No Parking Zone

Four major buildings planned for University City will boost the area's economy, but residents fear the construction may make parking a nightmare.

By LAURA MICHAEL

As West Philadelphia's parking lots arc replaced by high-rise office buildings, some residents are in favor of the move. City officials, on the other hand, believe the project may not have been thought through carefully.

With the scheduled construction of four major buildings in University City, residents say they were not consulted, and they feel the project may not have been thought through carefully.

During the last years of the 18th century, some women who had been convicted for murder had been sentenced to death by beheading, a fate that was later replaced by the death penalty by poisoning. In 1821, the practice of poisoning was abolished in most countries, and the death penalty by hanging was introduced. The death penalty by hanging was later replaced by the death penalty by electrocution, which was introduced in the United States in 1890. The death penalty by electrocution was later replaced by the death penalty by lethal injection, which was introduced in the United States in 1976.

Wharton prods exhibit their work at Faculty Club

ROBERT PASNALL

Two Wharton School professors began an art exhibit at the Faculty Club this week, featuring about 20 paintings and drawings done over the past several years, as a sort of a survey of poetry by one of the area's most well-known poets and art historians.

Management Professor Howard Paleyman and founder of the Wharton Art Department, said that the exhibit, which is open to the public, will run through the end of the month. Paleyman, who has taught at the Wharton School for the past 10 years, said that the exhibit will be a way to introduce students to the world of fine arts.

"We have a number of students who are interested in art, and we want to give them an opportunity to see the work of these artists," he said. "We hope that this exhibit will inspire them to pursue their own artistic endeavors."

Los Angeles - World War II ended yesterday for Sergeant George Carstens of Half Moon Beach, Calif., who was captured by the Japanese in 1942 and remained in the United States, but added years as a fugitive.

Carstens, 64, who lives near Denver under the name Dennis Whiles, has written a book about the war in Japan, published yesterday to coincide with his final settlement with the Japanese.

He was the last of 2,006 escaped American prisoners of war to be returned to the United States. He has been married since 1942 to Jean, and has not been home since 1963.

He was arrested by the U.S. government in 1963 when he tried to return to Japan to see his parents. He escaped from Fort Deming in New Mexico in 1963, but was arrested in California in 1964 and held for 18 months.

He said that he escaped because he knew that deportation proceedings would begin anyway.

Yussef acknowledged that "my chances statistically are very slim. But each application is considered as a different entity — each one must stand on its own."

Another Heinz aide said that for his sake to make such a commitment to a case "I hope to provide overwhelming humanitarian circumstances to the courts."

Yussef thinks that the fact that Lebanon has political ties with the United States could help his chances for political asylum.

"Politically, it's harder for the U.S. government to grant asylum because we have ties, but it doesn't necessarily mean the courts will be lenient," he said.

Although he said he cannot predict the outcome of the case or even what will be needed, Yussef said that he hopes he will be granted asylum on humanitarian grounds.

"I don't think I'd go back to Lebanon until stability returns to the country," Yussef said. "Intelligence officers will probably keep an eye on me and I'm hoping on settling through normal channels, but it's uncertain. We'll go to a private firm."
Senate Executive Committee discusses representation

Some faculty members would like to see greater representation in the Senate, because they feel that there are no steps toward a faculty representatives system.

Temple said that at-large representatives sometimes do not represent the needs of the entire faculty.

"The role of the 12 at-large representatives is to prevent any one group from making decisions," he said.

"I feel that there are too many members of the Senate," he added. "Many members of the Senate see significant contributions of the at-large representatives."

Another proposal discussed centered changes in the way the leaders of the Senate determine the candidates for the election. Temple said that many faculty members think that the present system, in which a committee interviews a slate and asks candidates to run, is unfair.

"We do not think that elections are fair," he said, "unless the faculty can make an informed choice — to be confronted with a list of eight candidates who you don't know seems to be elective for the sake of elections."

Temple's said last night that he doesn't think that there is a need for changes. "I don't think that the Senate will consolidate restructuring the nomination system so that members of the nominating committee will be elected by the full faculty."

Other issues discussed in the Senate included changes in the admissions process and the Senate's role in the School's Head Injury Clinical Research Center.

Abel said that faculty members are concerned about the future of the lab, which was closed by the University this summer after the government temporarily cut its funding for failing to comply with animal welfare guidelines.

Abel, who called the meeting "unnecessary," said that the faculty is waiting for further government action before discussing the fate of the laboratory.

Women's group asks Cardinal to help stop anti-abortion violence

In a statement yesterday, the Northeast Women's Center of Philadelphia asked Philadelphia Archbishop John Cardinal O'Malley to condemn anti-abortion violence.

The letter to O'Malley addressed the latest in a series of anti-abortion protests, calling the demonstrations "unjust," "cruel" and "reflecting fanatic religious ideology." Center administrator Mary Banecker said.

The letter added that the protests are not peaceful, but are indeed in the business of violence, and that the protestors' actions violate the Philadelphia Municipal Justice System that views people as criminals, so they don't get the kind of protection they deserve, and it is difficult to enforce restraints, she said.

The language for the civil suit are that the protestors' actions violate the Philadelphia Municipal Justice System that views people as criminals, so they don't get the kind of protection they deserve, and it is difficult to enforce restraints, she said.

The 12 people who have been named in the suit have all been served process, and are now entering a confinement period.

"Their suits are so deterrent for these people and we wanted them to be personally, financially responsible," Banecker said.

"The most we ask the suit is to get damages and costs is what we asked for.

Strausser echoed these sentiments. She added.

"We broke the news of the suit to the northeast women's center leaders.

In a related incident, the Northeast Women's Center also filed a federal lawsuit last month against the Northeast Pennsylvania Pro-Life Center and Gerbaud, an anti-abortionist activity. Strausser echoed these sentiments.

"I think he could be a very calming influence, friendly, and we wanted to bring him in to help us in our demonstration.

Strausser said that the protest is intended to be a series of anti-abortion protests, calling the demonstrations "unjust," "cruel" and "reflecting fanatic religious ideology." Center administrator Mary Banecker said.

Negotiators agree on non-economic issues

"Postponed until this evening," Mayor Wilson Goode announced that PNI had been postponed until this evening between the mailers' union and the negotiating committee and PNI. But Goode added that "we don't yet know if an agreement can be reached...".

Goode said the meeting scheduled for this morning would still take place. "We anticipate that the negotiations will continue today."

Goode added that along with possible parking problems, the planners are struggling with the present "non-economic issues...".

"Parking is not so agonizingly competitive for local residents," Goode said. "It's almost a major accomplishment."

Goode also said he feels his organization could help to set this parking problem straight. "We have plans to do that," he said. "We're going to work on the problem of parking."
Brewers down Yankees in 11th

NEW YORK (AP) - John Tugger pitched his third straight one-hitter and scored the Cardinals, break a four-game losing streak, and drove in the fifth, leading St. Louis before the sixth, when Rafael Rangel drove in the fifth, scoring with a one-out homer off the New York Yankees in the sixth.

Jaworski, Barnes chose to attend Lehigh.

"We used to "beat" Bucknell," Berres said.

"Not true," Schaefer countered. "It was about 50-50 I have the teams."

Schaefer has not yet announced who his assistant coach will be. He has offered the position to Frank McInally, assistant of Ranior at St. Louis. McInally was a member of the Quaker basketball team when he was a student in the late 1970's.

SDM SENIOR WINS NATIONAL AWARD

Congratulations to Agnes Ozierski, 1985 recipient of the AADS/Warner Lambert Preventive Dentistry Scholarship. This new award, initiated in 1985, is a nationally competitive scholarship program which provides $5,000 toward the tuition and fees of five outstanding dental students who are entering their final year in dental school. The scholarship recognizes both academic achievement and innovative contributions related to preventive dentistry. Agnes was a participant in the Summer Research Training Program for two years and conducted research related to the plaque-inhibitory effects of commercial dental products with Dr. Samuel Yankell.

Parker testifies at cocaine trial

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Dave Parker said yesterday that he introduced Shelby Christian to the world of drug distribution in 1984.

Parker, who is on trial for conspiring to distribute cocaine, said he brought Christian to the Pittsburgh Pirates in May of 1984. Parker said the two-time National League batting champion then offered Christian an opportunity to sell drugs.

"We were looking for new revenue centers," Parker said. "And I introduced him."

Parker, who became a ''one-man band'' after his playing career ended, gained "unneeded" access to the Pirates' ticket office because of his friendship and sometimes traveled with the team on road trips with Parker's request. Parker said he sometimes arranged games for Christian and had become his "financial advisor."

"For a while, he came in the back door because of the rules," Parker said. He also said the Pirates knew nothing about Christian's role.

New York gets double dose of pennant fever

NEW YORK (AP) — The Big Apple has seen more excitement in the past few days than it has in the past few seasons. In the five or six years prior to 1981, New York had only one pennant team. Now the New York Giants and the New York Yankees are both in the pennant race.

If the Brooklyn Dodgers and New York Giants were in a pennant race, it would be close. But they’re not. It’s the same old story. The Giants are in a pennant race, but they’re not playing contenders. For New York, the Giants have been in a pennant race for 11 years. The last time they were in a pennant race was in 1970, the year after the Mets came in third, six games behind Pittsburgh: the Yanks were the division champs.

Parker said that the defendants, Curtis Strong, 36, of Philadelphia, and Dennis Christian, 38, of Indianapolis, also became so well-known among his former teammates that he was invited to the Pirates' 1980 New Year's Eve party at his home for former teammates.

"I introduced him to the education system," Parker said. "He was friends with a lot of guys in the League."

The two-time National League batting champion said he was selling cocaine in Pittsburgh and Cleveland in 1981 and furnished cocaine to Parker, who was a star player for the Pirates. Parker said he had introduced Christian to the world of drug distribution in 1984.

"You could say that," Parker said. "You could say that."

The trial is expected to continue at least through the week. Since testimony began last Thursday, 36 career cocaine players have been linked to each other, their knowledge of one another and the distribution system.
A.D. search list has five candidates

Committee goes on with process

By DAVID GOLDBERG

The search goes on. At least that's how it must appear at the start of the search committee to name a new Athletic Director, and certainly like the search committee was continuing to evaluate candidates to fill the position vacated by Charles Harvis, who left the University on July 31 to accept a similar position at Arizona State University.

The search committee has evaluated a large number of people, "said Mr. "we've arrived with a list of five candidates."

Paul Fick, Assistant to the President and chairman of the committee, and Charles Jacobson, Director of Student Life and a committee member, both agreed with Messrs. That a list of five candidates was a worthwhile list to work with. The committee's five candidates consisted of names on the list.

"We have a lot of good talent," Messrs. said, "but that doesn't mean that more can't come into the picture."

Number of key returnees, there is cause for optimism.

DIA KNEON COUNTY DAILY TIMES

The Quaker men's cross-country team that will start the 1985 season sans one of their top performers is looking forward to the season. Last year's team was a single-season record of 27 wins and losses. This year, the team has the potential of winning again.

"The team's top performers last season were Jim Luppeny, Penn's Associate Director at George Washington University, and Kevin Powell will rotate his lineup. In order to enhance the chances of a repeat of its fine performance last season, the team has been working hard throughout the summer, a conditioning goal which was affected by the fact that he had been up in the air about it for some time.

"I'm a big boy. I'm coming back very strong," Mr. said. "You get over that."

Beeten added that he had been in a somewhat of the same position as Mr. Schneider was in.

"I have to be careful, but I'm still going to play."

Mr. was affected by the fact that he had been up in the air about it for some time. "I have to be careful, but I'm still going to play.

"I'm not sure what I can do after the first meet but I do have a lot of potential."
