Plan may force vendors away
By DALE NISENBAUM

The policy, recently proposed by Mayor William Green, would control the number of street vendors in the city by increasing fees from $10 to $200. Many vendors are talking about moving to suburban areas in order to escape the new fees. The policy is intended to help the city to control the gridlock traffic caused by vendors. However, the vendors claim that the new fees are unreasonable and will force them to leave the city. The Mayor has said that the new fees are necessary to combat the problem of excessive vendor traffic in the city. The proposal has not yet been approved by the City Council. Panel recommends new student union
By JEFFREY GOLDBERG

The University Senate met last night to discuss the idea of establishing a new student union. The Senate expressed concern about the current system of student representation and the need for a more efficient and effective method of student involvement. The Senate also discussed the possibility of creating a student union that would have the power to negotiate contracts with University administrators. The proposal for a new student union was met with mixed reactions by the student body. Some students are in favor of the idea, while others are concerned about the potential costs and the impact on the current system of representation. The Senate will continue to work on the proposal and will consider it again at a future meeting.

Campus savoring a more Western flavor
By DONALD HOGAN

The campus is savoring a more Western flavor as a result of the University's new admissions policy. The new policy has resulted in a greater number of students from the West Coast and the West being admitted to the University. This has led to a more diverse and cosmopolitan campus, with students from different parts of the world. Some students have expressed their satisfaction with the new policy, while others have expressed concerns about the potential impact on the campus culture. The University administration is considering ways to ensure that the new policy does not lead to a loss of the University's traditional American identity.

Review

Panelists agree that the city cannot control the great expansion in curb sales over the last few years. Merchants and vendors in street markets are competing for a limited number of street locations, leading to increased congestion and traffic problems. The city is considering the possibility of building a new student union to provide a more organized and efficient location for vendors. However, there is some opposition to the idea, with some students and merchants expressing concerns about the potential impact on the local economy.

Calls summit “mission for peace”

WASHINGTON — President Ronald Reagan told the nation last night he is going to Geneva and his first summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev will be "a try to map out, together, a basis for peaceful discourse and a basis for peace." The summit, he hopes, will continue in future years.

Reagan said his purpose in meeting Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev next Tuesday and Wednesday is to "try to map out, together, a basis for peaceful discourse and a basis for peace." It is my fervent hope that the two of us can begin a process which our successors and our people can continue to follow with confidence and the ability to face differences "bravely and openly and beginning to recognize and reduce them through mutual understanding and respect," he said.

In approving the deals on Wednesday night, House gave final congressional approval to a $1.4 trillion federal budget, clearing the way for the Senate to take up the legislation and send it to the White House.

Legislation averts federal default

WASHINGTON — The government’s fiscal year just ended Tuesday and Thursday, the day after the president signed a $2 trillion federal budget into law.

The Philadelphia Gas Works is well known for providing energy to keep city residents warm last winter. For a company that services the city of Philadelphia, the award is recent recognition of a job well done.

Power Generation Assistant Vice President Lorin Marshall said that for his program went well, he gives credit to a team of employees who make the plant run smoothly.

"It was a challenging year," he said. "We had to work hard to ensure that the system was running efficiently and that our customers were satisfied.

"I want to thank all the members of my team for their hard work and dedication," he said. "Their efforts made this award possible."

BLITZER: If it is going to get off the ground, U.S. support will be critical because both Jordan and Israel look to the United States for support and the U.S. has a very important role to play. But I am not overly optimistic right now, I am not overly optimistic. It has been mentioned by some of the spokesmen that Sharon is considering whether to pull out, whether to pull out of the West Bank, and that is a move that would encourage some of the things we have seen in the past, that might then occur in early October in Paris and that is a move that Sharon has considered.

Q: What will happen at the end of next year, when Sharon is scheduled to take over as Prime Minister?

A: Well, what is telling, in fact, is that there is no longer the same level of enthusiasm for an early round of negotiations right now. I think what will happen is that there will be some sort of opportunity to escalate the agreement, and either to put together a narrower, more limited coalition government without the Likud or if that fails, to go into early elections. I'm not yet certain that I think there could be a coalition, yes, it seems that there is some breakthrough on the peace process, but what is that would be the opportunity for Prime Minister to go into the general election, and there will be a later date.

Q: What's your opinion of the effectiveness of the current Peace Process?

A: It's far more surprising effectively on two issues. On the matter of getting out of Lebanon, which was very important, Israel genuinely pulled out, and there are some signs now that there is some progress at least for the time being. On the economic front, they have been more effective as well. In working together there have been some very successful economic reforms and austerity measures that are now working. There is still a long way to go, and it's not going perfectly, but there is movement.

Q: Will the National Unity Government be the first phase of getting out of Lebanon?

A: That is the first phase. What remains to be seen is whether the government can put together a credible and honest place, including important Palestinian, but certainly among the Lebanese population, in order to give the PLO and the Palestinians their rights.

Q: Do you think Sharonsoftened his stand on Cyprus?

A: There is some evidence that he has softened his stand on Cyprus. But there is a great deal of opposition to the idea, and there is a great deal of opposition to the idea that the Cypriot people cannot have a vote on the future of the island.

Q: If you could assess U.S.-Israeli relations following the Reagan years, their relationship is today an all-time high, the majority of people are very positive to Israel. But I am not overly optimistic — I think that there could be a coalition, yes, it seems that there is some breakthrough on the peace process, but what is that would be the opportunity for Prime Minister to go into the general election, and there will be a later date.

Q: Do you think that the Knesset law clearly instituting anti-Semitism as a crime is a serious threat to Israel?

A: The Knesset law clearly instituting anti-Semitism as a crime is a serious threat to Israel. I don't think it's a threat to Israel, specifically during the war in Lebanon. But it's very important to understand that anti-Semitism is a very serious threat. But in Lebanon, in the context of the war, it is a very serious threat.
Campus women's organizations to sponsor harassment seminar

IN ROBBIE STEEL

Three women's organizations will sponsor a seminar Monday on the prevention of the sexual harassment from the male professors.

The conference will feature a variety of speakers, including School of Social Work Professor Mark Biren, Microbiology Professor Helen Deegan, English Professor Peter Conroy and Professor Catherine Center of the Dilys.

The Graduate and Professional Women's Organization, the Penn Women's Center and the Penn Women's Alliance are sponsoring the event.

Graduate and Professional Women's Organization's member Leslie Zuckerman, who has been coordinating the seminar, said that the seminar will provide a chance for everyone to discuss on sexual harassment.

Leslie Zuckerman said that it's not only a sexual harassment issue, but also a power issue and an issue of gender role reversal.

In this seminar, there will be a panel discussion on sexual harassment. The panelists are Professor Mark Biren, Microbiology Professor Helen Deegan, English Professor Peter Conroy and Professor Catherine Center of the Dilys.

The seminar will be held in the University Center on November 18 at 4:30 pm. The event is free and open to all undergraduate and graduate students.

Reaction to Reagan policies is better than thought, speaker says

By SARAH WEINTRAUB

The welfare state is flourishing despite the intense and public criticism of the Reagan Administration, Guggenheim Fellowship recipient Frances Fox Piven said at a workshop Wednesday in the Urban Studies Program's first annual lecture series.

"With the ascendency of the Reagan Administration, the attacks on social welfare in the United States have gotten far less than a nominal pat on the back," she said at a dinner table.

"But the Reagan Administration has gotten far less than a nominal pat on the back," she added. "One of these programs was developed, the resistance of these institutions legitimated the idea that... they were a good thing.

"By dressing provocatively and allowing the man to pay for her dinner or car tabs, is responsible for what happened. She should be responsible for preventing acquaintance rape — the man or the woman.

"Dr. Piven seems to feel that there is some possibility for hope depending on some conditions that are access free and class free," he added. "I don't know. I'm not optimistic."

Weighing the Options

Political Science Professor Henry Trane opened the discussion of Wednesday's University Council meeting. "The President is right to refuse the booting, binning and chasing that marvel last month's Tuesday's. Today's market set the time for one of the more intelligent, level-headed Council members," he said.

With Committee on University Responsibility Chairman Richard Brown and other Trustees in attendance, the Council debated the merits of withdrawing University investments from companies, which do business in South Africa. The hour-long discussion ended in a 23-10 vote for divestment, the second such Council recommendation in the last four years.

The meeting was constructive because it addressed the broader issues, while avoiding the finger-pointing comments which some Council members asked whether the University should divest its investments in South Africa if it diversion. Others questioned the financial ramifications divestment would have on the University.

February Faculty Senate Chairman Jacob Abel argued that the University could take a more effective approach through stockholder resolutions.

Both sides offered comprehensive arguments, and Council members ultimately found the pro-divestment arguments the stronger. The Council's model of the type of discussion in which the University Community could participate on such issues should have all the Council members and should come out each one. Then they can make the decision.

The Trustees supposedly are scouting for candidates to make divestment, and the first time they should look it Wednesday's Council meeting. The best place is other forms where people are extensively considering the alternatives to battling apartheid. When the Trustees see that weighing all the arguments, people conclude that divestment is the more effective, timely action to take, then the University will be able to take this brave step forward without looking back.

Number of applicants from far away rising

Some foreign students, who plan to return to their home countries after graduation, are finding that the number of applicants from their home countries is increasing. This trend is attributed to several factors, including increased awareness of American culture, the availability of scholarships, and the perceived advantages of studying in the United States. For example, foreign students may be drawn to American universities for their strong programs in specific fields, the opportunity to network with other international students, and the chance to gain exposure to diverse cultural perspectives.

Vendor licenses

Vendor licenses are required for many types of businesses in the United States, including those that sell goods or services. These licenses are often necessary to ensure compliance with local regulations and to protect the public's health and safety. The specific requirements for obtaining a vendor license can vary significantly from one state to another, and some businesses may also be required to obtain additional licenses or permits depending on their specific activities.

Freshmen to face Kutztown State

Dr. JONATHAN RODY
When the Penn football freshman team takes on the Kutztown State junior varsity this afternoon, the Quakers will be playing for more than just a win. "They'll be playing for their own existence," said coach Rick Jackson. "They've lost 38-0 to Cornell - Penn will be playing to establish a 4-0 mark, rather than just an even 3-3."

As far as the game itself goes, it's "special" for the freshmen, who will be trying to cut down on turnovers. "Obviously, the first thing we have to do is straighten out the turnover problem," coach Jackson said. "We had seven turnovers against Cornell. The biggest thing we have to do is make sure our kids learn to control the ball. If we can't do that at home against an inferior team, it isn't going to be physically any better than Cornell."

The Quaker freshmen's game has additional importance because it is the last game of the year. "As the long year the kids don't remember if the team was 4-2 or 3-3, it's just a game," coach Jackson said. "We'll see how they handle the thought of another team on the field. It's not a major one-

With another win, Quakers could get something special

"That's why this game is so important," coach Rick Jackson said. "The only way Quakers can get something special is to win today."

Jackson added that the game is important because the team made it to the playoffs. "In the last week or so, they've played for the conference title. The game is important because it's the last game of the season."

In other news, the Quakers are going to be trying to establish a new record. "If the team can win, they can tie the record for the most wins in a season," coach Jackson said. "That's why the team is so important."

"We can't afford to get ahead like we did the last two games," coach Schnell said. "We have to finish strong and the defense has to stop the offense."

The defense has to stop the offense because right now the Quakers are playing for their season. "In order to get here, you have to play a perfect game and that's something you have to do," coach Schnell said. "If we can't do that, we're not going to be able to play in the big game."

"In the long run people don't remember the team was 4-2 or 3-3, it's just a game," coach Schnell said. "We'll see how they handle the thought of another team on the field. It's not a major one."

Volleyball seeks Ivy banner this weekend

By NEIL W. WINTERBERGER

This weekend the University of Pennsylvania women's volleyball team will try to make its mark in the Ivy League. The Quakers, who are currently ranked second in the nation, will travel to New Haven, Connecticut, to take on Yale University in the first round of the NCAA tournament.

"We're excited to be going to New Haven," said Penn coach Joe Sagula. "It will be a good test for us. We need to be ready for anything." Sagula and his team have been preparing for this opportunity for weeks. They have been practicing hard, focusing on their individual and team skills.

"We've worked the sport extensively," Sagula said. "We've been focusing on being efficient at every position. We know that we have to be on top of our game to have a chance of winning." Sagula and his team have been working hard to improve their serve, pass, and attack. They have been practicing their blocking and defense to be ready for whatever Yale may throw at them.

"Our goal is to win the Ivy League championship," Sagula said. "We want to prove ourselves as the best team in the country. We're ready to take on the challenge." Sagula and his team have been working hard to improve their serve, pass, and attack. They have been practicing their blocking and defense to be ready for whatever Yale may throw at them.

"We've worked the sport extensively," Sagula said. "We've been focusing on being efficient at every position. We know that we have to be on top of our game to have a chance of winning." Sagula and his team have been working hard to improve their serve, pass, and attack. They have been practicing their blocking and defense to be ready for whatever Yale may throw at them.

"Our goal is to win the Ivy League championship," Sagula said. "We want to prove ourselves as the best team in the country. We're ready to take on the challenge." Sagula and his team have been working hard to improve their serve, pass, and attack. They have been practicing their blocking and defense to be ready for whatever Yale may throw at them.

"We're excited to be going to New Haven," said Penn coach Joe Sagula. "It will be a good test for us. We need to be ready for anything." Sagula and his team have been preparing for this opportunity for weeks. They have been practicing hard, focusing on their individual and team skills.

How is it going to end this time?

Penn meets Harvard with Ivy title at stake

By STEVE BERKOWITZ
CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — We already have a pretty good idea of how the Penn football team came to be this season. The reasons are the same as the year before. And the year before that. While other Ivy League teams struggled, Penn remained a consistent force.

The Quakers have won six straight games and have nothing to lose. They have delivered the Ivy title to Americans for the first time since 1959. And they have practically guaranteed their first Ivy League title since 1959.

This incredible chapter in a rivalry (clockwise from left): Ed Fekay (93: triumphantly embraces John McGheefer after last year's 36-7 win; the mood of the Penn bench leaves little doubt about the outcome of Harvard's 28-6 win in 1980; Fans at Franklin Field celebrate after Penn eked out a 23-21 win in 1982 to clinch the Quakers'
first Ivy League title since 1959.

Quakers may quellly get deserved respect

What do Penn and Rodney Dangerfield have in common? They don't get no respect.

Sign in the Penn football locker room does not lament this fact.

I've been covering the Penn football team for five years. Berndt and his assistants certainly know it. They have established a history of their egos. We love the smell of polo pony patties in our hair. We love those long robes, those protruding boots.

The Quakers, under the leadership of Terry Berndt, have established a history of their work. They have worked hard and constantly. I am very impressed with the Penn football program. It has lost only three and five times since 1982. Penn has won nine out of the last ten games.

The Quakers have nothing to lose. They have delivered the Ivy title to
