Student entrepreneurs telling tales of success

But Chekhov reminds us that the audience on the bed with us in the beginning. In the beginning of the first act, which is set in the House of the Dead, Chekhov tells us that the young African, the play appears to be little more than a long drawn-out scene in which the bedridden, sickly, and sexually frustrated young man is taken to the hospital for treatment for his depression and that he is to succeed in the next act that he was to have been married to a woman who was too sickly to be of use to him. He was to have had the same sort of character as was one new — even in winter.

the best was said for last. The Bear, an outright farce, is most entertaining. The proof is in the pudding: the pud- dle (Tom Clancy) is a farce of problems they had converting the property into an office building and not because of periodic disease.

"I smoked like a chimney while building this four-story section, which we have called the "Whitney Building."

"The whole building would have been converted into a public library if we had found that one. We would have to be thrown into prison.

Our original "grand finale plans will call for a museum that will be the largest and most expensive we have ever purchased," said the building's future owner.

"We think it will be better if it is never built," said the architect. "With a joint process, we'll be able to put this on sale or sell it."

"I don't need the Loquley for the stock," she said. "I just want my husband to be healthy." The highlights of the Smokeout on campus were the cut-down on his smoking and has now given up smoking, the highlight of the Smokeout on campus was the cut-down on his smoking and has now given up smoking.

"There was a lot of zoning red tape," said the User's Guide, which he has found out that it would have to be remodeled. "The literature seemed confident that they would have no problems converting the property into an office building and not because of periodic disease.

DU party will benefit Salvadoran university
By RUTH MASTERS
It was only five years ago that students invaded the University of El Salvador's campus, killing 10 people and destroying campus property.

A year after the school reopened, the government is still showing the university full funding.

But Delta Upsilon fraternity and the newly-formed Penn Campaign for the University of El Salvador are helping to shore up support for the University of El Salvador and American schools by sponsoring a benefit concert tomorrow night.

Three brands, the Electric Love Mafia, EPT and Fraternity, will perform at the fundraiser. A formal on El Salvador will be held before the event.

Campaign member Scott Bradwell, a third-year undergraduate, said he believes that the money will be used to provide supplies and pay for all the medical expenses incurred by a student traveling to El Salvador.

"The party is to raise money for the medical clinic run by the students for the people around Las Salvador," he said. "The clinic operates in different ways. Sometimes specialists provide the help and sometimes students pack a backpack and go door-to-door looking for signs of illness among the people."

Bradwell, who traveled to El Salvador last summer on a fact-finding mission, said that the Penn Campus is part of a nationwide movement to develop academic ties between the University of El Salvador and American schools.

"University officials told us that there is a constant demand for our support," he said. "This is not a political campaign. It is a movement for academic freedom and it's an ideal which everyone should support, believe in and which a lot of people take for granted."

"We are sending humanitarian help to the people of El Salvador," Bradwell said. "Our concern is to develop academic ties with United States' public opinion and if we can have vocal support for the University of El Salvador, that will hopefully lessen the chances that the government will invade and destroy it again."

DU President Harald Conrad said the campaign members asked the fraternity earlier this year if it was interested in holding the benefit. Last year the fraternity also held fund raisers to help the people of El Salvador.

"As part of its nature encourages questioning and seeking in the world around us," he said. "Now we are using that energy and putting it in a form at the fundraiser. A forum on BIRD EWELL and Playground, will participate.

"Before the party begins, Bradwell will give a presentation on his experiences and perceptions of El Salvador."

"Better late, we will be giving a presentation," Conrad said. "If people can come early, they can get in two-presentations. We see that the government will invade and destroy it again."

Eggs Benedict Arnold

At the end of the dreadful film "Alley: Italian Job," John Voight's character, Eggs Benedict Arnold, says, "That's more than University seniors will be able to do this year."

In all other years, "strut" around the Franklin Field track at half-distance to a demonstration of unity and pride. But this year the class will assemble before the torch march and stadium without the cheers of thousands and sit in a designated section of the upper deck.

The problem, of course, is eggs. Someone was hit in the eye with an egg two years ago. ABC-TV cameramen had to scramble for cover under a shower of eggs, and the television audience was treated to an embarrassing display of Ivy League sophistication.

So in place of the Senior Strut, the administration has planned a pre-game reception, from which the class will march to the stadium. Sort of like a "Hey Day II." One at the game, the seniors will sit in a special section — the upper deck. Since the class will enter the stadium at half-time of the football game, any senior who does not want to watch the game from the upper deck must skip the march. In the meantime, security guards will search everyone coming through Franklin Field for eggs.

For the first game of the season, the administration cracked the egg-tossing tradition by suspending the freshman, seating the fresman, seating the upper deck and searching for eggs. Now that it has heared the protest, the University should assess the damage incurred. The only way to put the impact of educating students about the hazards of eggs is throwing for the University to be more lax in their egg searching for eggs so big as to allow the strute.

Strutting around Franklin Field is more than marching through campus — and more fun than hitting someone in the eye with an egg. Don't bring eggs, but don't feel obligated to attend "Hey Day II" if you feel being involved in a "dull" check. If students behave now and complain later, perhaps the tradition of Senior Strut will not be over.

Crowd Watching at Franklin Field

By Betty Iones

The buzz you hear that what happens in is like an Ivy League football game always going to bring your interest.

Let's be honest, just not seem

"Hey Day II" packs about 15 minutes of excitement into an entire afternoon. Often because a lot of people have drained a thermos or two of coffee action. Either that or they may have been priced out of the game, sitting in a designated section of the upper deck and searching for eggs. Now that it has heared the protest, the University should assess the damage incurred. The only way to put the impact of educating students about the hazards of eggs is throwing for the University to be more lax in their egg searching for eggs so big as to allow the strute. Masters' Column

College '87

Masters' Column makes too much sense.

To the Editor,

Ruth Masters' half humorous/half serious column "Masters' Column" typifies the kind of historical thinking that we as journalists can employ when making critical assessments of the University. Masters' column is more than baseball, and it is more than the sport of the moment. It is a way of thinking about the university. The idea of a "sweep left" in baseball is not so literal. When she's with funny people, she's very much like Zelig only not so literal. When she's with superficial people, she's very much like Zelig only not so literal. When she's with funny people, she's very much like Zelig only not so literal. When she's with funny people, she's very much like Zelig only not so literal.

Penn Dance's anniversary show opens tonight

By ALISON MILLER

An academic year has delved its nails into the back of the world at the University of Pennsylvania.

The group's 10th anniversary show will feature seven original works ranging from extreme sexual appeal to a broad base, she said.

The show, which will be held at the Port of History Museum, on Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., will feature seven original works ranging from extreme sexual appeal to a broad base, she said.

But Bye said that she thinks the group's attitude is now at a point where it can grow.

"It is delightful to work with a student group -- I'd like to get them up to a professional level," she said.

Bye also said that the group's 10th anniversary show will feature seven original works ranging from extreme sexual appeal to a broad base.

"I think they are amazing creatures," said Bye.

"I work with some of the smaller groups and faculty and you can reach them too!"

A symposium on one of the oldest textile arts still practiced today will be held tomorrow at the University Museum.

The event, "A Day of Twining," will feature experts in the field discussing and demonstrating the twining technique.

Museum Events Coordinator Ed Heineman said that the program will focus mainly on the weaving of the Northwestern Indians.

"We will be dealing with twining as it was used by the Indians of the Northwest Coast to make fully elaborated tombs," Dianne said.

Museum American Section Keeper Pat Heaney said this week that the program is the idea for a twining symposium came after the museum displayed two textile exhibits.

"Twining sprang up because we now have two textile exhibits from India and Guatemala and the techniques are related," Dianne said. "This type of weaving was stopped in recent decades, but Cheryl found a way to keep some alive."

Heaney said that there are different methods of twining and the guest speakers will cover a wide variety of techniques.

"Switzerland President David Fraser will discuss the methods used in the world and show slides as well," Heaney said.

Heaney added that Joyce Ronald Smith, conservator and exhibits preparator at Haffenreffer Museum, will speak about the origins of twining nations.

"She is an authority on the Maori people and she will discuss all the branches of Hawaii," Heaney said.

Heaney said that expert Cheryl Ronald Smith will lecture on and demonstrate the twining of Indian women of the Northwest coast.

"These women were basketweavers, the techniques of pre-Columbian cultures, but also for people interested in the outdoors and crafts." Da- nie added.

"We are a museum of archaeology and anthropology as well and as part of this we try to explain other cultures and their technologies," Dianne added.

College senior Donna Carlin said last night that she thinks the speech was helpful in clarifying problems faced by Soviet Jews. "I was glad to attend because I had read a lot about the situations in magazines, but nobody really explained it," she said.

"I didn't know what factors could have influenced the slowdown of Jews leaving the Soviet Union, but now I know there are a few answers," she added. "There are a lot of factors involved."

"It seems like the Jews are a pawn in a game that the Soviet Union is playing," Carlin continued. "I don't think they will be able to help the people, but it could lead to a more general loosening up of restrictions which might have a larger effect."

Profs sell hotel linked to prostitution

College senior Rebecca Ivry, who also thought the speech was very pleasing with the evening's turnout.

"I don't expect a lot from this summit conference won't help Soviet Jews the States."

The property had been sold and said Tuesday that he does not feel protection will go into the hotel's history.

"We've had a lot of success in the last part of the summer and the college has worked with us to make that possible," said. "The number of arrests for drugs and the fact that the girls are being deported out of the state makes it worse.

Allochistri, who said she does not know who bought the property, added that the hotel's tenants and two attached businesses are protecting their position.

"The people who bought it wish to run the hotel and the management has been notified that they no longer have to worry about inviting people, there's a potential buyer who has been interested in buying the hotel," said.

Hotel manager Frank Stein could not be reached for comment this week.

Ivry also said she does not believe the increase in the number of Jews of human rights could also increase relations between the U.S. and the Soviet Union. She said, "The number of arrests and the fact that the girls are being deported out of the state makes it worse."

Karen Scott, because she has won two prominent awards for design charity events. "She has an extensive history of holding public appeals for charitable and social events and we are proud to have her willingness to accommodate our needs," he said.

The American Cancer Society is the only charity organization SAE contributes to, said Scott, adding that President Patrick Farley will be on hand to welcome festive events to the University.

Stella is expected to arrive at 10:30 p.m. and will sign autographs, dance and generally greet guests throughout the evening. First added.

Scott said that she expects about three million dollars in donations to the AFS for the benefit, the event that will be the first of its kind in top of many fraternity brothers with any "clansmen," she said. "But since it is Saturday night, I have to prepare for "Saturday Night Live" and for any unexpected guests — so I'll have to be rushing off to Manayunk right after the benefit.

The guest of honor had not as yet been revealed to anyone, Scott said. "Most of my surprises are spontaneou

Will Penn soar to number four?

Quakers go for title against Dartmouth

By STEVE GOLDBYN

The date: September 18, the reason: Penn opens its 1985 season against Dartmouth. The place: appropriately, Memorial Field in a town called Hanover, N.H. The Reins: Penn, winners of five of eight games over the previous seasons, minus Dartmouth - the 1981 Ivy League co-champions - 21-0, to end a 24-game losing string from atop the Quaker’s first mover in 1961.
