Cooperation
Anneberg dean led delegation to USSR
By NINA STUZIN
A delegation representing the Anneberg School of Communication held a six-day seminar on the implications of military-sponsored research over the holiday break. The delegation met with people in Moscow, including members of the Academy of Sciences in Moscow who were trained as medical doctors and were also scholars and members of the University. "Brinton started off the meeting by saying that in the time of World War Two and they had their own armament program and were concentrating on the development of a computer network in a Federal budget that throws money at the military and for other government research done for the military and for other government.

"The University's divestment policy. The groups submitted a Joint statement to the Senate to return to the political landscape. The leaders also endorsed the Black Student, who was concentrating on the development of a computer network in a Federal budget that throws money at the military and for other government.

"The University's divestment policy. The groups submitted a Joint statement to the Senate to return to the political landscape. The leaders also endorsed the Black Student, who was concentrating on the development of a computer network in a Federal budget that throws money at the military and for other government.

"The University's divestment policy. The groups submitted a Joint statement to the Senate to return to the political landscape. The leaders also endorsed the Black Student, who was concentrating on the development of a computer network in a Federal budget that throws money at the military and for other government.

"The University's divestment policy. The groups submitted a Joint statement to the Senate to return to the political landscape. The leaders also endorsed the Black Student, who was concentrating on the development of a computer network in a Federal budget that throws money at the military and for other government.

"The University's divestment policy. The groups submitted a Joint statement to the Senate to return to the political landscape. The leaders also endorsed the Black Student, who was concentrating on the development of a computer network in a Federal budget that throws money at the military and for other government.

"The University's divestment policy. The groups submitted a Joint statement to the Senate to return to the political landscape. The leaders also endorsed the Black Student, who was concentrating on the development of a computer network in a Federal budget that throws money at the military and for other government.

"The University's divestment policy. The groups submitted a Joint statement to the Senate to return to the political landscape. The leaders also endorsed the Black Student, who was concentrating on the development of a computer network in a Federal budget that throws money at the military and for other government.

"The University's divestment policy. The groups submitted a Joint statement to the Senate to return to the political landscape. The leaders also endorsed the Black Student, who was concentrating on the development of a computer network in a Federal budget that throws money at the military and for other government.

"The University's divestment policy. The groups submitted a Joint statement to the Senate to return to the political landscape. The leaders also endorsed the Black Student, who was concentrating on the development of a computer network in a Federal budget that throws money at the military and for other government.

"The University's divestment policy. The groups submitted a Joint statement to the Senate to return to the political landscape. The leaders also endorsed the Black Student, who was concentrating on the development of a computer network in a Federal budget that throws money at the military and for other government.

"The University's divestment policy. The groups submitted a Joint statement to the Senate to return to the political landscape. The leaders also endorsed the Black Student, who was concentrating on the development of a computer network in a Federal budget that throws money at the military and for other government.

"The University's divestment policy. The groups submitted a Joint statement to the Senate to return to the political landscape. The leaders also endorsed the Black Student, who was concentrating on the development of a computer network in a Federal budget that throws money at the military and for other government.

"The University's divestment policy. The groups submitted a Joint statement to the Senate to return to the political landscape. The leaders also endorsed the Black Student, who was concentrating on the development of a computer network in a Federal budget that throws money at the military and for other government.

"The University's divestment policy. The groups submitted a Joint statement to the Senate to return to the political landscape. The leaders also endorsed the Black Student, who was concentrating on the development of a computer network in a Federal budget that throws money at the military and for other government.

"The University's divestment policy. The groups submitted a Joint statement to the Senate to return to the political landscape. The leaders also endorsed the Black Student, who was concentrating on the development of a computer network in a Federal budget that throws money at the military and for other government.

"The University's divestment policy. The groups submitted a Joint statement to the Senate to return to the political landscape. The leaders also endorsed the Black Student, who was concentrating on the development of a computer network in a Federal budget that throws money at the military and for other government.

"The University's divestment policy. The groups submitted a Joint statement to the Senate to return to the political landscape. The leaders also endorsed the Black Student, who was concentrating on the development of a computer network in a Federal budget that throws money at the military and for other government.

"The University's divestment policy. The groups submitted a Joint statement to the Senate to return to the political landscape. The leaders also endorsed the Black Student, who was concentrating on the development of a computer network in a Federal budget that throws money at the military and for other government.

"The University's divestment policy. The groups submitted a Joint statement to the Senate to return to the political landscape. The leaders also endorsed the Black Student, who was concentrating on the development of a computer network in a Federal budget that throws money at the military and for other government.

"The University's divestment policy. The groups submitted a Joint statement to the Senate to return to the political landscape. The leaders also endorsed the Black Student, who was concentrating on the development of a computer network in a Federal budget that throws money at the military and for other government.

"The University's divestment policy. The groups submitted a Joint statement to the Senate to return to the political landscape. The leaders also endorsed the Black Student, who was concentrating on the development of a computer network in a Federal budget that throws money at the military and for other government.

"The University's divestment policy. The groups submitted a Joint statement to the Senate to return to the political landscape. The leaders also endorsed the Black Student, who was concentrating on the development of a computer network in a Federal budget that throws money at the military and for other government.

"The University's divestment policy. The groups submitted a Joint statement to the Senate to return to the political landscape. The leaders also endorsed the Black Student, who was concentrating on the development of a computer network in a Federal budget that throws money at the military and for other government.
Red Army claims responsibility for assassination of Olof Palme

The Red Army has claimed responsibility for the assassination of Swedish Prime Minister Olof Palme, who was killed outside a Stockholm cinema last Wednesday.

Palme, 59, was shot outside a cinema in the city's Sodermalm district, and died later in hospital. The killing has shocked Sweden and the world, and has raised questions about the future of the country's democracy.

The Swedish government has condemned the attack as an act of terrorism, and has promised to pursue those responsible to the fullest extent of the law.

The Red Army, a small group of communist guerrillas, has long been active in Scandinavia. They have carried out a number of attacks in recent years, including the bombing of a Stockholm synagogue in 1970.

The group has previously claimed responsibility for a number of attacks in Sweden, including the murder of a Swedish police officer in 1981.

Overseas reaction to the killing has been mixed, with some countries expressing support for Sweden, while others have condemned the attack.

US Secretary of State James Baker has expressed sympathy for Sweden, while Russian President Mikhail Gorbachev has condemned the attack as an act of terrorism.

However, other countries, including the UK, have been less forthcoming in their response, with some expressing concern about Sweden's handling of the investigation.

Palme was a leading figure in the Swedish Social Democratic Party, and had been a vocal opponent of the Soviet Union during his time in office.

He was shot in the heart by a lone gunman, and died shortly afterwards.

The bitter political struggle for power between the left and the right in Sweden has not always been a peaceful one.

But Palme's murder has raised questions about the future of democracy in Sweden, and has put the country's political future in doubt.

The case has been passed to the police, and a full investigation is now under way.

The Red Army has been linked to a number of other attacks in recent years, including the bombing of a Stockholm synagogue in 1970.

But Palme's murder has raised questions about the future of democracy in Sweden, and has put the country's political future in doubt.

The case has been passed to the police, and a full investigation is now under way.

The Red Army has been linked to a number of other attacks in recent years, including the bombing of a Stockholm synagogue in 1970.
Conflict exists among Jewish students

(Continued from page 2)

old practices and traditions.

According to College sophomore Jocelyn Demby, female Orthodox Jews are currently in a unique situation.

"I don't understand why it's important for women to take a more active role in the service," Demby said. "I think that women should have an equal role in the service." But, I don't know of a woman that's anti-Semitic," she said. "In some cases, they may be more active than men.

"A lot of Orthodox Jews have a problem with the belief that Jews should have an independent role. And the food program is consistent with that point.

"Judaism has always preached the idea of a person's heart being in their mouth," said Lubavitch House Executive Director Menachem Schmidt. "So, in order to give the people's hearts and souls a taste of Jewish food, we offer a variety of programs designed to heighten Jewish identity. And the food program is consistent with that goal.

"We offer a variety of programs designed to heighten Jewish identity. And the food program is consistent with that goal.

"I know how important it is to provide people with their favorite foods," said Lubavitch House Executive Director Menachem Schmidt. "We offer a variety of programs designed to heighten Jewish identity. And the food program is consistent with that goal.

"I know how important it is to provide people with their favorite foods," said Lubavitch House Executive Director Menachem Schmidt. "We offer a variety of programs designed to heighten Jewish identity. And the food program is consistent with that goal.

"We offer a variety of programs designed to heighten Jewish identity. And the food program is consistent with that goal.

"I know how important it is to provide people with their favorite foods," said Lubavitch House Executive Director Menachem Schmidt. "We offer a variety of programs designed to heighten Jewish identity. And the food program is consistent with that goal.

"I know how important it is to provide people with their favorite foods," said Lubavitch House Executive Director Menachem Schmidt. "We offer a variety of programs designed to heighten Jewish identity. And the food program is consistent with that goal.

"I know how important it is to provide people with their favorite foods," said Lubavitch House Executive Director Menachem Schmidt. "We offer a variety of programs designed to heighten Jewish identity. And the food program is consistent with that goal.

"I know how important it is to provide people with their favorite foods," said Lubavitch House Executive Director Menachem Schmidt. "We offer a variety of programs designed to heighten Jewish identity. And the food program is consistent with that goal.

"I know how important it is to provide people with their favorite foods," said Lubavitch House Executive Director Menachem Schmidt. "We offer a variety of programs designed to heighten Jewish identity. And the food program is consistent with that goal.

"I know how important it is to provide people with their favorite foods," said Lubavitch House Executive Director Menachem Schmidt. "We offer a variety of programs designed to heighten Jewish identity. And the food program is consistent with that goal.
Campus Events

A listing of University events and news.

NOTICE

Campus Briefs is the student government's public service announcement for University-wide events and news.

TODAY

- 10:30 a.m. University Recreation Center, field hockey, Penn vs. Haverford

TOMORROW

- 10:30 a.m. University Recreation Center, field hockey, Penn vs. Haverford

FUTURE

- Friday, March 27
  - Canvas Art Painting: Open to all Penn students. Location: TBA

INCLUSIVA SCHOOL

- April 1, 2016
  - Visit to the inclusive school. Sign-up required: Contact Campus Life Office, 387-6888

PARC

- April 1, 2016
  - Parc party. Location: TBA

OFFICIAL

- April 1, 2016
  - Penn Day. Location: TBA

ROOM SELECTION 86-87

UPPERCLASS RETENTION

In Superblock

Monday-Wednesday

March 3-5, 9 a.m. - 5 p.m.

High Rise North, Upper Lobby

Don't forget to reserve your room for next year! Refer to your Room Selection Booklet for details.
Law suit causes elections to redistrict wards

By ERIC BEUM

Philadelphia city council elections, which were changed since 1965, are currently being redrawn. The redistricting process, which was developed over the last 25 years, was designed to ensure fair representation in the city.

According to a Philadelphia Inquirer article, the process involves an independent council that redraws the districts based on demographic data. The council is tasked with ensuring that each district has a similar number of residents and that the boundaries are drawn in a way that is fair and impartial.

The city council is responsible for reviewing the proposed redistricting maps and making any necessary changes. Once the maps are approved, they are submitted to the state for final approval.

In addition to the city council, other local officials, such as the city manager and city clerk, are also involved in the redistricting process. The city manager is responsible for providing information on the current population distribution and the city clerk is responsible for providing information on the city's history and geography.

An independent council is also responsible for ensuring that the redistricting process is transparent and that any conflicts of interest are disclosed. The council is made up of members who are not connected to the city council, and they are trained to make decisions based on objective criteria.

The redistricting process is an important part of the democratic process, as it ensures that each district has a similar number of residents and that the boundaries are drawn in a way that is fair and impartial. It is important that the process is transparent and that any conflicts of interest are disclosed, so that the public can have confidence in the final outcome.

Alas, the current redistricting process is under scrutiny, and there are concerns about the fairness and impartiality of the maps. The independent council is working to address these concerns and to ensure that the process is as fair and impartial as possible.
The Independent Newspaper of the University of Pennsylvania
102nd Year of Publication

Letters to the Editor

"Doctors' Blast"
Goldberg Column

As Liking Suction

To the Editor:

As clinical students in the Dental School, we were disappointed to read the "Deadline" column (DP, 2/25/86) referring to dental students lacking in professional pride. We assure that Mr. Goldberg, as a responsible "journalist," personally send all material to Craig Coopermans, a staff member of The Daily Pennsylvanian.

I am writing in regard to Mr. Goldberg's column (DP, 2/25/86). In it, he laments after receiving a business card from a student at the University's School of Dental Medicine. He goes on to praise the student whose card he received, implying that the student's name makes a business trip "a wide-spread practice." He concludes his column, indicating that several students' actions in the past led to "improbable practice."

Several years ago at the Dental School, I believe a student's name was offered to at least 30 people. Mr. Ms., or Mr. and Ms. andMs, and so on. The Dental School was not aware that we, students, wanted to feel that we were receiving personalized business cards. Docents of Dental Medicine not only commonly receive business cards, but students would be called "doctors" or "Deans" of Dental Medicine.

The administration took the after six to seven years of formal training and a period of professional experience to become worthy enough to be referred to as "doctor" or "executive secretary." The Dental School is an anomaly in the environment of professional education for other fields, as well.

Many people with dental school degrees serve as executive secretaries and blue collar workers as patients, in addition to the student as doctor beyond 4001 Spruce Street. Those patients may be referred to as doctor by the student's colleagues.

I have just depicted Urban Outfitters of Pennsylvania. When Murray Murray, as Mr., Mrs., or Miss so and so, and car-

The JAPpy women in his class "campaigned" for a new shopping center in (less) big city. The Bloomingdale shoppers. Would you want to hear a dentist use the word "JAP" when he seeks from us to promote a professional environment to facilitate optimal patient care and treatment for all patients. I believe the title doctor is appropriate for all patients.

I am also displeased with Mr. Goldberg's implication that we low class citizens only desire to be referred to by our first name, because they are poor. All patients, including those who are wealthy, are entitled to the title doctor. It is only respectful to use the title doctor when conversing in front of the patient. I tell Sieve that it's not nice to be addressed in the usual way. He will stay in my mind forever.

By Evan Gahr

Letters to the Editor

"Doctors' Blast"
Goldberg Column

As Liking Suction

To the Editor:

As clinical students in the Dental School, we were disappointed to read the "Deadline" column (DP, 2/25/86) referring to dental students lacking in professional pride. We assure that Mr. Goldberg, as a responsible "journalist," personally send all material to Craig Coopermans, a staff member of The Daily Pennsylvanian.

I am writing in regard to Mr. Goldberg's column (DP, 2/25/86). In it, he laments after receiving a business card from a student at the University's School of Dental Medicine. He goes on to praise the student whose card he received, implying that the student's name makes a business trip "a wide-spread practice." He concludes his column, indicating that several students' actions in the past led to "improbable practice."

Several years ago at the Dental School, I believe a student's name was offered to at least 30 people. Mr. Ms., or Mr. and Ms. andMs, and so on. The Dental School was not aware that we, students, wanted to feel that we were receiving personalized business cards. Docents of Dental Medicine not only commonly receive business cards, but students would be called "doctors" or "Deans" of Dental Medicine.

The administration took the after six to seven years of formal training and a period of professional experience to become worthy enough to be referred to as "doctor" or "executive secretary." The Dental School is an anomaly in the environment of professional education for other fields, as well.

Many people with dental school degrees serve as executive secretaries and blue collar workers as patients, in addition to the student as doctor beyond 4001 Spruce Street. Those patients may be referred to as doctor by the student's colleagues.

I have just depicted Urban Outfitters of Pennsylvania. When Murray Murray, as Mr., Mrs., or Miss so and so, and car-

The JAPpy women in his class "campaigned" for a new shopping center in (less) big city. The Bloomingdale shoppers. Would you want to hear a dentist use the word "JAP" when he seeks from us to promote a professional environment to facilitate optimal patient care and treatment for all patients. I believe the title doctor is appropriate for all patients.

I am also displeased with Mr. Goldberg's implication that we low class citizens only desire to be referred to by our first name, because they are poor. All patients, including those who are wealthy, are entitled to the title doctor. It is only respectful to use the title doctor when conversing in front of the patient. I tell Sieve that it's not nice to be addressed in the usual way. He will stay in my mind forever.

By Evan Gahr

Letters to the Editor

"Doctors' Blast"
Goldberg Column

As Liking Suction

To the Editor:

As clinical students in the Dental School, we were disappointed to read the "Deadline" column (DP, 2/25/86) referring to dental students lacking in professional pride. We assure that Mr. Goldberg, as a responsible "journalist," personally send all material to Craig Coopermans, a staff member of The Daily Pennsylvanian.

I am writing in regard to Mr. Goldberg's column (DP, 2/25/86). In it, he laments after receiving a business card from a student at the University's School of Dental Medicine. He goes on to praise the student whose card he received, implying that the student's name makes a business trip "a wide-spread practice." He concludes his column, indicating that several students' actions in the past led to "improbable practice."

Several years ago at the Dental School, I believe a student's name was offered to at least 30 people. Mr. Ms., or Mr. and Ms. andMs, and so on. The Dental School was not aware that we, students, wanted to feel that we were receiving personalized business cards. Docents of Dental Medicine not only commonly receive business cards, but students would be called "doctors" or "Deans" of Dental Medicine.

The administration took the after six to seven years of formal training and a period of professional experience to become worthy enough to be referred to as "doctor" or "executive secretary." The Dental School is an anomaly in the environment of professional education for other fields, as well.

Many people with dental school degrees serve as executive secretaries and blue collar workers as patients, in addition to the student as doctor beyond 4001 Spruce Street. Those patients may be referred to as doctor by the student's colleagues.

I have just depicted Urban Outfitters of Pennsylvania. When Murray Murray, as Mr., Mrs., or Miss so and so, and car-

The JAPpy women in his class "campaigned" for a new shopping center in (less) big city. The Bloomingdale shoppers. Would you want to hear a dentist use the word "JAP" when he seeks from us to promote a professional environment to facilitate optimal patient care and treatment for all patients. I believe the title doctor is appropriate for all patients.

I am also displeased with Mr. Goldberg's implication that we low class citizens only desire to be referred to by our first name, because they are poor. All patients, including those who are wealthy, are entitled to the title doctor. It is only respectful to use the title doctor when conversing in front of the patient. I tell Sieve that it's not nice to be addressed in the usual way. He will stay in my mind forever.
ATTENTION: Actuarial Science, Math; Statistics Majors

A.S. Hansen, Inc., a nationally recognized benefits and compensation consulting firm is hosting an OPEN HOUSE

March 17th, 6-8 PM
Faculty Club—Tea Room, 3rd Floor
Refreshments Served

Visit with our company representatives and discuss career opportunities in actuarial science and benefits/compensation consulting.

Morgan Stanley & Co., Incorporated

Cordially invites graduate students and undergraduates receiving degrees in Mathematics, Statistics, Engineering, Computer Science, Operations Research, Physics, Econometrics, Quantitative Financial Analysis or Related Fields to meet with individuals from the staff of our

Analytical Systems Group

To discuss positions involving

Quantitative Research and Mathematical Programming in the Securities Markets and Securities Trading Strategies

On Campus Interviews
Friday, March 21, 20
Please visit the Career Planning and Placement Office for details.
Captura the magic and the music of Ma seen at the Cotton Club and Blue — Now touring her show last musical revue sassy, brassy, classy, Crazy, and it tries to target its dollars to fund general research," he added. "There must be an overwhelming rationale for the denial to any research — research that is done for the general interest or outside a rationale could be conceived that I doubt that such a rationale and I think it is going to get some results," he said. In response to Steinberg's assertion that the military is one of the few agencies that have the ability to do long-term research, Central said it was "a sad commentary of the government as a whole if the only place one can get help for research is from the military." Steinberg responded, "you can't have the right to practice his field." Steinberg added, "I have never considered such a restrictive and I doubt that such an inadequate one call does it all!"
Missouri Monster mashes DP Sports

Widmer leads Sports Information to 42-34 victory at Palestra

By MARTIN DASS

The DP Sports’ Lobster Express 13 defeated the Missouri Monster, 34-42, at the Palestra last Saturday.

The Sports Information Department’s 42-34 victory over the Missouri Monster on Saturday was ahardt-fought battle.

Approximately 15 students yesterday discussed the problem of the Missouri Monster in their meeting.

The Missouri Monster, a team from the University of Missouri, is often referred to as a "powerhouse of basketball." However, yesterday’s game showed that they are not invincible.

The Missouri Monster was led by senior forward Matt Widmer, who scored 20 points and grabbed 10 rebounds.

On the other hand, the DP Sports’ Lobster Express 13 was led by junior guard John Smith, who scored 15 points and dished out 4 assists.

The game started off with a bang as both teams came out guns blazing. The Missouri Monster led 10-5 after the first 5 minutes, but the DP Sports’ Lobster Express 13 fought back to tie the game at 23 after the first half.

The second half was even more intense as both teams battled for supremacy. The Missouri Monster extended their lead to 10 points, but the DP Sports’ Lobster Express 13 refused to give up.

With less than 2 minutes left in the game, the DP Sports’ Lobster Express 13 was down by 6 points. However, they managed to pull off an incredible comeback and won the game 42-34.

"I’m just really happy that we were able to come back from such a big deficit," said John Smith. "It was a great win for us, and it shows that we are a team to be reckoned with."
University Departments and Student Organizations wishing to reserve Space for programs in Houston Hall and Irvine Auditorium should submit their request to the Facilities Office, Rm. 110A, Houston Hall by March 21, 1986.

Applications for Space are available in the Office of Student Life.

BOBBY JONES & BOBBY SOX.

Free sock hop with the Grease Band 76ers vs. the Cleveland Cavaliers
Friday, March 14, 7:30 p.m.

Let's go to the hoop, oh baby! It's a good old-fashioned Fifties dance concert after the Sixers stomp with the Cavaliers. First, basketball's old-fashioned Fifties dance concert after the Grease band makes you wanna Shout for the Fifties in a sock hop on the Spectrum floor. To the Sixers. Then the Sixers take you back to the Sixers! BOBBY SOX.

Fling preparations set for voyage

(Continued from page 5)

Hoop, Let's go to the Sixers!"

Applications than ever from vendors said the committee has received more Sutcliffe, a College senior. "People don't know what Spring Fling is, and we have to listen to these acts and narrow it down to about 30," said Entertainment Committee Chairperson Brian Entertainment for the Quakers He came to the Nationals which take place at a fairly early stage of things, finishing sixth. However, Penn's downfall occurred in the four weights below 150 pounds — decisioning Mike Edwards of Columbia, 7-0; and in the weight class, finishing sixth. The Quakers went winless. The right side of the schedule had some surprising results. The regular season's story of almost-but-not-quite efforts was reversed again in the eight weights at those weights. In several of them, the Penn wrestlers were within range of some of their bests.

As for next season, "There's going to be a shuffleboard deck on Locust Walk and a "Gopher" and "Isaac" will be a shuffleboard deck on Locust Walk. So we need tons of Jello," said Lam. "We start building a week or two before Fling," Committee Chair Malcolm Smith said. "We start a few weeks before Fling." With the season now over, the only expectation, only one Penn wrestler, 167-pound senior captain Andy Taitel, got as far as the top-six in his weight class.

Among the cornucopia of prizes awarded include food coupons. The committee is presently attempting to get Hershey's Chocolate to sponsor a "Gopher" He said he also has hopes of Chuck Lam said he also has hopes of "possibly having a prize that will give staff and stagehands to stage and sound equipment which has been donated by the Penn Union." The S.S. Fling will experience no changes — decisioning Mike Edwards of Columbia, 7-0; and in the weight class, finishing sixth. The Quakers went winless. The right side of the schedule had some surprising results. The regular season's story of almost-but-not-quite efforts was reversed again in the eight weights at those weights. In several of them, the Penn wrestlers were within range of some of their bests.

As for next season, "There's going to be a shuffleboard deck on Locust Walk and a "Gopher" and "Isaac" will be a shuffleboard deck on Locust Walk. So we need tons of Jello," said Lam. "We start building a week or two before Fling," Committee Chair Malcolm Smith said. "We start a few weeks before Fling." With the season now over, the only expectation, only one Penn wrestler, 167-pound senior captain Andy Taitel, got as far as the top-six in his weight class.

Among the cornucopia of prizes awarded include food coupons. The committee is presently attempting to get Hershey's Chocolate to sponsor a "Gopher" He said he also has hopes of "possibly having a prize that will give staff and stagehands to stage and sound equipment which has been donated by the Penn Union." The S.S. Fling will experience no changes — decisioning Mike Edwards of Columbia, 7-0; and in the weight class, finishing sixth. The Quakers went winless. The right side of the schedule had some surprising results. The regular season's story of almost-but-not-quite efforts was reversed again in the eight weights at those weights. In several of them, the Penn wrestlers were within range of some of their bests.

As for next season, "There's going to be a shuffleboard deck on Locust Walk and a "Gopher" and "Isaac" will be a shuffleboard deck on Locust Walk. So we need tons of Jello," said Lam. "We start building a week or two before Fling," Committee Chair Malcolm Smith said. "We start a few weeks before Fling." With the season now over, the only expectation, only one Penn wrestler, 167-pound senior captain Andy Taitel, got as far as the top-six in his weight class.

Among the cornucopia of prizes awarded include food coupons. The committee is presently attempting to get Hershey's Chocolate to sponsor a "Gopher" He said he also has hopes of "possibly having a prize that will give staff and stagehands to stage and sound equipment which has been donated by the Penn Union." The S.S. Fling will experience no changes — decisioning Mike Edwards of Columbia, 7-0; and in the weight class, finishing sixth. The Quakers went winless. The right side of the schedule had some surprising results. The regular season's story of almost-but-not-quite efforts was reversed again in the eight weights at those weights. In several of them, the Penn wrestlers were within range of some of their bests.

As for next season, "There's going to be a shuffleboard deck on Locust Walk and a "Gopher" and "Isaac" will be a shuffleboard deck on Locust Walk. So we need tons of Jello," said Lam. "We start building a week or two before Fling," Committee Chair Malcolm Smith said. "We start a few weeks before Fling." With the season now over, the only expectation, only one Penn wrestler, 167-pound senior captain Andy Taitel, got as far as the top-six in his weight class.

Among the cornucopia of prizes awarded include food coupons. The committee is presently attempting to get Hershey's Chocolate to sponsor a "Gopher" He said he also has hopes of "possibly having a prize that will give staff and stagehands to stage and sound equipment which has been donated by the Penn Union." The S.S. Fling will experience no changes — decisioning Mike Edwards of Columbia, 7-0; and in the weight class, finishing sixth. The Quakers went winless. The right side of the schedule had some surprising results. The regular season's story of almost-but-not-quite efforts was reversed again in the eight weights at those weights. In several of them, the Penn wrestlers were within range of some of their bests.

As for next season, "There's going to be a shuffleboard deck on Locust Walk and a "Gopher" and "Isaac" will be a shuffleboard deck on Locust Walk. So we need tons of Jello," said Lam. "We start building a week or two before Fling," Committee Chair Malcolm Smith said. "We start a few weeks before Fling." With the season now over, the only expectation, only one Penn wrestler, 167-pound senior captain Andy Taitel, got as far as the top-six in his weight class.

Among the cornucopia of prizes awarded include food coupons. The committee is presently attempting to get Hershey's Chocolate to sponsor a "Gopher" He said he also has hopes of "possibly having a prize that will give staff and stagehands to stage and sound equipment which has been donated by the Penn Union." The S.S. Fling will experience no changes — decisioning Mike Edwards of Columbia, 7-0; and in the weight class, finishing sixth. The Quakers went winless. The right side of the schedule had some surprising results. The regular season's story of almost-but-not-quite efforts was reversed again in the eight weights at those weights. In several of them, the Penn wrestlers were within range of some of their bests.

As for next season, "There's going to be a shuffleboard deck on Locust Walk and a "Gopher" and "Isaac" will be a shuffleboard deck on Locust Walk. So we need tons of Jello," said Lam. "We start building a week or two before Fling," Committee Chair Malcolm Smith said. "We start a few weeks before Fling." With the season now over, the only expectation, only one Penn wrestler, 167-pound senior captain Andy Taitel, got as far as the top-six in his weight class.

Among the cornucopia of prizes awarded include food coupons. The committee is presently attempting to get Hershey's Chocolate to sponsor a "Gopher" He said he also has hopes of "possibly having a prize that will give staff and stagehands to stage and sound equipment which has been donated by the Penn Union." The S.S. Fling will experience no changes — decisioning Mike Edwards of Columbia, 7-0; and in the weight class, finishing sixth. The Quakers went winless. The right side of the schedule had some surprising results. The regular season's story of almost-but-not-quite efforts was reversed again in the eight weights at those weights. In several of them, the Penn wrestlers were within range of some of their bests.

As for next season, "There's going to be a shuffleboard deck on Locust Walk and a "Gopher" and "Isaac" will be a shuffleboard deck on Locust Walk. So we need tons of Jello," said Lam. "We start building a week or two before Fling," Committee Chair Malcolm Smith said. "We start a few weeks before Fling." With the season now over, the only expectation, only one Penn wrestler, 167-pound senior captain Andy Taitel, got as far as the top-six in his weight class.

Among the cornucopia of prizes awarded include food coupons. The committee is presently attempting to get Hershey's Chocolate to sponsor a "Gopher" He said he also has hopes of "possibly having a prize that will give staff and stagehands to stage and sound equipment which has been donated by the Penn Union." The S.S. Fling will experience no changes — decisioning Mike Edwards of Columbia, 7-0; and in the weight class, finishing sixth. The Quakers went winless. The right side of the schedule had some surprising results. The regular season's story of almost-but-not-quite efforts was reversed again in the eight weights at those weights. In several of them, the Penn wrestlers were within range of some of their bests.
W. Cagers suffer through long season

(Continued from back page) while the other five got ample playing time. One of Penn's few bright spots was the strong play of the freshmen, and the experience that they received in practice.

"A very pleasant surprise," Ashley said. "They have great potential and enthusiasm, the way they worked. We're a refreshing group with great future." The future that now has to wait, will, in all likelihood, see the return of junior Cindy Rankin, who sat out the year with an injury.

"I'm sure we'll have a strong team next year," Ashley said. "We'll have a strong nucleus of seniors, and those two were invaluable to the Quakers while Slambaugh's shooting was on the fritz.

"Just don't feel comfortable at all," Ashley said. "We only don't have the talent to be serious contenders. We have a tough second round.

"Our basic problem," Stambaugh added, "was that we didn't put it all together. There's a certain amount of pressure need to win, and we didn't pull it off like the others." Ashley plans to pull it off, slowly but surely.

"In the past, you've seen that we can walk," Ashley said, "and we need to see that the past three years were merely a prelude. We'll go slow, get our confidence up, and then we'll be perfect. We'll struggle once in a while, but we'll get it turned around."

"This isn't a pipe dream," Fick added that from what we see this year, next season should be very successful for the Quakers.

"This isn't," Fick said, "we had the best talent that I've seen. We didn't prove it yet, but they will soon. We have a lot of quality personnel, and they'll surprise a lot of people and they'll surprise a lot of people."

"Our captain's will be a big loss," McDaniel said. "You'll just have to learn to play together next year.

Despite missing four games with an ankle injury, Stambaugh still managed to top out at 301 points for the season, putting his second season as Penn's starting leader scoring list with 1059 points for his career. She averaged 15.5 points per game and was Penn's high scorer in each of her two seasons at Penn. Ashley pointed out that Stambaugh was a team player who contributed to the defense, as well.

"As far as the future goes, we're jumping into the new college basketball era," Ashley said. "There will be more point guards and more outside shooting than ever before."

"Quakers have nowhere to go but up."

GEOFF

Quaker Oats

B — is basketball. But now it's time for lacrosse. The Penn men's lacrosse team is back in action. This past weekend, the Quakers fell to the Long Island University Blackbirds, 11-4, in a scrimmage. That loss followed a 12-7 triumph over the University of Cincinnati Bears, 12-7.

"I was very pleased with my team," Ashley said. "Seniors mean a lot in the Ivy League, and they'll surprise a lot of people and they'll surprise a lot of people."

"Losing our captain will be a big loss," Ashley added, "was that we didn't put it all together. There's a certain amount of pressure need to win, and we didn't pull it off like the others." Ashley plans to pull it off, slowly but surely.

"In the past, you've seen that we can walk," Ashley said, "and we need to see that the past three years were merely a prelude. We'll go slow, get our confidence up, and then we'll be perfect. We'll struggle once in a while, but we'll get it turned around."

"This isn't a pipe dream," Fick added that from what we see this year, next season should be very successful for the Quakers.

"This isn't," Fick said, "we had the best talent that I've seen. We didn't prove it yet, but they will soon. We have a lot of quality personnel, and they'll surprise a lot of people and they'll surprise a lot of people."

"Our captain's will be a big loss," McDaniel said. "You'll just have to learn to play together next year.

Despite missing four games with an ankle injury, Stambaugh still managed to top out at 301 points for the season, putting his second season as Penn's starting leader scoring list with 1059 points for his career. She averaged 15.5 points per game and was Penn's high scorer in each of her two seasons at Penn. Ashley pointed out that Stambaugh was a team player who contributed to the defense, as well.

"As far as the future goes, we're jumping into the new college basketball era," Ashley said. "There will be more point guards and more outside shooting than ever before."

"Quakers have nowhere to go but up."

GEOFF
Plummeting!

W. Cagers plunge to worst Ivy finish ever

By NEIL WEINBERGER

All good things must come to an end. Well, evidently, bad things end that way, too. Like the 1985-86 Pennsylvania women’s basketball season. It was a disappointment.

In fact, it was the worst ever.

The Quakers finished with the Ivy League’s lowest seed, No. 9, in 5-9 league games and 4-21 overall. And after losing Bev Ford, the Quakers had a very disappointing season.

"We started out okay," Filich said, "but we never reached our potential. We started losing early on, and we never got it together for the Ivy schedule."

But with the Ivy schedule came Temple, which might pose a threat in the final bracket, but the Quakers were able to pull out a win in the last round.

The 9-3 win over F.D.U. marked the closest that any team got to the Quakers. Penn had originally tied for second place in the Ivy League, but it was third place in the conference.

"It was what I had anticipated all along," senior Mary O’Neill said. "[Fairleigh Dickinson] gave us a fight for ninth place, broke Kris Kirlin’s time in the 1650, although good only for ninth place."

She swam lifetime-best times in both freestyle events. O’Neill also qualified for the NCAAs which will be at Princeton later this month.

"All of the relays did well," Filich said. "We knew we had to do well, and it’s easy to get excited because you’re swimming for the Ivy title."

Herein lies the reason for the disappointing performance by the Penn in the individual events. It is easy to focus on a concrete race. When the Quakers are racing in a relay, or when they are racing against another team, they have an object on which they can focus their attention. But when they are in the relays at the Ivy championships, they are magnifying both their first and second place.

The relays attest to this theory. With the outstanding times in the 200-yard freestyle and the 400 and 800-yard freestyle relays, which all set school records, Penn showed that it was a capable of turning out strong swimmers. But when it comes to the individual events, they did not fare as well.

One of the big questions that the Quakers had to answer was whether they were able to rebound from their consecutive, disappointing effort against Harvard. Penn was confident that they could come out on top again, but they were most worried about the team’s morale. It is a concern for many, if not for all, individuals, on and off, and it appears to have fallen into this trap.

The Quakers were capable of regenerating the intensity needed for such a high quality meet in the Easterns. Penn may have pulled too soon. In fact, the Quakers’ outlook, after Yale, (Continued on page 11)

W. Fencing captures Region 1-B Championship

Quakers defeat Fairleigh Dickinson in finals to capture second straight title

By WAYNE SALIT

This might sound like a broken record, but the Penn women’s fencing team went into a tournament expecting to come out on top — and, as usual, did just that.

The 3-0 win over F.D.U. marked the closest that any team got to the Quakers. Penn had originally tied for second place in the Ivy League, but it was third place in the conference.

"It was what I had anticipated all along," senior Mary O’Neill said. "[Fairleigh Dickinson] gave us a fight for ninth place, broke Kris Kirlin’s time in the 1650, although good only for ninth place."

She swam lifetime-best times in both freestyle events. O’Neill also qualified for the NCAAs which will be at Princeton later this month.

"All of the relays did well," Filich said. "We knew we had to do well, and it’s easy to get excited because you’re swimming for the Ivy title."

Herein lies the reason for the disappointing performance by the Penn in the individual events. It is easy to focus on a concrete race. When the Quakers are racing in a relay, or when they are racing against another team, they have an object on which they can focus their attention. But when they are in the relays at the Ivy championships, they are magnifying both their first and second place.

The relays attest to this theory. With the outstanding times in the 200-yard freestyle and the 400 and 800-yard freestyle relays, which all set school records, Penn showed that it was a capable of turning out strong swimmers. But when it comes to the individual events, they did not fare as well.

One of the big questions that the Quakers had to answer was whether they were able to rebound from their consecutive, disappointing effort against Harvard. Penn was confident that they could come out on top again, but they were most worried about the team’s morale. It is a concern for many, if not for all, individuals, on and off, and it appears to have fallen into this trap.

The Quakers were capable of regenerating the intensity needed for such a high quality meet in the Easterns. Penn may have pulled too soon. In fact, the Quakers’ outlook, after Yale, (Continued on page 11)

Disappointing days for W. Swimming

By JON WINSNER

"The way we were said we were [the gold didn’t want to be at the Easterns Championship]." Penn head coach Kathy Lawlor said.

Lawlor’s opinion seems justified, as the Quakers competed in the Mid-Atlantic/Southern Regional. They started strong, but ended up capturing the Region 1-B championship for the second season in a row. The Quakers lost their first two meets without letting any opponent win more than three bouts.

One of the big questions that the Quakers had to answer was whether they were able to rebound from their consecutive, disappointing effort against Harvard. Penn was confident that they could come out on top again, but they were most worried about the team’s morale. It is a concern for many, if not for all, individuals, on and off, and it appears to have fallen into this trap.

The Quakers were capable of regenerating the intensity needed for such a high quality meet in the Easterns. Penn may have pulled too soon. In fact, the Quakers’ outlook, after Yale, (Continued on page 11)

Penn places 14 out of 16 in EIWA’s High hopes shattered at Lehigh tournay

By EVAN SPIEGEL

Although some of the teams that the Penn wrestling team faced in the Eastern Intercollegiate Wrestling Association (EIWA) Regionals last weekend at Lehigh had beaten the Quakers previously this season, Penn hoped to turn the tide this season. High expectations were in existence, because on any given day... But it was not to be. Penn, scoring season-best performances to place high in the team standings, saw its high hopes come to an end on Saturday. Penn was upset by the 14th-place finish at Lehigh and lost the team’s high hopes in the Eastern Intercollegiate Wrestling Association (EIWA) Regionals, which are the first step to a berth in the NCAA Championships.

The Quakers were facing a tough task at the EIWA, as many of the teams in the tournament were nationally-ranked and others had exhibited their superiority over the Quakers in previous meetings. Moreover, the top-seeded teams in the tournament are the most difficult to defeat. The back of a Slate or Stanford might gives us problems, but I think we can win it."

The Quakers have defeated most of the eleven other teams that will be at Princeton — St. Joseph’s, Villanova, Lehigh, Pennsylvania, etc. — so they have some high expectations for the future. But the Regional was held in our own gym, and we beat several of the schools that will be there."

"We really want to do as the Regional is quality, so we’re going to be able to beat some of them, but I don’t think that we’ll be top seed at the NCAAs. I don’t know that, I expect it."

Double Teamed

Penn’s Bruce Lefkowitz (second from left) grapples with his teammate Bruce Lefkowitz (left) for a rebound. Columbia’s Paul Lee (11) and Columbia’s Paul Lee (11) try to get a hand on the ball in the Ivy League.

By Sam Hebel/Notes From Penn

(Continued on page 10)