AIDS victims are outcast by society

In a country where political candidates often are shot down for opposing abortion, CASTILLE seeks to win DA’s office because he has no plans to do just that — "I’ll take my campaign anywhere and everywhere." (Continued on page 10)

Castille seeks to win DA’s office

Candidate demands ‘crime and punishment’

By JOSIAH S. SOUI

Castille offered a striking alternative to the 'crime and punishment' aphas of his campaign in just three words — "I’ll take my campaign anywhere and everywhere." (Continued on page 10)

But not all agreed that the move signalled a break-through in either side’s attitude.

"On the other hand," he added. "I think the events in South Africa have really outpaced the way of sanctions." (Continued on page 9)

Profs call sanctions too little, too late

University foreign policy experts said they think that the Reagan Administration’s economic sanctions on South Africa will have little effect in bringing an end to apartheid.

"I think it’s basically too little too late," History Associate Professor Lee Castellus said this week. "I mean he’s just trying to really please the Congress." (Continued on page 9)

Report: TMI workers falsified radiation data

HARRISBURG (AP) — A Pennsylvania Commonwealth Court judge yesterday released a report summarizing the findings of a 13-month investigation into the handling of radiation emissions at TMI’s Market Street Project because of inconsistencies in the way results were discarded, and who measured them.

"I think the sanctions as such are not going to be very important anymore as symbolic acts," Castellus said that the U.S. should have asked sooner, adding that the withdrawal of the French ambassador to South Africa was a more timely and effective act.

Negotiations set to resume today in paper strike

By JOSE KEPPE

A newspaper strike ended with labor representation and officials of the city’s two daily newspapers meeting back to the conference table.

The Philadelphia Inquirer and the Philadelphia Daily News, flushed, appeared on the conference room, but some union members were a bit skeptical.

"We’re very hopeful," said a Newspaper Guild representative, who added that to resume negotiations, "Our latest offer is a positive sign that they’re really interested in this contract."

"I think there’s a real possibility of a resolution," said a Guild representative, "I think we’re just too close to call it on the table now."

The talks have been move- d from the Franklin Plaza Hotel to the Federal Mediation Services Office in Washington.

Each of the labor groups will present the negotiations issues with Paul Popham, president of the Gay Men’s Health Crisis in New York.

"It is the tears of a stricken 5-year-old," he said. "In lives lost, in tears shed, the toll is incalculable," said Paul Popham.

Ferraro biography to hit book stores next month

WASHINGTON — Geraldine Ferraro's book, "Power Play," is due to be published next month and is being heralded as a major event in the history of American politics.

The book, which will be released by Simon and Schuster, is expected to be a bestseller and is already being promoted heavily by the publisher.

Ferraro, the first woman to run for the vice presidency in a major-party primary, has been a controversial figure in American politics. She was the Democratic nominee for vice president in 1984, but lost to Walter Mondale in the general election.

In her new book, Ferraro, who is married to New York City Mayor David Dinkins, will discuss her experiences in the 1984 campaign and her views on the future of American politics.

The book is expected to draw considerable attention from readers, especially women and minorities, who have been traditionally underrepresented in American politics.

The release of Ferraro's book is likely to spark controversy, as some critics have accused her of being too ambitious and of having a confrontational style.

However, Ferraro's supporters argue that she is a strong and intelligent politician who has been unfairly portrayed by the media.

The book is scheduled to be released on September 15, 1985.

Bismarck, N.D. — State tourism officials fear N. Dakota advertises itself n nuclear power yesterday demonstrated outside the Three Mile Island's Unit I nuclear plant at Limerick on the Delaware River, and residents of nursing homes in the community from prosecution. After 11 a.m. The jet went down on state game lands in a remote area after making a 900-foot bomb run.

No one was injured, and there was no damage to property.

Foster said the A-7s had dropped canisters that they were unable to identify.

He said the jet had been in the area for two years, but it was not known for sure if it had dropped any ordnance.

The plane was a low-altitude target drone, and it was being used for training purposes.

The accident occurred at Limerick, which is about 30 miles southeast of Philadelphia, and near the location of the Three Mile Island nuclear disaster in 1979.

The plane, which is owned by the Pennsylvania National Guard, was returning from a training mission.

A 28-count presentment, which was filed in District Court in Lancaster County, ruled that Vivian Horner, 43, a former secretary for former legislator J. D. Bigi, was guilty of perjury. Horner is accused of lying under oath about her associations with Bigi.

RULING — Three kinds of flu might hit Penn, Health Dept. says

WASHINGTON — The pilot for NBC's "Hell Town" bureau said on Monday he would go on the air with a program on the 15th that already has a rating eighth with its repeat broadcast last week.

"Several months ago, this had been a new program, but now people are starting to get interested in it," the pilot said.

U.S. sends ambassador back to S. Africa with message

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The American ambassador returned to South Africa yesterday after a seven-week absence. He had been recalled from Pretoria and Pretoria, the South African capital, amid growing tensions. The ambassador, Charles Blacker, said he had received a "very important message" to deliver to South African President P. W. Botha. He would not say what the message was.

The ambassador returned a day after Reagan announced economic sanctions against South Africa.

The sanctions are not immediately expected to affect the flow of trade between the two countries. But they are likely to cause "a very important message", to Botha.

Reagan withdrew Blacker nearly three months ago.

Under apartheid, South Africa's legal system of segregation, five million whites rule 20 million colored, blacks. A year of anti-apartheid violence has killed a reported 1000 people, most of them black.

The sanctions are aimed at punishing Botha for his government's refusal to commit itself to a "credible" road map to political freedom in South Africa, the administration has said.

Reagan announced the sanctions this week after a meeting with Botha in Pretoria.

U. City Science Center undergoes major expansion

By DELLA MAKOWER

A large brick building set on the 3400 block of Market Street. University students usually think it's a part of Drexel University — and Drexel students before it's been associated with the University.

This building contains the administrative offices of the University City Science Center, a large, independent research park devoted to the promotion of science and technology to Philadelphia. It was, in fact, the first facility of its kind in an urban environment.

"There are many other centers scattered throughout the country, where there's room to expand," University City Science Center Communications Director Suzanne White said last week. "It's tricky to expand in the city."

"The science center has come a long way since its formation in 1964," she said.

A "dearth of Delaware Valley leaders got together and decided it was time to create a channel through which people could work together to solve some of the problems of the 60s," she added.

This building contains the administrative offices of the University City Science Center, an organization which attempts to unite about 75 technically-oriented companies that rent space, to the science center. It is set for completion in December.

"It's a very convenient location for faculty members and graduate students who are starting businesses and for companies who want to be near universities for research purposes," she said.

"We're planning to expand part of University City and Temple University by building another small building facility in North Philadelphia to house faculty and students. We're still having discussions," Science Center representative Alice Cowell said last week. "No decisions have been made yet. Universities don't make decisions too rapidly."

The Cost of Education

By Adrian Goldszmidt

...the issue in the contract is, it must be time for a booming education. As a result of aafsion of a three- year contract for public school teachers should aren't so sought, but some City Council members warn... approval of the extra funding required by the school system. If the Council does not approve the additional money, the School Board will have to consider alternatives for funding the school system.

The School Board and City Council must work together or the city will suffer. A contract is a con- tract, and it should not be stuck down. If the Coun- cil and the School Board have promised much to the teachers, it should work to prevent such prob- lems in the future. The teachers should not be left alone because two of the city's governing bodies cannot reach a meeting of the minds...

The new teachers' contract is meant to foster bet- ter education, but if the funding issue leads to another strike, the students, as usual, will suffer. Most Pennsylvania School Board Superintendents Committee must present to the Council, detailed for why the school system needs additional money. We must keep our long-term plans to maximize the education in expenses...

The cost to the city is substantial: an increase of $236 a percentage gotten more than they expected to bargain for.

Moving On Up
By Sue Jung

About this time last year, I was just sitting after making my final decision to attend the University of Pennsylvania. Like every other incoming freshman, I anticipated college life with both excitement and trepidation. As a city-dweller, I had not lived in a dormitory for two years, so the idea of living in a residential setting was intimidating. I was both eager and anxious about the transition to college life.

Through the University of Pennsylvania's online orientation, I learned about my college, its resources, and its community. I also learned about the importance of being nice to the people behind the scenes. No matter what smart remark you may make, you should always be respectful and kind. The University engages a Reader/Advisor Program in which students are assigned to a Reader/Advisor who will help them with any questions or concerns.

As a new student, I was nervous about making friends. I was afraid that I'd get lost in the shuffle of the large Penn population. However, I soon realized that there were many opportunities to make friends and that there were many resources available to me. The University provided a variety of programs and events to help new students integrate into the community.

I was also afraid that academics would overwhelm me, but I was determined to succeed. I attended classes, participated in discussions, and studied diligently. I was grateful for the support of my academic advisor and the resources available to me. I learned how to manage my time effectively and prioritize my tasks.

I found that there were many opportunities for social activities. I joined a club and attended social events, which helped me to meet new people and expand my social circle. I also learned how to balance academic and social responsibilities.

Throughout my time at Penn, I encountered many challenges. I realized that I was not the only one who felt overwhelmed and that there were many resources available to help. I learned how to seek help and how to be proactive in my own learning.

I am grateful for the opportunities provided by the University of Pennsylvania. I learned how to be a responsible and independent learner. I developed valuable skills that will serve me well in my future endeavors. I am proud to be a Penn student and look forward to all that the future will bring.

Penn looks towards another strong season despite inexperience

BO NEIL WEINBERGER

Earnestly keeping high of a generation Gym as the Penn volleyball team prepares for a competitive 1985 season, Coach Barbara Sagula that there are too many tough teams this season’s lough opponents.

Sagula said. “Last year we were solid, but we’ve been working on teamwork and it should all fall together very much.”

In last season, the Quakers experienced moderate success, folding 0-6 in the Ivy and second in the ICSJ (dining only to Princeton) as they placed 20-17 at the University of Maine. But despite last year’s accomplishments, there is room for improvement.

“Be so,” Sagula said, “our pass has been much more advanced this year. Things have just not been falling in place to win this year.”

The Quakers have been working together on the floor to get the ball to their players and put it on the back line to create easy kills. Four freshmen and five sophomores on the squad of 13 players.

“It is definitely a strong team,” Sagula said, “and we have some experienced players at key positions.

Senior co-captain Kari Sonnenstiel will be looked for the leadership only for her ability, but also for her experience. She is the only four-year veteran on the squad and she is one of two seniors.

“Last year we had good leadership and experience this year,” sophomore Trista Kibbey said. “Our experienced players will also control and set the tone for the team.

“Reicher will be added to the team,” Sagula added. “She’s a great player and her position in the middle makes her a key foundation for the team. Coming off of a season in which she led the team in blocking and serving, she’s in a great position.”

The other senior and co-captain for the Quakers is Deena Crane. A sophomore transfer from Villanova, Casey led the team in assists last year, and was expected to return. She was also named Penn’s most improved player.

“Tina Sonnenstiel is another player who is consistent in the setting position,” Sagula said. “It’s the last post where she left off last year.”

Sophomores Mary Whitman, Alexis Hough, Alison Hough and Kibbey will also make an impact this year.

They’ve been pleasantly surprised this year,” Sagula said. “We’ve also have some freshmen that have been working extremely hard.”

Sophomore and freshman pair, Tina K. Tomahorn will also be apart of this season’s Quaker team. “We are a young team,” Sagula said, “but our sophomores are experienced and improved from last year. Our freshmen will be very close to them and they will fill in very well.”

Sagula said that there are too many tough teams this year. “Our schedule is not that hard,” she said. “Last year, we were just introducing the team.”

“We should beat Temple,” she said, “but I’m also looking forward to the Ivies, especially because it’s been quite a few years.”

“It’s definitely our toughest schedule,” Sagula said. “But with the girls giving it their all, we do expect to be working and improving and it is part of the plan.”

According to Sagula, “Penn State is another team that has been working very hard. It’s another team that will keep us on our toes.”

Sagula said that the team has been working on teamwork and “it will lead to success.”

The Berndt legend is woven into the fabric of Penn's athletic history. In the competitive and ever-changing football world, Berndt's influence bred more success. But that success has filled the vacancy with a proven winner. At the same time, the 1971 Villanova graduate and Philadelphia native — Dino Folino — comes to Penn after four seasons at Ohio State under Woody Hayes for two seasons, helping the Buckeyes finish in the 1971 and 1976 Rose Bowls. Folino followed the opportunity to work with Berndt and perpetuate Penn's winning traditions as his decision to come to Penn.

"First of all, I think he's a very knowledgeable individual about the game and, secondly, about working with young people. And that's a very important aspect of what I hope to do. I feel I'm very fortunate and I'm very lucky to be here. And I'm very fortunate and I'm very lucky to have the opportunity to work with Dino Folino, who I feel is in that mold."

"He's that kind of guy. He's from that 'big, big program,' so he has no ego. That's a very important aspect of what I hope to do. I feel I'm very fortunate and I'm very lucky to be here. And I'm very fortunate and I'm very lucky to have the opportunity to work with Dino Folino, who I feel is in that mold."

"I'm looking forward to working with Dino. He's had a lot of success in the Big Ten conference, and I think he's a great coach. I'm very fortunate to be here, and I'm very lucky to have the opportunity to work with Dino Folino, who I feel is in that mold."
