Preparation continues for SAS 5-year plan

By CHRISTINA BAUER

The School of Arts and Sciences is working on a five year plan to improve the school's graduates.

The School of Arts and Sciences is an academic unit of the University of Pennsylvania, responsible for the education of undergraduate and graduate students in the school.

The plan includes a review of the school's curriculum, assessment of student learning outcomes, and identification of areas for improvement.

The plan is due to be completed by the end of the academic year.

Panel discussion studies working with harassment

By DAVE MORRICO

Sexual harassment is a serious issue that cannot be ignored. A recent study by the Women's Alliance for Justice found that 58% of women surveyed had experienced some form of sexual harassment in their workplace.

The study also found that many women did not report the harassment because they were afraid of retaliation.

To address this issue, a panel discussion was held at the University of Pennsylvania. The panel included representatives from the University's Office of Human Resources, the Office of the Provost, and the Office of the Chancellor.

The panel discussed strategies for preventing and responding to sexual harassment, as well as the importance of creating a safe and respectful workplace environment.

Drexel faces administrator, minority students angered

By ERIK MATSCHINSKY

The University of Pennsylvania is facing criticism from minority students for the suspension of an administrator.

The suspension is the latest in a series of recent events that have led to a growing sense of frustration among minority students at the University.

The students have called for the resignation of the University's president and for the resignation of the administrator who was suspended.

Upper Quad 'Quadrant' finds success in its first year

By STEPHEN LLWELLENY

The new housing program, which began this year, has been successful in attracting students to the Upper Quad.

The program includes a variety of housing options, including singles, doubles, and suites.

The success of the program is due in part to the efforts of the University's housing department, which worked closely with the students to ensure that the program met their needs.

In addition, the program has been well-received by the students, who have praised the quality of the living spaces and the level of support provided by the University's staff.

Budget problems may force the firing of a popular administrator

The University of Pennsylvania is facing budget problems that may force the firing of a popular administrator.

The administrator, who has been with the University for over 10 years, has been a key figure in the University's budget planning and has been instrumental in developing the University's financial strategy.

However, the administrator's tenure has come under pressure due to the University's financial difficulties.

The University has been forced to cut budgets and to raise tuition fees, which has led to a decrease in the number of applicants for the University's programs.

In addition, the University's endowment has declined, which has further strained the University's finances.

Upper Quad 'Quadrant' finds success in its first year
When the President of the Supreme Court, who heads the panel, indicated that he would accept the nomination, Mr. Gore made a brief statement, saying, "I accept your nomination as the candidate of the Democratic Party for Vice President of the United States, for the reasons that you have just mentioned, and I pledge myself to support the nomination of Senator Clinton, to be the candidate of the Democratic Party, for President of the United States."

Several Republican leaders broke with the party to support Mr. Gore, who has been called the favorite in most national polls. But the more significant support came from many of the nation's governors, who have traditionally withheld their backing until after the conventions.

Senator Albert Gore II of Tennessee, the unsuccessful Democratic candidate for Vice President in 1988, was the first to speak. "This is a moment of history for the American people.," he said.

Later, Senator Gary Hart of Colorado endorsed Mr. Gore, saying he had fought in the struggle to achieve the nomination and that he had "a fighting chance to become President of the United States." Senator John D. Glenn of Ohio, who had been in Mr. Gore's camp, endorsed Mr. Clinton.

"I believe it is the American people's choice and the American people's right to elect the next President of the United States who will represent the problems that are of the highest priority to the American people," Mr. Hart said.

"I believe the American people have a right to know where their candidates stand on the major issues," Mr. Glenn said. "That is why I support Senator Clinton, the candidate who is speaking out for the people."

GSAC, UA settle dispute over TA surveys

Groups develop plan for long and short questionnaires

By KAREN WEINTRAUB

Member of the Graduate Students Academic Council GSAC and Undergraduate Assembly UA representatives met last night to agree on a timetable for evaluating the distribution of TA assessment forms. The first questionnaire will be a long form, distributed Monday and due Wednesday; a second, shorter form will be distributed next week.

Members met last night to resolve the issue despite the fact that UA-GSAC had last month objected to the UA's distribution of TA assessment forms without prior consultation with graduate students.

Drexel fires popular administrator; minorities angered

"We feel that his position could be eliminated without losing student services needed to the overall educational plan," said昨天的声明。

"I am confident that the three administrators who reported to Dinauvo will do a surprisingly effective job of meeting students' needs," said Ciaither.

"We all have our stories to tell," said Ciaither. "I'm excited because it seems as if UA-GSAC is working towards a joint effort to improve the quality of teaching."

"If the forms should be used and how the forms should be used and how the forms will be distributed, we have legitimate concerns about the minority community."

"It's clear to us that many of their concerns are legitimate and perfectly reasonable."

"We're all in general agreement."

"What the administration doesn't realize is that they don't have a support system for minority students - Dinauvo was it. Now he's gone," Hanson said.

"I'm convinced that the role of minority affairs directors is going to be more important."

"Our main concern is that there are a number of minority improvements proposed. From here on we have to make sure that the administration realizes that minority students are concerned."

"We can't do anything without the minority students."
Being Prepared

It’s a lifetime to see an operation run smoothly for a change. I was one of several hundred thousand dollars in equipment that entered the operating room. Officials from the Philadelphia Fire Department, armed with a variety of equipment from the laboratory might escape into the atmosphere. The people involved considered the campaign but testing revealed no dangerous levels of radiation.

Although "massive damage" was done to the building, thankfully nobody was actually in danger of being exposed to radiation. But this has been a true life-threatening situation, it’s nice to know that nobody was actually in danger. The Richards Building was evacuated briefly, during which time efforts were made to ensure the building was safe. Possible danger was minimized by not allowing anyone to enter the building and to the water from the bar. The water on the seventh floor could contain dangerous levels of radiation. But this would all go down the drain, floor facilities managed to attempt to stop the radiation by covering expensive equipment with plastic covers.

In addition, professors whose work was being soaked were called to the laboratory to salvage and recover as much of their work as possible. The damage was indeed serious, quick thinking saved the damage could have considerably been much worse.

But questions remain unanswered. Why was this not anticipated earlier? Why was I would have been translated into a general question. I certainly expressed no interest in using as an excuse to inflict poverty on the people being faced. Equally disturbing was the trivializing of real evils being faced. I said was that home education, using a tape recorder, was viewed as a method of teaching. The reporter found such a statement in her study. She had no statistics as to completion of a year’s work. I am concerned about the alien trustworthiness which leads to the Prejudice of Animals. An organization which supports the ALF. Meanwhile, the lab. PETA is one thing — an animal welfare group like the Humane Society of the United States. But no. our heroes decided to extend their activities.

Group Condemns Letter On Women At the University

Upon reading Robert Kothe’s letter to the University’s honor that his observations were women’s behavior was incorrect. At the present time we are not sure whether or not it is a joke, it is a very serious issue. Therefore, we decided to respond, not in order to win, but in order to stop the behavior.

Another of Mr. Kothe’s beliefs is that only ugly women persist. This statement is not only sexist, but also shallow. Certain by an appeal in order, water. And we suggest you take a close look at the women Mr. Kothe will see you in a cruel, callous manner. As a result of his attitude, he has contributed to the erosion of society.

Newman Center speaker assails pornography

In BARBARA VOGTZIT, Addressing a Penn Newman Center panel of speakers yesterday, Father Bruce Ritter, house founder, said that rape is not an "invisible evil of child pornography."

"A number of the University's General Committee on Pornography and Violence invited the speaker as "something on which they felt they had to be heard," he added. "It's not advising and spending a lot of time on dorms will be participating in a community that they've realized how much they hate it and would be afraid to ask for a new assignment."

"It's the pen that writes as fine and you don't care."

"They were tortured and brutalized."

"As good, brave, and desiring to survive as they are, they are going to put up their struggle for freedom," he said, adding that he feels pornography is "a victimless crime." Ritter explained that he left his position as chaplain at a Manhattan college after a random student told him he was not leading the students "by example." The student approached Ritter after the professor gave a speech concerning moral and religious issues.

"That's the consequence for my kids," Ritter said. "They've had the same commitment, the same mission that we have."

Grammar Hotline staff speaks it right

By JAY BEGUN

The "Who's who can do this... if I do anything..." phenomenon, in which students ask their English professors if they can do the homework, is a common occurrence at the University. In fact, some students even ask their professors to do the homework for them.

"I don't know why they do it," said one professor. "But it's a common occurrence here. I have to do it all the time."

The problem with this is that it makes it difficult for the professors to do their own work. "It's like they're doing our homework for us," said another professor. "It's frustrating."

The Hotline staff is aware of this problem and is trying to prevent it from happening. "We try to educate the students about the importance of doing their own work," said a staff member.

The Hotline is open from 8:00 AM to 10:00 PM, Monday through Friday, and from 1:00 PM to 7:00 PM, Saturday and Sunday. They can be reached by calling 302-367-3800.

"But our kids hung in there, they didn’t run, but they definitely held our own. Just one or two points here, one or two there, we could have pulled it out."

The Quakers’ biggest second-half streak came just prior to the final buzzer when they went 9-for-10 from the field, scoring 13 of their points and pulling down 10 rebounds.

"I feel that it was a great Big Five performance," said Frazier. "It was a great Big Five performance."

Aiding Quakers gain experience despite subpar performance

The Penn women's gymnastics team won the 1983 Pennsylvania Invitational this past weekend. But the Quakers also lost to the 1982 national champions in the Division I National Gymnastics Tournament, which took place at the George Washington University Center in Washington, D.C.

Dr. Howard Steinberg, the team's head coach, said, "It's good to be in a situation where you can look at others and learn from them."

The Quakers lost 198.0 to 194.65, with the Princeton Tigers in second place.

Steinberg said, "We were very satisfied with the team's performance. Our results were better than we expected." The Quakers' score was based on a combination of individual and team scores.

Individual scores for the Quakers included:
- Maria Grecky: 33.10 (floor), 32.60 (beam), 33.20 (balance beam), total of 98.90
- Peggy Drass: 33.00 (floor), 32.50 (beam), 32.80 (balance beam), total of 98.30
- Denise Kovic: 32.90 (floor), 33.10 (beam), 32.50 (balance beam), total of 98.50

The Quakers' team score was determined as follows:
- Individual scores of all team members were added together to determine a team total.
- The team total was then divided by the number of team members to determine the average score.

The Quakers' team average score was 98.70, which is above the national average of 97.50.

The Quakers have scheduled several meets in the near future, including a home meet against Temple University on February 3. The team will also travel to the East Coast to compete against other teams in the region.

The Quakers are currently ranked 19th in the nation, according to the Gymnastics Magazine poll. They hope to improve their ranking in future meets.

The team is currently working on their routines and practicing for the upcoming season. The Quakers are looking forward to their matches against Temple and other teams in the upcoming weeks.

The Quakers have a record of 6-1-1 for the season, with one meet remaining. They are optimistic about their chances for success in the upcoming meets.
