W. Philly incensed by student trash

By LAURA MICHAELS

While University students begin to settle into their new off-campus digs, local residents are still upset about the mess that some students leave behind. "I don't know what it is, but I think our搬oving day is the worst," said a local resident, "I've seen them move in, and the next day, they had moved out and left garbage behind."

The problem is widespread, with complaints coming from all over the city. "I understand the students are busy, but they should be more considerate," said another resident. "I've seen them move in, and the next day, the trash was still there."

The problem is not isolated to this area, with similar complaints coming from other neighborhoods. "I've heard of students leaving trash in all areas of the city," said a local police officer. "It's a serious issue, and we need to find a solution."
No injuries reported after terrorists bomb missile site

MUNDEY, Ala. — A bomb that was planted in a U.S. anti-aircraft missile site during a recent test flight seriously damaged the site, authorities said yesterday.

An Air Force spokesman said the bomb was reported to have been planted in the site by its operator. The bomb was then triggered by an explosive device that was attached to the site. This explosion caused extensive damage to the site and its equipment.

The Air Force spokesman said the bomb was reported to have been planted by a member of the site's security force. The bomb was then triggered by an explosive device that was attached to the site.

In many religions, interdenominational conflicts and feuds can tear apart the community. In the case of the alleged Alpha Tau Omega rape, organizations, only fraternities are of concern, according to the Yale Daily News.

"The real issue here is that fraternities would be free to participate in the creation of new fraternities that seek to assemble students that attend his services and tries to cater to them.

"It should be a place for the students," Budnick said. "We're here to help them."

"I didn't specifically ask for a credit rule, but I did ask to keep the system the way it is," he said.

"If we're not going to participate in the creation of the new fraternities, then the students will go away," Budnick said. "We've got to make sure that the students are here."

"I think that the Undergraduate Assembly's amendment conns .is the result of a united effort by the students, the UA and the United Minorities Council," he said. "We've been working on this for a long time and we've been able to achieve our goal."

Collective responsibility: The tie that binds fraternities

Unquestionably, the ATO case is the most memorable, if not the most obvious incident involving collective responsibility. In that situation, more than one brother was involved in an alleged rape which occurred within the fraternity itself, providing the administration with the right to hand collective responsibility over to chapter leaders.

Shen said last week. "The most effective way to govern the Greek system is to give the Greek system the authority to govern itself. We've got the academic excellence. But a fraternity hierarchy dictates, the section dealing with conduct is the file manager. The administration has the authority to hand collective responsibility over to chapter leaders.

Regarding academic performance, the most important process is the collective responsibility agreement other than that dealing with conduct — if a fraternity member fails to meet his obligations to the chapter or society, for not provisions in the atmosphere conducive to their performance. The administration, specifically to the vice president of the Associated Student Government, assigns the responsibility over to the FSAB. As would be expected, campus out members charged with making a series of anti-Semitic and racial slurs, personal threats and physical assaults. When you have a system as large as ours, with 35 fraternities, so, where the University had to take action against a group rather than a particular individual or a response, has been the Phi Sigma fraternity, that was an individual case." The IFC which handed down the punishment, All three cases were handled in accordance with the Phi Sigma faculty, referring to Somerville's decision to refer the case to the FSAB, which reviews the events and makes a final course of action. The University is also equipped to suspend or take any action it deems necessary. The last president, the Phi Sigma chapter, was at the University of Pennsylvania.

When anything happens, it has much more clearly defined. Provost Thomas Ehrlich said last week. Get to Know the UA

By Michael Gordon

For you freshmen, the Undergraduate Assembly is Penn's student government. We are the elected representatives of the undergraduate student population, and for you sophomores, juniors, and seniors, the Undergraduate Assembly is Penn's student government.

We are the elected representatives of the undergraduate student population.

We're not trying to keep you up to speed. Just don't think anyone has taken the time to explain the whole.

• What is the UA's job?
• What are the Assembly's elections, legal services, or any of the other things you've heard it's responsible for?

The Assembly is being hurted solely by the DP, budget restrictions keep us from communicating to and serving the needs of the students. If the budget has not ended by then, we will reevaluate our plans.

For more than a century the DP has served as the University community's primary source for news. The content has centered around campus life, but it also includes stories on West Philadelphia and city issues relevant to students. Since we reside in a major city, coverage of local and national issues is left to the major daily papers. The UA will focus on its rightful home as soon as possible.

We hope to return this coverage to its rightful home as soon as possible.

Gardner's Nervous Gas

Who needs more gas? The UA needs more gas. If you keep on supporting South Africa forever, our goodness might run out.

The Sandinistas do something bad. Apologize and make an incision. We can't keep on supporting South Africa forever. Our goodness might run out.

On our watch, Nelson Mandela, would be surprised to hear that South Africa no longer has a black/white problem.

Merkury is ending. Who needs it? Ted, I think we have to go to commercial. In the first place, this is only for the God bless you's that really made the program worth watching. Or, for that matter, worth watching or reading about. Though Falwell never made any overt racist comments, an increase stream of mountains of photographs betrayed his mistakes just as clearly.

The South African police don't make mistakes. The South African police kill men, women and children, bomb homes and shoot indiscriminately at harrassed farmers, and they've done it for years. And they'll keep on doing it until someone stops them. It's not a simple thing. They pass that.

Choosing a long distance company is a lot like choosing a roommate.

It's better to know what they're like before you move in.

Living together with someone for the first time can be an "educational" experience. And living with a long distance company isn't any different. Because some companies may not give you all the services you're used to.

For instance, with some companies you have to spend a certain amount before you qualify for their special volume discounts. With some others, voice quality may vary. But when you choose AT&T, there won't be any surprises when you move in. You'll get the same high-quality, trouble-free service you're used to.

With calls that sound as close as next door. Guaranteed 60% and 40% discounts off our Day Rate. — so you can talk during the times you can relax. Immediate credit for wrong numbers. Operator assistance and collect calling. So when you're asked to choose a long distance company, choose AT&T. Because whether you're into Mozart or metal, quality is the one thing everyone can agree on.

Reach out and touch someone.

Flaming debris injures 30 spectators

Fatemeh, a junior in Wharton, was injured in the explosion. She said she was burned by the smoke and had to go to the hospital. She is now recovering with her family at home.

Fatemeh said she was sleeping in her dormitory when she heard the explosion. She immediately ran outside and saw smoke rising into the sky. She said she felt a strong blast and then felt pain in her arms and legs.

Fatemeh said she tried to call for help but was unable to make a connection. She said she was able to get to the emergency room by her family and was treated for burns and smoke inhalation.

Fatemeh said she was worried about her family and friends who were also in the dormitory. She said she heard that some of them were injured and she is hoping they are ok.

Fatemeh said she is grateful to the university for their quick response and the help they provided to her and her family.

Fatemeh said she is planning to return to class as soon as she can and is looking forward to the future.

Fatemeh said she is thankful for the support she received from her friends and family and is optimistic about the future.

Soccer squadEnglish squad, 6-0

By Eq Ged

It has been said more than once in this world that statistics tell only a part of the story. But in the case of the Penn/Wayne State University defeat of London University of England played in Wednesday. The result was not revealed until the final whistle sounded, but the look on face of London University goalkeeping offered clues to the match that so thoroughly that it seems both teams were equal in the first half that half that Penn gave away.

The Quakers outshot London, 8-0, in the first half, but none of the shots found the back of the net. Penn had a chance of scoring an own goal in the first half when it was denied by London goalkeeper Paul Robinson (44th), Tony Whiteside (14th), and David Chalmers (9th) accounted for those Quaker tallies.

Although it appears as though all is well for Penn soccer at this time, there remain some unanswered questions, especially with the offense. Nothing was learned about how the defense is able to withstand pressure, simply because there was no pressure to withstand. The same can be said about the goalkeeping. Bob Behar and Mike Masters each scored a goal in the second half as London added five goals to Penn's two. Each goal was as well scored in the second half.

"We have a way to go, and we have to get our stuff together," Wright said. "But it's not only..."

Littlepage discusses reasons for move

Men's basketball coach Craig Littlepage resigned from his position at the University Friday afternoon to accept the head coaching position at Rutgers University. Littlepage's move was made after the administration's announcement of his resignation on the reasons behind the move.

THE DAILY PENNSYLVANIAN: Are you looking forward to a situation at Rutgers where you won't have to deal with the constraints of the Ivy League?

CRAG LITTLEPAGE: The greatest attraction to this particular job, for me, is the fact that I won't have to deal with the constraints of the Ivy League. There are certain other things that are different in the Ivy League that I don't want to say are not all that responsible either, but I think I can spend some time concentrating on making sure that we're doing some of those things which are very vital in the head coaching position.

The other part of it is that I'm getting back in the trenches from doing exactly what I want to do, not just doing what I was doing as a professional, but doing it in the same way as I want to do it. I think there's a freedom to that. Making sure that we're doing things that I think are important. And being able to put that, particularly in the area that I'm involved in, the coaches, the players. All the people involved in the process of the sport, and being able to say yes or no to other coaches.

DP: How was that a decision was this for you?

LITTLEPAGE: I've been talking about this decision for several months now. It's not just that I'm playing, and I have been playing, and I have played. But I think that I have been playing in my mind for a long time, and that I finally made that decision because I wanted to do something very special, achieve something very special, and that's the decision that I made. And it's a very important decision for me.

DP: And as an individual becomes successful have opportunities to move in different directions that will be more restrictive in crucial areas, decisions have to be made at that point as to what you want to do. So you're moving now that this is an Ivy League move and you're going to accept the decision of the other coaches at Penn?

LITTLEPAGE: That's not my philosophy. That's not how I feel. I'm talking about the entire athletic program, not just the basketball program. I think that there are more opportunities for growth in the Ivy League. And I think that we can do something special, and I think that we can do something special in the Ivy League. And I think that the Ivy League is an opportunity to do our jobs to the best of our abilities within the framework of the league and the framework of the University. And I think that it's a very important opportunity for us to be successful.

DP: You speak about inconsistencies in financial aid and scholarships.

LITTLEPAGE: It's about the whole issue of the academic rules for admissions. To admit or not to admit, the student-athlete who is under that academic index, cannot get into school. And how about financial aid?

DP: How hard of a decision was this for you?

LITTLEPAGE: The greatest attraction to this particular job is the opportunity to coach and to spend less time in the academic area. It's not just about the coaching. It's more about the coaching. It's more about the personal reasons -- the concern for the student-athlete.

I think that we have to address some very, very critical issues in our athletic program. And I think that we have to address those issues in the framework of the University. I think that we have to address those issues in the framework of the University and the league. And I think that we have to address those issues in the framework of the University and the league and the school. And I think that we have to address those issues in the framework of the University and the league and the school. And I think that we have to address those issues in the framework of the University and the league and the school.

DP: Are you looking at students that as a group should be singled out and given preferential financial aid packages. I think that that is a decision that we should look into.

Beeten, Crowley ponder future

Penn's assistant coaches may follow Littlepage to Rutgers

By DAVID GOULDING
The future of the Quaker's basketball assistant coaches is up in the air after a pair of key players on the staff announced their departure last week. Former head coach Bob Littlepage resigned from his job to accept the head coaching position at Rutgers. Now, head coach Tom Schneider is looking for replacements.

Both announcements were significant to Scott Beeten and Bruce Lefkowitz, the two Quaker assistant coaches. Littlepage's resignation meant that the assistants' boss would be leaving. Since Littlepage had been hired in the wake of Littlepage's resignation, and both had decided with difficulty. At this point this morning that Schneider has made his decision, it's up to them to accept or decline.

"I like Tom Schneider a lot," Beeten continued. "I'm pretty sure I'll leave -- I have the opportunity to talk with him before the decision is made."

Lefkowitz was also undecided on whether to accept the offer from Littlepage.

"Of course I'm disappointed. I have a step away from a dream come true."

tribute since 1982. "My situation is up in the air. I have things to think about on a personal basis. I want to talk to Tom one more time."

Littlepage expressed disappointment that neither of his assistants had been named to replace him.

"For obvious reasons, I supported my assistant coaches. Among those obvious reasons," Littlepage pointed to his confidence in his assistants, the desire to minimize the transition and the fact that the Penn basketball season opens in less than three months. Littlepage also expressed regret that he had not been made aware that his assistant coaches would have come with him from the program.

"I'm happy with the decision," Schneider said. "I mentioned to both of them that they would have jobs, that they would welcome to come and join me -- and I will honor that commitment. But those are career decisions that have to be made. Schneider has also offered both assistant coaches positions on his staff.

But while both Beeten and Crowley denied that leaving Littlepage would be hard, they said that the decision to follow Littlepage would be a step away from a dream come true. Lefkowitz said, discussing the possibility of moving to Rutgers. "I have the opportunity to make a whole lot more money and work for someone who I consider tries."

Littlepage resigns; Schneider hired

Tom Schneider, who has been named head coach of the Penn women's tennis team and was the only player on the 1984 U.S. Open men's singles championship, will leave the University of Pennsylvania to take the top post at the Continental Illinois National Bank of Chicago.

Schneider, a one-time Penn assistant coach who was fired last season after the team won the 1984 National Invitation Tournament, had been under fire recently for what some fans believe was a lack of commitment to the team's success.

"I think it's a great opportunity," said Schneider, who was the only player on the 1984 U.S. Open men's singles championship.

The move was announced by Littlepage, who has been the coach at the University of Pennsylvania for the past four seasons.

"We're very excited to have Tom Schneider join the team," said Littlepage, who has been at the University of Pennsylvania for the past four seasons.

"Tom is a top-tier coach, and we're glad to have him on our staff."
