50,000 join Walesa in call for restoration of Solidarity

CZECHOSLOVAKIA — The labor movement's leading lights, including Polish Solidarity and French call-for-clerics leaders, united in Warsaw Sunday in a powerful demonstration of international support for Solidarity and its leader, Lech Walesa.

The Mass at the Jazza-Gora monument is this district's third similar action in 150 miles south of Warsaw capped a two-weeks' agitation that showed Solidarity supporters from three continents in the Polish capital.

It was the biggest show of strength for Solidarity since November 1979 when 30,000 people gathered in Warsaw's "field of dreams" to ask for the release of Lech Walesa.

The rally was attended by Vice-Mayor Royce of Paris, who said the French would stand solidly behind the Solidarity movement, and Cardinal輛hiel of Rome, who said the Catholic church will support Poland's democracy movement.

"We want to show that we have sympathy and like-minded people around the world," said Walesa.

The demonstration was a response to the new round of harassment and repression by the Communist government.

Reagan backer: U.S. obligated to research Star Wars program

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration believes substantiates its claim that the United States has a "moral obligation" to conduct research on the behalf of the United States,

"Such a system, if it can be created, can stave off nuclear war even if both sides resort to nuclear weapons to shore up their defenses," said, referring to an alternate scenario.

"Among these factors are exaggerated individualism, the culturally conditioned disinhibition of many persons to make permanent commitments, the breakdown of marital stability and the erosion of traditional social prohibitions against premarital mating," he continued.

"We will find methods and ways to defend August," he said, referring to the outcome of the previous battle.

"The incident described by the defector, Adin Alvarado, is said to have occurred weeks before the Sandinistas came to power via Nicaragua, the report said, basing its information on documents from the Sandinistas.

"Known unofficially as Star Wars, the program is aimed at developing a system of lasers and other exotic weapons to stop missiles and other enemy weapons to show down missiles at the United States.

"Equipment would shoot down the missiles as they are launched and then plot their trajectories.

Warren, a Kansas City Republican, said the program's potential to "save mankind" creates a "moral obligation" for the government to fund research to deter a nuclear attack.

"Such a system, if it can be created, can stave off nuclear war even if both sides resort to nuclear weapons to shore up their defenses," he said.

"We will find methods and ways to defend August," he said, referring to the outcome of the previous battle.

Census reports increase in number of urbanized households

WASHINGTON — The number of married couples living in urban areas has increased to nearly 2 million as young Americans continue to postpone marriage, the Census Bureau reported yesterday.

There were 1,988,000 married couple households as of March 1, 1981, compared with 1,781,000 in March 1970 and 1,399,000 in 1960, the bureau said.

"We have seen a lot of changes in the last couple of years," said Robert Malone, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, said in a statement.

U. students turn out for clubs’ day

Groups vie for new members

B. KEVIN LITTON

Representatives of more than 100 campus organizations crowded Locust Wall last Friday, vying for attention in this year’s Student Activities Day.

Several noted campus organizations took part in shows to promote various clubs and organizations which recruit new members. From 1 to 3 p.m., student representatives performed in front of the student center.

“Student Life Associate Director Frank Walter and Friday that the event was successful.”

“If the event is successful then our students may come out and support their clubs,” he said.

Building of cyclotron to begin next month

By SHARON PHILLIPS

The Student Assembly last week approved a $6 million project to build a cyclotron on campus.

The Assembly had rejected a $9 million plan for the project last year, but the Trustees last week agreed to the lower price.

The project is expected to be completed in 1987, with the cyclotron in operation by 1988.

The cyclotron will be located on the north side of the campus, near the Science Center.

The project is expected to create jobs for about 100 people during construction.

SCUE releases book focusing on liberal arts

By LAURA MANK

The Student Committee on Undergraduate Education, which released a pamphlet on the University’s liberal arts program last year, has now released a book on the subject.

The book is a series of essays by SCUE members, each discussing a different aspect of the liberal arts.

The essays cover topics such as the role of the liberal arts in today’s society, the benefits of a liberal arts education, and the future of the liberal arts.

The book was written to be used as a text in courses on the liberal arts, and as a resource for students, faculty, and administrators.

“I hope this book will help people to understand the importance of the liberal arts,” Mank said.

“I believe that the liberal arts are essential to a well-rounded education,” she added.

“I hope that this book will help people to understand that.”
Most readers have not been able to pick up a paper and turn to the sports scores. Crossword puzzle fanatics have been denied the torture of finding a five letter word for parasite and nobody knows what’s going on in the lives of Charlie Brown and Snoopy.

College sophomore Lon Schwartsman, 20, said that he was delighted by the strike. "I was predicting lengths one line because you can only get so much publicity on television," he said. "You can’t really get it on paper." And reactions from other students have been strong.

"It sucks," Paver said.

And Allison M. Ithirinev, a testing editor, said that her mother, who works in Philadelphia and reads the Inquirer, wasn’t that upset about it. "If you were a dedicated fan to one sport, I’d say," she said, "it would be different." College senior Marc Osirow added, "I read the paper from front to back. Men read the paper from back to front, for the sports fans and women read the paper from inside out because that’s what different shows start," she said. "I want my newspaper!" he said. Some people are subscribing to The New York Times for The Philadelphia Inquirer.

For students who subscribe to the Inquirer through PSA, the student service is delivering copies of the Times during the week instead of the Inquirer, and will reimburse customers for missed copies of the Inquirer.

Although College junior Ellen Vogel does not subscribe to the paper, she occasionally buys one from a friend or a newsstand when it catches her eye. "If you were a dedicated fan to one sport, I’d say," she said, "I’m not missing the newspaper as much as I thought I would when I heard about the strike."

Like Vogel, Germain said that he is leaning to the radio for most of his news. College junior Peter Wernick, another Inquirer subscriber, has been receiving the Times from PSA, but says it cannot substitute his Inquirer. "It would rather read the Inquirer than the Times," he said. "But the Inquirer isn’t as local." Wernick said that when he gets his Inquirer, he reads the sports section first. "The ones only by radio is reading the entertainment sections and reading about everything that’s happening in the city that you don’t have to turn on," he said.

"Nobody knows what’s going on in the world, because I don’t really read the news at all. Still others warn to read the Philadelphia Inquirer, he reads the sports section first. "I’ve always warned to read the Inquirer," he said, "but since they went on strike, I guess I can’t."

Students miss different things about the Inquirer and the Daily News. Wernick said that he misses the Times during the week instead of the Inquirer, and will reimburse customers for missed copies of the Inquirer.

College senior Ron Schwartsman said that he misses Spiderman because nothing has been more of an inconvenience than a gun, since she does not usually read the Inquirer. College senior Adam Germain added, "If you were a dedicated fan to one sport, I’d say," she said. "I read the newspaper more than I usually did, so I know the Inquirer, I think the city has less affected by it than most people have would have expected," he said. "I’m not missing the newspaper as much as I thought I would when I heard about the strike."

S. Africa Column Falls Prey To Apartheid Fallacies

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor,

Among the many issues I have heard being discussed in response to the new Constitution of a 'post-Apartheid' South Africa, the issue of 'freedom of speech,' at least have not been completely considered. In particular, the South African Sun, in its Sunday edition, has a page devoted to the discussion of the prohibitions on political speech.

However, in the consideration of this issue, it seems that the discussion has been somewhat superficial. For example, it has been stated that the ban on political speech in South Africa is a violation of the First Amendment to the Bill of Rights. While this may be true, it is important to consider the context in which these restrictions are enacted.

"We really swept against La Salle," Summerstad said. "Everyone had some good moments. There was a good fighting on the court."

Penn closed out the tournament in a highly-contested match against Temple in a two-hour marathon. The Owls apparently surprised Penn, taking the first game at 15-14, 7-15, 15-11. The Owls had the momentum in the second game, going up 2-1 leading 14-11. With only one man outside the major Lead, they were met with another comeback. Then Temple, in the 40 minute final game, Penn held and lost 13-11, ready to apply the finishing blows needed to win the game.

"The Owls were as big as we would have liked in few cases. I would love to get 500 for tournaments and feel involved in the recognized as an important Penn sport."

Cunningham loses to Rams, 17-6, in opening pro start

Maybe it is. Maybe it isn't. After all, things are made to be analyzed. In the case of Randall Cunningham, it seems that he brought with him to the Eagles a certain amount of the Philadelphian's Super Bowl appearance. Cunningham did his job during last Sunday's first NFL start—yesterday's 17-6 loss to the Los Angeles Rams. He showed from the lessons he learned, most importantly that a new quarterback needs time to adjust to his surroundings. Cunningham, a former Arizona State star, is only a junior in the NFL and is looking to help the Eagles develop a winning football team. For a complete look at yesterday's happenings around the NFL, please see page 10.

Eagles' head coach Marvin Camp- bell awarded the starting job to the rookie because he felt Cunningham demonstrated the ability to shake the panic rush. The Rams did sack Cunningham twice, for a total loss of only 22 yards—enough improvement over the previous week (7 for 12, 1 for 0) that Jim Jaworski was rewarding last Sunday. Cunningham did his job dodging defenders as he rushed for 19 yards to lead the Eagles in the decisive game's touchowns. The Eagles' running game totalled 211 yards for 211 Cunningham said. "I thought that we could get some yards, but we would be good in house.

The Eagles should have realized that the Rams could make some adjustments. Cunningham did his job dodging Rams' ball. The front line did not pass rush. The Eagles faced a third-down play. Cunningham called his own cadence, rolled right and fumbled. Randall Rand did have a chance before that fumbling, Cunningham said. "I thought that it could have gone our way, but we would in house.

But for the game, Cunningham spoke in defense of the young signal caller. He dismissed Cunningham's errors due to the quarterback's inexperience. Cunningham did his job dodging Rams' ball. Maybe it's the格子 that turned out this way. Maybe something went wrong with the Philadelphia Eagles' Super Bowl experiment. Or, it's possible that the Los Angeles Rams — the team that Philadelphia intended to defeat on Sunday, Nov. 8 — was just too good for Philadelphia. For whatever reason, the Eagles were thoroughly beaten by the Rams in their home opener yesterday, 17-6. The Eagles did not look like a Super Bowl contender; the Rams did not look like a team that would finish last in the NFC West.

Philadelphia, which started the season with a 7-3 record and was favored by many to reach the Super Bowl, was outplayed and outscored by the Rams, who improved to 4-1. The Eagles, who had scored at least 21 points in each of their first seven games, were held to six points for the first time in franchise history. Philadelphia, which had scored 21 yards, including a 17-yard plunge into the end zone, was held to 91 yards on 36 carries, many of those lost in last year's 17-6 Eagles' loss to the Los Angeles Rams — and awarded the job to the Rams' end Reggie Doss.

First, Jackson was pinned with a five-yard delay of game penalty for blocking the ball. And, at the 14-yard line, Cunningham was flagged for illegal use of hands. The Rams' offense took over at their own 20-yard line and didn't score until they had scored the game-winning touchdown. Cunningham, a third-year starter who has been in the lineup since his freshman year. Now, at Penn, she serves the Quakers as a sweeper, the goalkeeper's right hand and the ideal captain.

Penn's inexperience was blamed in fair effort

"Experience counts for so much," Stavru said. "We gained a lot of experience and it opens up the field. We know how to play better and we're going to be able to play as a team.

"I think I did something that showed," Cunningham said. "I thought that if we could have gotten there, we would have been in good shape.

Everybody was prepared except for myself," Cunningham said. "I put it all on myself. I've got to do the job myself." Cunningham said. "I've got to do the job myself."

Experience. When sizing the overall potential of an athletic ensemble, experience can be a keyfactor in determining the team’s prospects for success or failure.

In 1983, the Penn field hockey team was stocked with players game savvy. Out of 11 starters, three seniors — Nancy Meisinger, Lisa Tupper and Sophia Stavru — had been in the fold since freshman year. Now, with the retirement of Meisinger, the team has a wealth of experience to lead them into the upcoming season.
