Off-campus students face higher rents

The Office of Off-Campus Living estimates that over 7000 University students live off-campus in University City for a cost of about $450 a month.

Maye Morrison, over 7000 University students live off-campus, a student will not share a bedroom, they'll share common rooms.

DeRitis said he feels the increases are justified because of the renovations. "We've gone through substantial renovations," he said. "I like to live in a new bedroom, not in an old bedroom." Morrison said she is worried that students are not receiving more value from their landlords, despite their increased rent payments.

Morrison said that the rates for increasing off-campus rents is the damage inflicted on the apartments by the students. UCH owner Michael Karp said he feels the off-campus housing situation has undergone regimentation that the high rises have.

"Ironically enough, they're not paying a penalty for the damage inflicted on the apartments by the students," he said. "I think students have been moving off-campus, but they have not paid the price for their own overuse." Morrison added that students are not responsible for moving the high rises and that they are not responsible for cleaning the apartments.

Off-campus students face higher rents

The lifestyle has been sharing," she said. "Off campus, a student will not share a bedroom, they'll share common rooms. Campus Apartments is one of the largest realtors of undergraduate off-campus apartments. The company's general manager, Dan DeRitis, said student feedback indicates that off-campus living is less expensive than the dormitories. Nevertheless, DeRitis does not deny that off-campus rents are increasing.

"It's cheaper that living on campus," he said. "The average of Campus Apartments' off-campus rents goes from just under $200 per month to almost $300. Then, of course, we have some exclusive buildings where you can get a one bedroom apartment from $380 to $470." DeRitis explained that one reason for increasing off-campus rent is the improvement of properties.

"We've been through substantial renovation," he said. "If I were to live in something nice, and I feel that people who are the same..." Morrison said she is worried that students are not paying for the improvements. "I'm annoyed and angry at the prices increasing."

Change the Rules

For the third consecutive year, an alternate slate for Faculty Senate elections was submitted to the College of Arts. As if it sounds, the senate’s rules do not provide for yearly contested elections. Any system is must be changed.

A nominating committee selects members of the Senate Executive Committee who are nominated to be elected director. The recommendations of the nominating committee are then sent to the faculty members. Scientists of course, only 25 nominees are registered to nominate a challenge slate. It is inadvisable to make a challenge slate. It is inadvisable to make a challenge slate.

It is treatment that a challenge slate is easy to nominate — elections should be the rate, not the onerous. Proponents must be guaranteed a leadership role in the challenge slate.

Proponents of the current system claim that elections are fair and healthy. Faculty members are not satisfied with the candidate, they have no choice. The momentum is as automated as the system. In a challenge slate, an estimate, be sure that you say it is only an estimate, be sure to think about your answers and the willingness to say anything. Be sure to think about what you are answering and the willingness to say anything. Be sure to think about what you are answering.

Nurse Says Series Helps Prolong Unfair Stereotypes

The most recent issue of the series "Letters to the Editor" has brought up your article about male nurses. I believe you have misunderstood the issue of the male nurse, and I think it is important to challenge the rest of the Penn community on this issue. I am writing to you as a student at the University.

Termed 'Racists' Due to Attitudes

To the Editor:

Elizabeth Hamilton's letter (DP, February 19th, '86) ring true for the attitude toward you if you don't talk about it, don't vote, don't do anything. Your support, Ms. Hamilton, is crucial to our struggle in the reporting of crime and violence to the community.

The truth is everyone practices a degree of stereotype in her behavior. Even the concept of stereotyping is a form of rationalization: that minority have to judge other people as individuals should be born to the children of "whites." Unfair reporting is not a form of rationalization. The facts are that this letter to the editor is not a representative. In your letter, you claim that your argument is based on your personal experience. In my experience, what I hear is repeatedly expressed as racism, and that is why I consider yourself a racist.

Student Deceives Questions Asked in Tibet Contest

To the Editor:

The Black History Month Tribunal in Tibet has been highlighted by the recent public portrayal of a student who, in an effort to gain entry into the contest, misrepresented the identity of the Chinese government. This student was identified as a Chinese government official, and as a result, was disqualified from the contest.

To the Editor:

I am pleased to see that the recent Black History Month Tribunal has brought attention to the issue of misrepresentation. As a member of the Tribunal, I believe that the Black History Month Tribunal has done an excellent job in ensuring that all participants are accurately represented. In fact, the Tribunal has provided a valuable service to the community by holding those who have misrepresented facts accountable for their actions.

Separatism, LGAP and 'Militant' Jews

By David DeCian

During the past seven weeks, the editorial pages of the DP have carried several anti-Semitic articles, which have been offensive. We believe that these articles have been used to stir up hatred and generate fear. Consequently, we are writing to you to express our concern about the current state of affairs on the campus.

To begin with, I suggest Michael DeCian's article (DP, February 19th, '86) is willfully chauvinistic, since there are few true sympathizers towards men! I believe Michael DeCian is inaccurate in his assessment of the situation. In particular, I believe that his article contains an unfair stereotype of male nurses. I also believe that the article is inaccurate in its assessment of the situation.

Treated I was heterosexual (or ‘straight’) I believe is the term I was and watching ‘Charlie’s Angels’...

why Penn has both a black and white Student Coalition Against Papel? I always thought strength came from diversity. I was shocked to learn that several members of the black community had been refused membership in the Student Coalition Against Papel. I believe that this is a violation of the principles on which Penn was founded.

I was also surprised to discover that the Student Coalition Against Papel has been involved in several controversial acts, including the burning of a book and the distribution of flyers.

I realize that this is a sensitive issue, but I believe it is important to bring this to the attention of the Penn community. I believe that it is important to foster a spirit of unity and cooperation among all students, regardless of race.

I believe that Penn has a strong tradition of diversity and inclusion, and I hope that this spirit will continue.

I look forward to hearing your thoughts on this issue.

Young Quaker squad aims for both fun and success

BYJON WINKER

Even though the Quakers' swimming team finished out of the money in their last meet at the Eastern Championships, Head Coach Wayne Martin said the team could be concerned with their own race. "Not even in. They have been in."

"I'm very consistent and very competitive," freshman Wayne Pess said. "I expect to win every swim." Pess is ending up on the 11 swimmers, while top teams such as Harvard and Penn win 16. Because a finish anywhere from first to 18th will make points, the team with the most consistent swimmers has the best chance of winning points. The Quakers' swim meet is just another favorite. Princeton's only chance to upset Harvard. "Our swimmers are consistent. They have won many meets, which could make the outcome better." One of the Quakers' biggest advantages will be top diver David Cooper. Cooper is looking to improve on his previous Eastern Championships at which he participated poorly. Yes, Cooper is coming off of a disappointing meet against Harvard, where he qualified for the NACAA pre- season meet, so he is confident in his abilities. "I work hard on the divet, and I feel comfortable on the board."

"I will have full competition from right off the blocks. But I will still perform well. I feel that I have a good chance to do well."

"I'd be really pleased if I finished third through fifth on the low board, but I'd like to make the final. I think one through fifth on the high board. The chance of getting into the final is that I didn't swim as hard as I could and get cold and not win the 50 meter."

Secluded, the Quakers have a problem. Not many swimmers want to come. The owners who are racing will score points. Head Coach, Matt is ending up on the 11 swimmers, while top teams such as Harvard and Penn win 16. Because a finish anywhere from first to 18th will make points, the team with the most consistent swimmers has the best chance of winning points.

The Quakers are hopeful that junior Mike Martino can help out the Quakers. Martino finished third in the 1500 meter breaststroke last year, but he is front row to produce a similar outcome. "The competition is tougher this year," Martino said. "Richards, who is 14th in the world, would be last year, and he's back. It's Justin Van Zandt. Also, there is a freshman at Harvard who's really tough."

Well, although the Quakers are losing in the 350 and 500 yard freestyle and backstroke in the 200 and butterfly, Penn will have two swimmers with a good chance to win.

A good opening day is essential for the Quakers. "It's very key to have good performances the first day, to get everyone hyped," Martin said.

SPRING - it is the time we can smell S. And we are in heaven. But last night on Franklin Field, the men's varsity team defeated Towson State of D.C. in a scrimmage. The Quakers will travel to go number-one North Carolina this Saturday on Widener Field. 3:00 p.m. (This is it) for our HOME TEAM.

TRAINING - means trouble. The team was up early for the Penn track meet Friday morning at Ongal Beach, Fl, where the Quakers take on the Tigers of Florida State.

As a result, the Quakers will be very well rested for the weekend. They are in a position to capture the headlines this weekend, they are in a position to capture the headlines this weekend.
Penn diver clicks at just right time

By ANNE MARBILL

Penn was faced with the prospect of losing two of its best divers February 22, for the last two of the Quakers' season were being "emotionally up and down."

Trenton State College, Penn coach Janet Cantwell described the Quakers' season as being "emotionally up and down." It was no testament to the Nassau men's women's swimming and diving team, which was the only team competing from the state that weekend. A Trenton State swimmer won all three events in the meet. Penn's freshman Maria Grecky said, "competing and travelling four days in a row was tiring but it was worth it."
