesh' to show at Irvine

By ADRIAN GOLDINSTEIN

The Penn Union Council will screen 'Cafe Flesh' at the University. The film, directed by the internationally renowned filmmaker Deep Throat, is a controversial movie that explores the complexities of the adult entertainment industry. The film has generated a lot of discussion and controversy, especially among those who believe that it promotes unhealthy attitudes towards sex and sexuality.

"We don't show these movies every year, and we don't plan to," said 1st-year Alumna Board president. "Based upon my experience and the feedback we've received, I think this is a good indication that the people on campus want to see more.

"I am very interested in seeing more films like this," added another university official. "We want to raise the same questions but in a different way. We want people to engage in conversations about these issues." The Penn Union Council continues to screen pornography, but if we want to see Offensive films, but if we want to see traditional films, we'll have to raise the same questions but in a different way.  plans unveiled to link campus with computers

The Penn Union Council has unveiled plans to link the campus with computers, which will allow students and faculty to access information and resources quickly and efficiently. The system will include a network of computers that will be linked to a central server, allowing students and faculty to access information from anywhere on campus.

The network will include measures to ensure the security of the system, such as firewalls and encryption. It will be implemented gradually, starting with the most critical systems.

Director of Computer Support Services Professor Jane Kramer said yesterday that the proposal calls for the University to invest in a new computer and information technology infrastructure. "It will be a challenging task, but we believe it is necessary for the University to move forward in this area," she said.

The proposal is not specific in terms of how much money will be allocated for the project. It will be reviewed by the University administration and the faculty and staff executive committee before a final decision is made.

"The focus is on computers," he said. "It's on the technology, not on the entertainment. People will be able to access information and resources quickly and efficiently.

"We have not reached the point where we can say for sure what the final cost will be," said Kramer. "But we are confident that we can proceed with the project within the available resources." The proposal will be reviewed by the University administration and the faculty and staff executive committee before a final decision is made.

The destruction of the DU mural was a symbolic act. It marked the end of a period in which people were allowed to express themselves freely. The mural was a place where people could gather and share their ideas. It was a symbol of freedom, and it represented the values of the university.

The mural was destroyed by the university in 1984. This was a symbolic act, as the mural represented the values of the university. The destruction of the mural was a symbol of the university's renewed commitment to its own values. The mural was destroyed by the university in 1984. The University and Minorities: Affirmative Reaction

When I first saw that the real purpose of a Drexel College Courtyard meeting held to introduce blacks to the University was to discuss the black people’s determination to survive and thrive on the Penn campus, I thought it sounded despicable and, in part, was, indeed, both of those sentiments.

But the issue now at hand is of such importance not only to the University and to the Negro, but to all Americans. While the issue of the University is important, the Negro’s problems are not unique as he is but one of the millions of Negroes in America. They have a right to higher education and to a college education, and the University would be the ideal place for them to obtain such an education.

The question of the desirability of having Negro students in the University is not only a question of Negroes but also of whites. The Negro has the right to an education and the University should provide an opportunity for him.

The Negro student’s responsibilities are as great as those of any other student. He must work hard, study hard, and take his share of the responsibilities. The University should not be a place where he is merely tolerated.

It is important to emphasize that the University is not merely a Negro institution but a multi-racial institution. The University is the place where all students, regardless of race, should be able to get a quality education.

The University does not have the right to discriminate against or exclude any student on the basis of race.

Cafe Flesh: To See or Not to See?

By Darcy Fengold

When you’re a kid, do you know what one of the biggest things about your parents is? That they were once beautiful. They were once everything you could ever want. But now they’re not. They’re old. They have wrinkles. They have gray hair.

Sure, these are only a child’s concerns. But as an adult, you can’t see it. You can’t see how beautiful your parents are. You can’t see the way they used to be. You can’t see the way they are. You can’t see the way they have to be.

But these are the only images you have. These are the only people you know. These are the only people you see. These are the only people you can see.

And these are the only people you can see. These are the only people you can see. These are the only people you can see. These are the only people you can see.

These are the only people you can see. These are the only people you can see. These are the only people you can see. These are the only people you can see.

Advisory group to give faculty more say in admissions process

By RHEUBL WISE

As a step to ensure greater faculty involvement in the undergraduate admissions process, an advisory group of faculty members has formed to aid the admissions office in recruiting prospective students.

The Undergraduate Faculty Advisory Group will also serve as a source of information to prospective students who are curious about the University's academic programs.

Early this month, the president and admissions officials invited a group of faculty members to form an advisory committee on the undergraduate admissions program. The group's first meeting, which 13 faculty members participated in, will be held next Thursday.

The new program has already produced significant results in Faculty Senate and faculty members have expressed enthusiasm about the potential for growth. The program is designed to provide a more structured and well-organized approach to the admissions process, which has historically been less formalized.

The Undergraduate Faculty Advisory Committee will meet regularly to discuss and analyze data related to the admissions process and to provide recommendations to the admissions office.

In addition to faculty members, students and parents are expected to attend the meetings to voice their concerns and provide feedback. The meetings will be open to the public, and the committee welcomes any input or suggestions for improving the admissions process.

The Undergraduate Faculty Advisory Committee will work closely with the admissions office and other university departments to ensure a smooth and efficient process for incoming students. The group aims to provide a more transparent and inclusive approach to admissions, while also giving faculty members a more active role in the process.

The Undergraduate Faculty Advisory Committee is composed of faculty members from various departments, ensuring a diverse range of perspectives and expertise.

The group will meet throughout the academic year, with the aim of issuing regular reports and recommendations to the admissions office and the university administration.

If you have any questions or feedback, please contact the Undergraduate Faculty Advisory Committee at ufacr@stanford.edu.
Justice Dept. backs Temple U.

in Army discrimination lawsuit

By OWEN EDWARDS

The U.S. Justice Department has filed court papers supporting Temple University in a lawsuit against the Army which seeks to bar the institution from recruiting on campus.

The case, which will go before the Philadelphia Human Relations Commission next month, is being closely watched by both sides in a similar lawsuit filed against the Philadelphia Human Relations Commission.

Justice Department Attorney Robert LaPorte said that more than $1 million annually is spent toward training Army recruiters from the Philadelphia area.

But he added that he feels the Department's position is being "well" supported by the evidence before the Commission.

The case will not begin until the Temple case has been resolved, LaPorte said.

According to the suit, Army recruiters have been barred from seeking students on campus because the University has a policy excluding homosexuals.

"It's a question of civil rights under the Constitution," said LaPorte. "It is the government's ability to raise citizens to their feet and make them toe the line that is at issue."

CUBS FANS PLAN PARTY TO CELEBRATE PLAYOFFS

BY ANDREW SLAVIT
The magic number is now three.
"It's not ever until now's it's," said Barry Hausmann, an Engineer.
As a test of the Cubs' weekend and their Tuesday night victory, the tests were done for the tests.

But most Cubs fans are now won core, and they're feeling a Cubs final.

Finally, with a division title, they can hold the party at the University at night.

"It's a wonderful party for some long suffering Cub fans," said Bob Lebeau. A Cub fan's support is the main theme of any celebration.

He said earlier this week that the party is supposed to coincide with the Cubs' clinching the division, pointing out that any combination of three Cubs won or lost will clinch first place for the Cubs.

Lebeau said that all we welcome back to a similar situation in 1969 when the Cubs clinched the division, the Cubs took a large lead into mid-August and watched the Mets roll past them into a division and eventual World Series victory.

The last time the Cubs won the pennant and went to the World Series was 1945. They lost to the Detroit Tigers then, and the Tigers are favored to be the American League champions.

But Lebeau remains comfortable that the Cubs fans will not reflect their past.

"After we beat the Padres and the Tigers, there'll be more parties," Lebeau said. "There are plenty of Mets fans here — especially with Cubbie-come-fans."

If somebody should win the division, we still have a chance," he added. "It's not over until zero," in his words.

"I sent Met fans can come — as do Cubs fans," he said, voicing the feelings of many Mets fans.

Lebeau said that all are welcome back to the Cubs party. "Even Mets fans can come — as long as they're under control," he added.

The Cubs have now lost four games in a row. One thing this party may need is a lot of aspirin.

Field Hockey faces Dartmouth

By DAVID BRADFORD

Fifteen players and a healthy dose of enthusiasm gave the Penn women's field hockey a good start in their first game this season. The Quakers are hoping to build on that initial buzz when they take the field against Dartmouth on Saturday afternoon.

The Quakers have not played against the Big Green since 1980, but they hope to use that memory to their advantage.

The Quakers are looking to improve their record to 2-0 this season after winning their opener against Drexel last weekend.

Lights out set to scrimmage at Rutgers

The game is expected to be a high-intensity, fast-paced affair, with both teams vying for the upper hand in a variety of offensive and defensive strategies.

The Quakers are looking to bounce back from their loss to Princeton and are determined to take the win in this game.

Green means go for the Quakers

By DAVID GOLDBERG

There’s no way that the Quakers will be able to keep pace with Dartmouth’s Big Green. With only a couple of weeks’ practice under their belts, the Dartmouth defense will have plenty of time to settle in and get used to playing against the high-powered offense of the Quakers."

The Quakers will have to rely on their solid defense to try and keep the game close. But Dartmouth’s offense is too powerful for them to handle."

The Quakers did not have a good showing against Lehigh last week, but they expect to improve against Dartmouth. They have been working hard on their passing game and are hoping to use it to their advantage against the Big Green."

Despite the loss last week, theQuakers are still confident about their chances against Dartmouth. They believe that they have the talent and experience to pull off a victory."

Soccer kicks off Ivy schedule

In Round One, the Quakers faced off against Dartmouth at Franklin Field. The game was a tough one for both teams, but in the end, the Quakers emerged victorious. They scored two goals to win the game 2-0. This was a great start to the season for the Quakers and they are looking forward to the rest of the Ivy schedule.""

We started at the top. After all, who is more high and mighty than that bastard of height and mightyness, the Great Gazoo of Flinstones lore. That right, dumbums, we journeyed to Planet Zaxtos to question his greeness. And, to be blunt, we were shocked to learn that the voice behind his awesomeism was none other than Boring Harvey Korman. Boring and uncooporative."

But we did get a chance to speak to the leeches responsible for Harvey’s career — the William Morris Agency. They gave us their hands down that they were not interested in giving us a break on Harvey’s contract, but we are still hopeful."

We made more luck up in Beantown, home of the biggest and best green team in the world — the Boston Celtics. We could have talked to Larry Bird — that sultan of swan himself — but we all know that Bird ain’t no articulate kind of dude. So we rapped with his spokesman, Big Bad Bob, about the possibility of a deal."

But we’re not yet ready to give up hope. As in every situation, there is always the chance that something will change."

We will continue to keep an eye on this situation and report any developments as they happen.""
